951a. —— ——.]—Relators were trustees of two wills, & as such owned lands abutting upon a certain road in the Metropolitan Borough of W. By notices dated Feb. 14, 1928, the trustees were required to pay to defts. two sums amounting to £1,473 11*s.* 2*d.*, being the estimated expenses of making up as a new street certain portions of the road upon which their lands respectively abutted. The A.-G. claimed a declaration that those portions of the road were highways repairable by the inhabitants at large, & relators as co-pltfs. claimed a declaration that those portions of the road were not "new streets" within Metropolis Management Acts, 1855 & 1862. Defts. contended that the road in question had not been dedicated to the public before Mar. 20, 1836, & was therefore not repairable by them. Further, they said that each of the portions of the road was in fact & in law a "new street" within Metropolis Management Acts, & that neither they nor their predecessors had at any time taken into charge or assumed the maintenance of the paving or roadway of the street of which the said portions of the road formed part :—Held : (1) on the evidence there was nothing

In 1924 it became necessary to repair the walls & roof of the tunnel:—Held: (1) the walls & roof of the tunnel either formed part of the highway or were necessary for its maintenance, & the costs of their repair were costs within Local Govt. 1146a. —— Removal of footway.]—A municipal corpn., in exercise of its powers as highway authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 149, widened a narrow street in the town by entirely removing a raised & kerbed footway on one side, & throwing its site into the carriage-way without any notice to or consent of the owner of the adjoining house & premises, who was also owner of one-half of the soil of the road. The owner brought an action in the county ct. for a mandatory order to restore the footway, & for damages for injury to his property. It was proved that the access to & egress from the property through doors in a garden wall was rendered inconvenient & dangerous by the removal of the footway, & the county ct. judge granted a mandatory injunction to defts. to restore the footway to a width of 1 ft. less than before:—Held: the county ct. judge had rightly directed himself in law, & there was evidence upon which he was entitled to find that the action of defts. in removing the footway was unreasonable & arbitrary, & it was not sufficient for the action to be bonâ fide; & the order was properly made.—HOWARD-FLANDERS v. MALDON CORPN. —— Obstruction during construction of new road.]—A corpn., in making a new road connecting two existing roads in the same straight line with a bridge across a ravine dividing them, pulled down an old wall which closed a cul de sac in which one of the roads terminated, partly constructed the new road & erected a wooden fence at the end, beyond which was the ravine. Pltf. drove his car after dark down a public road leading straight into the new road under construction, & not seeing the fence in time, which had no red lamp or other warning of danger upon it, & was not watched, drove through it & fell with his car into the ravine, sustaining serious personal injury & damage to the car:—Held: the corpn. being in occupation of the land under construction as a new road, pltf. was not a trespasser upon private property, but an invitee, to whom they owed a duty to warn of any hidden danger; the unlighted fence was in the circumstances a concealed trap, &, pltf. not being guilty of contributory negligence, defts. were liable to him in damages for negligence.—OLDHAM v. SHEFFIELD CORPN. —— Trench dug in unfinished road.]—Defts. in execution of a housing scheme were laying out a new road running eastwards from a certain highway & closed at its eastern end by a quickset hedge. Footpaths had already been laid out & edged with kerbstones; houses were being built on the northern side & heaps of earth & building materials made the footpath on this side impassable; the footpath on the south side was still unfinished, but was traversable; it was bounded by a fence of wooden posts & bars; the middle of the road was levelled but not metalled; across it, for laying an electric cable, defts. had cut a trench which they left unfenced & by night unlighted. They did not prevent persons, whether intending occupiers of houses or others, from walking down the new road. Pltf. on a Sept. evening, while there was still daylight, walked with a companion down the highway & into the new road along the southern footpath. Through a gap in the fence they went across other land occupied by defts. to a golf course. They returned somewhat hurriedly when it was growing dark, & pltf. fell into the trench & was injured:—Held: the trench being apparent to all, there was nothing in the nature of a concealed danger or trap, & defts were not liable to pltf., who was a mere licensee.—COLESHILL v. MANCHESTER CORPN., [1928] 1 K. o i. —— ——.]—A public road crossed a stream by a bridge. There was a fence between the road & the land adjoining it, erected by the proprietors of the latter. At a point immediately adjoining the bridge there was a gap, 15 feet wide, in the fence. A pedestrian, on a dark night, mistaking this gap for the road, walked through it & fell into the stream & was drowned. There was not any gate or other protection to guard the approaches to the bridge when swung. A horse belonging to pltf. broke away from the person in charge of him, escaped out upon the public road, & ran a distance of about two miles to the bridge, reaching it while the draw was open to allow a vessel to pass, & rushing into the gap was drowned:—Held: deft. municipality could not be made answerable for the loss of the horse.—STEINHOFF v. KENT CORPN. The place of crossing was in a dangerous condition, by reason of the tracks not being ballasted but simply resting upon exposed sleepers. The car was imprisoned there & run into by a street car, & pltfs. were injured & the car damaged:—Held: the city corpn. were liable since, although no obligation to repair existed, there was a trap or concealed danger.—JAMES v. TORONTO (1925), 57 O. It was also established that defenders had not failed in their duty with respect either to the construction & condition of the lamp, or to the precautions taken to ensure that it should remain alight during the hours of darkness:—Held: the standard of performance could not be absolute, but must be relative to the best available means of achieving exact performance. &, in the absence of evidence of any failure on the part of defenders to take every reasonable means of carrying out their statutory obligations, they fell to be assoilzied.—KEOGH v. EDINBURGH MAGISTRATES, [1926] S. The barricade & the pile of earth occupied so much of the sidewalk that a path only 18 inches wide was left behind the barricade for the use of pedestrians. Owing to ordinary rainfall & the moist character of the earth so piled up, there was a seepage of water carrying slimy particles of clay through the spaces between the planks resulting in the surface of the pathway becoming dangerously muddy & slippery. sn. Areas forming part of sidewalk—Left uncovered.]—On a dark night one of pltfs., wife of her co-pltf., stepped into an area, one of several, in the sidewalk of a street in a town & was injured. The areas were constructed as part of a building adjacent to the sidewalk & were for the benefit of the owners or tenants of the building. No authorisation by the town corpn. for the construction of the areas was shown, but it appeared that, since the year 1900, the corpn. had looked after the coverings of the areas, treating them as part of the sidewalk. Before the accident, the area into which pltf. stepped had been covered with a plank, but on the night of the accident it was uncovered :—Held : the town corpn., having knowledge of the condition, & having taken no steps to close the areas, or to see

Originally the top of the fireplug had been level with the pavement, but in consequence of the ordinary wearing away of the footpath the fireplug projected half an inch above the level of the pavement. The fireplug itself was in perfect repair. 1372a. —— —— Liability of water company.]—A water co., at the request & expense of the owner of a house, laid down a service pipe leading from their main under the street into the house, in which they placed a stop-cock for the purpose of regulating the supply of water. This stop-cock was protected by a cover or guard-box let into the pavement, which was provided with a lid or flap. Owing to the hinge of the lid or flap being out of repair, it projected above the pavement, & pltf. while passing along the street tripped over it & sustained injury. The apparatus could not be repaired without being removed, or removed without breaking up the pavement. The jury found that there was negligence on the part of those who were liable for the repair of the hinge:—Held: the co., who alone had power to break up the street for the purpose of repairing the guard-box, were responsible for its repair, & liable in respect of the injuries sustained by pltf.—CHAPMAN v. FYLDE WATERWORKS Co., [1894] 2 Q. Street traders—Licence—Application to renew—Duties of borough council.]—(1) The remedy by appeal to petty sessions given by London County Council (General Powers) Act, 1927 (c. xxii.), s. 35 (2), to a street trader who is aggrieved by the refusal of the renewal of his licence as a street trader is equally beneficial, convenient & effectual as mandamus would be. Mandamus will therefore not lie to a Metropolitan borough council to compel them to hear & determine a street trader's application for renewal of a licence.

(2) In deciding such applications, the council is an administrative body, not a judicial one; it may therefore properly take into account a report of a committee, & its decision will not be invalidated merely by the fact that some members taking part in it were not present at an earlier meeting when the applicant was heard.

1761a. Duty of local authority—On request to exercise statutory powers.] — A local authority, requested to carry out in a " street laid out but not dedicated " constructive works under its statutory powers, need not necessarily inquire into the title of those making the request. But it must, in considering whether compliance with the request will be a lawful exercise of the powers, have regard primarily to the physical conditions obtaining in the area of the proposed operations ; & those physical conditions will be one of the principal factors in determining whether relevant statutory definitions are complied with. This applies to powers conferred by either public general or private local statutes.—DAVIES v. RIPON CORPN., [1928] Ch. 884 ; 97 L. J. Ch. 479 ; 139 L. T. 636 ; 92 J. P. 153 ; 26 L. G. R. 530.

1775a. ——.]—Defts., who owned & used traction engines for the purposes of their business, drove two of these engines on a very hot day in July over a highway belonging to pltfs., who were the highway authority for the district. The highway, which had been constructed as a first class main road for the purpose of bearing traffic of all sorts, had a mexphalte surface. In passing along the most exposed part of the highway, the driving wheels of these engines sank into the road at a point where the surface was very soft, with the result that the road was damaged. Pltfs. thereupon brought an action against defts. to recover extraordinary expenses, pursuant to Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, as amended by Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12. They also claimed damages for wrongful abuse of the highway by defts. & for nuisance & negligence :—Held : as agricultural traffic, including heavy traction engines, was admittedly part of the ordinary traffic, & the weights in the present case were normal, no claim for excessive weight or for extraordinary traffic could arise under the Act of 1878 ; there was no excess whatever by defts. of the lawful use of the highway & no wrongful abuse of their rights of passing & repassing ; the injury to the highway was due to a peculiar & unique conjunction of heat & of atmospheric & other conditions ; defts.' vehicles did not constitute a nuisance, & there was no negligence on the part of defts.—EASTBOURNE COUNTY BOROUGH v. FULLER & SONS (1928), 93 J. Six months later he gave another certificate which referred to extraordinary expenses incurred partly before & partly after the date of the first certificate on a single road in one of the townships :—Held : the first certificate was good, &, with regard to expenses incurred before it was made, the period of six months limited by Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), s. 11, for recovering the amount began to run from the date of the first certificate.

The amount not having been paid, the council on Jan. 1, 1926, applied to a magistrate under sect. 116 (1) of the above Act of 1894 to fix the amount of the expenses & to make an order that no part of the structure should be let for occupation until after payment thereof. The magistrate dismissed the complaint on the ground that more than the period of six months limited by sect. 11 of the above Act of 1848 had elapsed between the time when the matter of the complaint arose & the date when the complaint was made :—Held : the six months' limitation of time applied to proceedings under sect. 116 (1) of the Act of 1894, & the time ran from the date of the demand, & the magistrate's decision must be affirmed.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. OWNER OF 14, LEE-STREET STEPNEY (1926), 135 L. In 1904 her husband became the tenant of a field to the south of & adjoining the house & land. The field fronted on E. road. In 1907 deft. purchased the field, but entered into a tenancy agreement letting it to her husband, & from that time the field & the house & land had been separately assessed by the local authority though in fact the tenancy agreement between deft. & her husband ceased to exist about 1918. In 1920 E. road was made up, the usual course being followed under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), ss. 150 & 257, with the result that pltfs. claimed a charge, for the admitted proportion due from deft. of the expenses incurred in making up E. road, on the whole of deft.'s property, including her house & grounds as well as the field, as fronting, adjoining or abutting on E. road :—Held : the house & grounds & the field must be considered as being one close, & as such the whole was liable to a charge for making up E. road as fronting, adjoining or abutting thereon.—ALTRINCHAM URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. O'BRIEN (1927), 91 J. 2351a. Action to recover expenses—Form of writ—Names & addresses of owners not known.]—Pltfs., being entitled under Public Health Acts to recover the expenses of making up a road from the owners of the lands abutting on the roadway & being unable to discover who some of those owners were, issued a writ against A., a known owner of some of the land, " & the owners of certain lands adjoining " the road " more particularly described in the indorsement " on the writ, " whose names & addresses are not known to pltfs." Upon the summons for directions pltfs. desired to amend the writ by adding after the word " owners " the words " at the time of the completion of the works referred to in the indorsement hereon," & they also asked for leave to effect substituted service on defts. so described by affixing copies of the writ on the respective premises : —Held : the writ, in not giving the names & addresses of defts. other than A., did not comply with the form of writ which had the basis of statutory authority & was prescribed by R. The trustees were owners of the land, & at the time of the provisional apportionment it was their intention to erect a Sunday school thereon communicating by a corridor with the chapel :—Held : the land was not exempt from expenses as a " place " or " premises " exclusively appropriated to religious worship within the above Acts, as the words " place " & " premises " refer to buildings only, & cannot include a piece of vacant land ; & there was no evidence on which it could be held that the land was within the curtilage of or formed part of the site of the chapel.—ILFORD CORPN. v. MALLINSON (1932), 147 L. 2439a. Sale by owner—Necessity for demand on purchaser—Limitation of action.]—Defts. being a local authority having duly made a final apportionment under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), s. 12, of the expenses of certain private street works, demanded in 1910 the amount thus apportioned from an owner of land abutting on the street thus made up. In 1927 the latter sold the land in question to pltf. without having satisfied defts.' demand, & pltf. then proceeded to erect houses on the land in respect of which he became entitled to a subsidy. Defts. thereupon claimed to set off against the subsidy the amount of their claim against the owners for the time being of the land in respect of the apportioned expenses, together with interest thereon :—Held : (1) although defts. might have lost their right to sue the original owner for the expenses they were not prevented from suing pltf. as a subsequent owner for the time being. A demand on such owner was necessary to complete the cause of action for such expenses & Stat. Limitations did not begin to run until such demand had been made; (2) on the footing that Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), s. 8, was applicable, that sect. did not apply to defeat a claim against pltf., the owner for the time being, because defts. had no present right to receive the sum set off from pltf. until he became owner & twelve years from that date had not elapsed.—DENNERLEY v. PRESTWICH URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1930] 1 K. 2447a. —— ——.]—An urban sanitary authority, acting under the Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), resolved to execute certain private street works in a street in their district, & to contribute a certain portion of the expenses thereof, & that in settling the apportionment of the balance of the expenses thereof, regard should be had to the greater or less degree of benefit to be derived from the works, by the premises of the frontagers, & they approved provisional apportionments on the frontagers which were duly served & deposited in accordance with the provisions of the Act. Two of the frontagers objected to the provisional apportionments on their premises, before justices, who expressed the opinion that the proposed works were not unnecessary; that the estimated expenses were not excessive; that the premises of the objectors should not be excluded from the apportionment; but they stated that they considered the proposed works were unreasonable in that it was not reasonable that the objectors should bear the whole of the amounts shown in their provisional apportionments. Accordingly they approved the plans, sections, specifications, & estimates of the urban sanitary authority, but quashed in part the apportionments on the objectors' premises, by reducing each of these two apportionments by £100. They confirmed the apportionments on the other frontagers: —Held : the justices had sought to compel the urban sanitary authority to increase their contribution at the risk alternatively of sacrificing the scheme as a whole. It was not within the province of the justices, directly or indirectly, to compel the urban sanitary authority to make a larger contribution than that which they had already agreed to grant.

Upon the further consideration of the case, the justices must adopt one of three courses: increase the apportionments on the other frontagers to satisfy the balance of £200; quash the whole of the apportionment; or adjourn the matter, giving the urban sanitary authority the opportunity of considering whether they would pass a new resolution increasing their contribution by the £200 (per CUR.).—CHATHAM CORPN. v. WRIGHT (1929), 142 L. T. 431; 94 J. P. 43; 28 L. G. R. 4, D. C.

2449a. Time fixed by order—Reasonable time—What must be considered.]—Under sects. 33, 34 of Cardiff Corpn. Act, 1884, the corpn. made an order that a street, not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, should be paved, kerbed, etc., within two months. The estimate & plan deposited in accordance with sect. 33 of the Act showed that under part of the street a sewer was to be laid by the corpn. while the work was being done, & the order showed that some of the frontagers were required to connect the works which they were required to do with the new sewer. Certain frontagers did not comply with the order, & the work was done by the corpn., &, after service of notice of apportionment of the expense of the work & demand for payment, the corpn. applied to the ct. by originating summons, for a declaration that the proper proportion of the costs of the work, with interest to date of payment, was a charge upon the premises of those frontagers, in accordance with sect. 54 of the Act :—Held : the time fixed by the order was not, in the circumstances, unreasonable; nor was there any evidence to establish that if the frontagers had done the work themselves the corpn. would have hampered them by laying the sewer simultaneously with their work. The frontagers were entitled to comply with the order & to restrain any interference with them in doing so, but not having so complied, they were liable for the expense of the work being done for them & the corpn. were entitled to the relief claimed.—CARDIFF CORPN. v. CARDIFF PURE ICE & COLD STORAGE CO., LTD. 2466a. —— Powers of magistrate.]—B. Corpn. proposed to execute certain private street works under Birmingham Corpn. (Consolidation) Act, 1883, ss. 46–50, which were substantially identical with Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57). The corpn. duly complied with the formalities required & made a provisional apportionment on resps., the frontagers on the street, according to their respective frontages. Resps. objected that the works were unnecessary. On the hearing of this objection resps. called no evidence. The stipendiary magistrate held that some works were necessary, but was of opinion that the estimated expenses were too heavy. He reduced the estimate & ordered that one resp. should pay one-half & each other resp. two-thirds of the respective sums named in the provisional apportionment:—Held: inasmuch as the corpn. had not resolved that the apportionment should be on any basis other than frontage, the stipendiary magistrate could not direct an apportionment on any other basis. Subject to that limitation, he must consider & determine, upon evidence, whether the proposed works were in any, & what, respect unnecessary, & must have regard to any alternative proposals, if resps. made any & supported them by evidence, & to the cost thereof.—BIRMINGHAM CORPN. v. MOTHER-GENERAL OF CONVENT OF SISTERS OF CHARITY OF ST. 2580a. —— Conversion of two shops into one.]—Defts., who had purchased two houses with the shops on the ground floors projecting towards the street on which the premises fronted a few feet beyond the exterior walls of the two upper floors, submitted to the local authority plans of some proposed alterations. These consisted in the main in the conversion of the two shops into one continuous shop with a single entrance from the street in a new position. The local authority took the view that the proposed alterations amounted to taking down the front of the premises for the purpose of rebuilding, so as to entitle them to prescribe a new building line under the Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 155. They therefore refused to approve the plans & called on defts. to set the ground floor front back to

sx. Statutory liability of City—Non-fulfilment—Validity of subsequent statute imposing liability on frontagers.]—By a Quebec statute of 1910 the City of Montreal within six months was to macadamise certain streets, including S. Street, in a township thereby annexed to the City, but later statutes postponed until May, 1925, the date for completing the work. In 1910 the City had no power to charge the cost of paving streets against the frontagers, but statutes of 1911 & 1914 gave the City that power in the case of permanent paving. In July, 1925, the City passed a resolution that S. Street, which had not been macadamised, should be permanently paved & that the frontagers thereon should be taxed in respect of the cost. Accordingly, S. Street was permanently paved with asphalt. In 1928 resps., as frontagers, were assessed to tax under a statute of that year, which provided that the cost of all pavings laid since Jan. 1, 1919, should be charged to the frontagers at a specified rate. All the statutes above mentioned were enacted as amendments of the City's statutory charter of 1899:—Held: having regard to the specific terms of the statute of 1928 it applied to S. Street, notwithstanding the unfulfilled obligations of the City under the statute of 1910, & accordingly the assessment was valid.—MONTREAL (CITY) v. MONTREAL INDUSTRIAL LAND CO., LTD., [1932] A. 2592c. "New erection"—What amounts to.]—Held: the object of Public Health Act, 1925 (c. 71), s. 33, is to facilitate the widening of streets by enabling local authorities to prescribe an improvement line to which buildings will eventually be set back, & it is contemplated that the authorities will for that purpose then exercise the power conferred on them by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 154, of purchasing premises. In order not to increase the burden of compensation which the exercise of that power involves, Public Health Act, 1925 (c. 71), s. 33 (5), enacts that no new erection can be placed on the street side of the improvement line. Resps.' shop had in 1908 been moved back, leaving a paved forecourt in front of the shop so moved back upon which they used to expose their goods. After an improvement line had been prescribed in 1927, resps. again enclosed the forecourt into the shop, bringing the shop front back to its old level, which was beyond and on the street side of the improvement line:—Held: this was a "new . . . erection" within sect. 33 (5).—SITTINGBOURNE URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. LIPTON, LTD., [1931] 1 K. 2644a. Agreement to maintain bridge over canal—Extent of duty—Tow-path raised to avoid flooding—Whether council bound to raise bridge.]—The construction of a canal involved the interception of a certain public road; & the canal co., in accordance with its statutory obligations, carried the road over the canal by means of a bridge. The canal subsequently became vested in a railway co., who were required under sect. 17 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873 (c. 48), to keep the canal open & navigable. At a later date the railway co. entered into an agreement with the county council having jurisdiction in the locality under which the council agreed to remove the bridge & to construct a new bridge in substitution therefor; & the council covenanted that they would "from time to time & at all times thereafter well & sufficiently maintain & repair the new bridge & the roadway & footpaths upon the same & the approaches thereto." The agreement provided for a headway of six feet between the arch of the new bridge & the towing-path passing under it. The bridge & the neighbouring part of the canal for considerable distances on both sides of the bridge were in a mining area which had been subsiding for a long time prior to the agreement; & within sixteen years thereafter, owing to further subsidences, there was a general sinking of the bridge & the towing path. As, however, the water level remained the same, the railway co. found it necessary, in order to avoid flooding, to raise the towing path, the resulting effect being that the headway between the bridge & the towing path was reduced to four feet six inches, which was insufficient for the convenient working of the canal:—Held: the covenant on the part of defts. to "maintain" the bridge did not impose upon them an obligation to raise the bridge so as to obtain the six feet of clearance for the use of the water way, even although pltfs. had found it necessary to raise the towing path.—GREAT WESTERN RY. v. MONMOUTHSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL (1929), 94 J. 2708a. Dock swing bridge—Liability for maintenance.]—Pltf. was injured by tripping over a nail projecting from the footway of a swing bridge which defts., the Port of London Authority, were under a statutory duty to maintain in repair, & which the public had a right to use only when it was not required to be swung open for dock traffic. The cause of the accident was the failure of defts. to maintain the footway in good condition. In an action for damages:—Held: the swing bridge was not a highway & defts. were not in the position of a surveyor of highways, & therefore defts. could not avoid liability on the ground of nonfeasance or on the ground that a surveyor of highways is not liable to pay damages to persons injured by his neglect of duty, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—GUILFOYLE v. PORT OF LONDON AUTHORITY, [1932] 1 K. 2719a. —— Damage by locomotive passing over bridge—Locomotive Act, 1861 (c. 70), s. 7.]—In respect of actual damage to a bridge, as distinguished from consequential loss, the liability to repair is imposed upon the owner of the locomotive if he has the charge of it at the material time, but if some person other than the owner has the charge of it, the liability is upon that person. 2766a. Liability of borough council—Bridge built since 1835—Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4.]—In 1882 seven streets were, in the course of the development of an estate, carried across a river on iron girder bridges. These streets subsequently became highways repairable by the inhabitants at large. An action was commenced by the A.-G. against the local authority for a declaration that they were liable to repair & keep in repair these seven bridges:—Held: having regard to the fact that the word "street," as defined by the above sect., includes, if this is not inconsistent with the context, any bridge, not being a county bridge, pltf. was entitled to the declaration.—A.-G. v. HORNSEY BOROUGH COUNCIL, [1927] 1 Ch. 331; 96 L. d i. —— ——.]—Upon an application to a county ct. judge for an order declaring a bridge about to be built across a stream to replace a bridge that had been carried away by a storm, to be a county bridge, the sole question was whether the bridge was or would be "of a greater length than 300 feet" within sect. 458 of the Municipal Act. Before the approaches on the west side of the bridge were constructed, the waters sometimes crossed the highway considerably west of a point 300 feet west of the eastern bank, & an embankment that far west was rendered necessary on account of the waters overflowing the highway & being then constructed, became part of the highway:—Held: the embankment was rendered necessary within the meaning of the Act & the bridge was therefore of greater length than 300 feet.—Re PICKERING & ONTARIO, [1930] 1 D. 453a. —— ——.]—The detail & strictness of proof of a marriage required in a criminal prosecution for bigamy is of a totally different standard from that required before a magistrate who is dealing with the question of the maintenance of a wife alleged to have been deserted. In civil cases, where there is evidence of the fact of a ceremony of marriage, followed by cohabitation of the parties, everything necessary for the validity of the marriage will be presumed in the absence of decisive evidence to the contrary, even though it may be necessary to presume the grant of a special licence. The burden of impeaching the factum of a marriage & the presumption of law semper præsumitur pro matrimonio, lies upon the impeaching party.

The fact that a marriage was solemnised without the licence or publication of banns required by sect. 3 of Marriage Act, 1924, does not make the marriage void or voidable.—WYLIE (OTHERWISE PATTON) v. PATTON, [1930] 1 W. t i. —— ——.]—In Dec. 1928, a woman brought an action of declarator of marriage against the representatives of a man who had died in Sept. of that year, averring that a marriage had been entered into between them by declaration de præsenti in Dec. 1922. It was proved that the parties had for many years prior to that date been on terms of intimate friendship, & that deceased had more than once proposed marriage to the pursuer. On Dec. 28, 1922, at an hotel at which the parties were staying, they stated in the presence of three witnesses that they accepted one another as husband & wife. A document attesting the marriage was signed by the parties & by the witnesses. The pursuer & the three witnesses to the document deponed that the interchange of consent was serious, & was intended to constitute marriage, & that no other person was present at the ceremony. On the other hand, a witness B. deponed that she was present during part of the ceremony, & that the proceedings were of the nature of a joke. At the date of this ceremony the deceased was seventy-six & the pursuer was about forty. The pursuer & one witness deponed that the parties occupied the same bedroom after the ceremony. The witness B. gave evidence to the contrary effect.

The parties did not take up residence together. The pursuer continued to carry on her profession as a teacher under her maiden name. Several witnesses deponed that deceased had subsequently introduced the pursuer to them as his wife. Other witnesses gave evidence that deceased had denied that he was married to the pursuer. Deceased died on Sept. 2, 1928, leaving about £20,000. In his will, made two days before his death, he left the pursuer a legacy of £200 under her maiden name :—Held : the exchange of serious matrimonial consent had been clearly established by the document & the evidence of the pursuer & the three witnesses thereto, & the subsequent conduct of the parties did not displace this conclusion.—DUNN v. DUNN'S TRUSTEES, [1930] S. Part III.—Personal Rights and Obligations arising from Marriage.

595a. —— Bankruptcy of husband.]—The bkpcy. of a husband who has entered into a separation deed is an answer to any claim for the payment of agreed sums under the deed, but does not convert his wife's agreement to live apart with an allowance into an agreement to live apart without maintenance. Her right to that maintenance is not in contract but is an incident of matrimonial status at common law. An agreement under a separation deed to receive an allowance merely suspends, but does not annul, that right, which revives as soon as the agreement is terminated by bkpcy., notwithstanding the receipt of a dividend. The dividend is not a transaction between husband & wife, but an incident in the bkpcy., & its receipt does not operate as a new bargain with the husband compounding the common law right of the wife. The separation agreement thus put an end to does not debar the wife from alleging the wilful neglect of the husband to provide reasonable maintenance for her within Summary Jurisdiction (Separation & Maintenance) Acts, 1895 to 1925.—DEWE v. DEWE, SNOWDON v. SNOWDON, [1928] P. 113; 97 L. 755a. Effect of remarriage.]—In 1916 a post-nuptial settlement by P. was executed with his trustees whereby it was agreed among other things that they should hold two-thirds of the settled fund upon trust to pay the income to the wife for her life. If she survived P. & married again she was to have the income of one-fifth for her life of the two-thirds during the subsequent coverture. Power to appoint the two-thirds was given to her by deed or will for the benefit of her children by the settlor, such power to cease on remarriage except as to the one-fifth, to the income of which she would still be entitled & without prejudice to any appointment she might previously have made otherwise than by precluding her from exercising on remarriage any power of revocation reserved to her so far as regarded that part of the two-thirds in which her interest then ceased. If she survived & remarried, the power to appoint new trustees conferred on her by the deed was to cease. There were four children of the marriage, all born before the execution of the deed. In 1919 the marriage was dissolved, & by a deed poll in 1922 the wife appointed the two-thirds to the four children of the marriage, reserving a power of revocation & new appointment. Shortly after she remarried. On a summons taken out by the trustees asking whether as from the remarriage they should pay her the income of the two-thirds or of one-fifth thereof, whether she was entitled to exercise the power of revocation & new appointment reserved by the deed poll, & whether she still retained the power to appoint new trustees: —Held : except in so far as the wife's power of appointment in future was concerned, her position under the deed was wholly unaffected by the remarriage she had contracted. —Re PILKINGTON'S SETTLEMENT, PILKINGTON v. WRIGHT (1923), 129 L. 1223a. —— Necessity for survivorship of wife.]—In the year 1876 a husband during the lifetime of his wife took out a policy on his life with an assurance co., whereby, after a recital that the assured " for the benefit of his wife " in pursuance of Married Women's Property Act, 1870 (c. 93), had proposed to the co. to effect an assurance on his own life for £500, in consideration of the payment of the premiums during the life of the assured, the co. covenanted that the property of the co. should be liable to pay to the exors., administrators & assigns of the assured the sum of £500. In 1918 the wife died, & in 1929 the husband died without having married again. In 1891 the husband was adjudicated bkpt. & obtained his discharge as from Apr. 14, 1899 :—Held : upon the true construction of the policy & Married Women's Property Act, 1870 (c. 93), s. 10, the interest in the policy moneys vested in the husband & upon his adjudication in the trustee in his bankruptcy subject to the trust in favour of his wife which enured for her benefit only if she survived her husband ; with the result that as she died before her husband & before the fund fell into possession, the policy moneys belonged & were payable to the trustee in bkpcy.

1226a. —— —— If living at his death—Cash value of policy sought to be taken by insured during life.]—A husband took out an insurance policy for £500 on his life, & by the terms of the policy the co. agreed to pay that sum to insured's wife, if she were living at his death, or in the event of her prior death to pay it to insured's exors., administrators & assigns. The policy contained a proviso that, if at the end of twenty years insured was still living, he should have the right to exercise any of six specified options. Insured being then still living, he exercised an option to receive the entire cash value of the policy with its share of accumulated profits & to discontinue the policy. A sum of £286 thus became payable. The co. were unwilling to pay over this sum except on the joint receipt of the husband & wife, & ultimately paid it into ct. : —Held : (1) the policy came within sect. 11 of the above Act, & created a trust in favour of the wife in certain events ; (2) insured must be taken to have exercised the option for the benefit of the trust ; (3) unless the husband & wife came to an agreement, the fund must be accumulated in ct. until it could be ascertained by the death of either party who was entitled to it.—Re FLEETWOOD'S POLICY, [1926] Ch. 48 ; 95 L. c i. —— Subsequent deed of gift by wife.]—Pltf., who was the former wife of deft. & the registered owner of a property known as the G. Hotel, sued to have a caveat registered by him discharged, on the ground that he had no interest in the property. The caveat was based upon the following document : "I hereby agree to give D. half of the property known as the G. Hotel, & to give him half the rent of the same from the present date, & he agrees to pay half of all debts against the above property up to date for the said half interest." The land had been purchased in 1902 by deft. in the name of pltf., his then wife. Upon that purchase & the erection & equipment of the hotel building he applied the proceeds of the sale of two quarter sections, one of which was in his name & the other in hers. They ran the hotel business together, until 1905, he acting as manager, she as cook & housekeeper. Having agreed to separate, they sold the furniture, & leased the hotel, & borrowed money on mtge. to help pay off the floating liabilities. The husband signed the mtge. as a joint covenantor, & the lease as a consenting party. Before leaving her he asked her to sign the memorandum above set out which she did without demur :—Held : an express trust existed in favour of deft. for one half of the estate in question.—REYNOLDS v. BETSON, [1931] 1 W. In Jan. 1924, the husband was ejected from the house, & he brought action against the wife for a declaration that his wife held the house as trustee for him. On the trial the husband stated that when he made the conveyance to his wife he did so on her undertaking that the members of her family would vacate the house, & this was never carried out :—Held : pltf. could not succeed, as the only claim he could set up would be that he had made a conveyance for a consideration that had failed, & his action would be either for specific performance or damages.—BODY v. BODY (1924), 34 B. After D.'s death, his widow became insane & was confined in a public hospital. Money was paid by the bank to the Public Trustee. Having been restored to sanity the widow redeposited in the bank what was left of the money to the joint credit of herself & two relatives :—Held : the money originally deposited belonged to D. & was placed to the credit of himself & wife as a means of conveniently managing the affairs of himself & his family; &, therefore, the presumption in favour of the right of his wife to what remained of the fund on his death was rebutted. —STADDER v. CANADIAN BANK COMMERCE, [1929] 3 D. 1489a. —— Settlement of insurance policies on life of husband.]—By a post-nuptial settlement made in pursuance of ante-nuptial articles, certain policies of insurance on the life of the husband were assigned to trustees upon trust to receive the money & pay the income to the wife during her life for her separate use, independently of any future husband whom she might marry. There was no restraint on anticipation. During the life of her first husband the wife made promissory notes in favour of pltf., & pltf., the first husband being still alive, brought an action claiming a charge on the policies :—Held : the trust for separate use did not arise till after the death of the husband, & as the contracts of a married woman can only be enforced against property which formed part of her separate estate at the date of the contract, the action could not be maintained. —KING v. LUCAS (1883), 23 Ch. These moneys were all collected by the husband & left by the wife in his hands to use as he saw fit, & he placed them in his own account & used them indifferently with his own. He had never rendered her an account of them, nor had she ever called on him to do so. They had lived together in amity since their marriage & he had maintained her. The wife testified that she had an arrangement with the husband under which said moneys were to remain her property, but the circumstances under which it was entered into were not disclosed, & its terms were indefinite :—Held : the moneys in question had become the husband's by way of gift from his wife. —PEAREN v. BLACK & ARMSTRONG, [1928] 3 D. 1800a. —— —— —— Proceedings instituted against wife.]—A husband took divorce proceedings against his wife on the ground of her adultery. She consulted a solr., who upon her instructions put in a defence denying the charge & briefed counsel to appear for her. At the hearing the wife failed to appear, & a decree was made against her dissolving the marriage on the grounds alleged in the petition. The wife's counsel applied for costs, but as no security for her costs had been obtained, no costs were granted. The wife's solr. brought an action in the K. B. Div. to recover the costs from the husband, on the ground of his wife's agency of necessity at common law. The judge found as a fact that the solr. had acted without negligence, honestly believing that the wife was innocent & that she would be successful in her defence: —Held: in those circumstances the wife had no authority to bind her husband, so as to make him liable for the costs of her defence to his petition for divorce.—ARNOLD & WEAVER v. AMARI, [1928] 1 K. 2039a. —— —— ——.]—By a deed of separation reciting that differences had arisen between a husband & a wife, it was agreed that the wife should during the life of the husband live separate & apart from him & free from his marital control & authority as if she were unmarried, & that the wife should retain as her separate property certain articles which, if she should die in the lifetime of the husband without having disposed of them, should devolve as if she had died possessed thereof intestate & a widow. The husband covenanted that he would during the life of the wife pay to her an annual sum of £600. The wife was also to be entitled to certain furniture & effects for the use of herself during her life. Throughout the deed the parties were referred to as "the husband" & "the wife" respectively. It was provided that if the husband & the wife should be reconciled to each other & return to cohabitation the deed should become void. The husband subsequently committed adultery & the wife obtained a decree dissolving the marriage. He then made default in paying the full annual sum provided for by the deed, & she brought an action to recover the arrears:—Held: the deed was not subject to any implied term that it should only operate so long as the marriage relation continued to exist between the parties, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—MAY v. MAY, [1929] 2 K. The statement of claim 2293a. .]—(1) Pltf. married deft. in 1893. In 1899 the parties separated under a deed of separation & thenceforward lived apart. By the deed of separation deft. covenanted to pay an annuity to pltf., & the deed also contained a covenant for further assurance. After the separation pltf. set up in business as a garage proprietor, & she subsequently converted this business into a private limited co. in which she held the majority of the shares & also was the chairman & managing director. In 1929 she saw in a churchyard near her husband's residence a tombstone on which was the following inscription: "In loving memory of Jennie the dearly beloved wife of W. R. Crawshay Ralston of the Bungalow, Valley. Died 20th May, 1916." Deft. was the W. R. Crawshay Ralston mentioned in the inscription & he had caused the inscription to be made. Pltf. brought an action against her husband for libel & also for a declaration that she was the lawful wife of deft.:—Held: though the inscription was capable of a defamatory meaning, pltf., by reason of Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75), s. 12, could not sue her husband on it, the action being for a tort & not for the protection & security of her separate property.

(2) If there were any doubt as to the validity of the marriage, in my opinion, an action at law in the K. B. Div. of the High Ct. is not the proper proceeding in which to have that matter determined. I think it would be necessary, if there were any doubt as to the validity of the marriage, to take proceedings under the Legitimacy Declaration Act, 1858 (c. 93) (MACNAUGHTEN, J.).—RALSTON v. RALSTON, [1930] 2 K. 2294a. For negligence—Injury sustained before marriage.]—Although by Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75), s. 12, a married woman has the same civil remedies for the protection & security of her own separate property as if it belonged to her as a feme sole, & by sect. 24 "property" includes a thing in action, nevertheless a right of action for a pure tort which accrued before the marriage of the parties is not a thing in action within sect. 24, & consequently such right is not part of the wife's separate property.

An unmarried woman sustained injuries through a man's negligent driving, & issued a writ against him claiming damages in respect thereof. Before the trial of the action she married him:—Held: her right of action was not such a thing in action as would become her separate property within the meaning of the Act, but was barred by the general disability of husband & wife to sue each other for a tort.—GOTTLIFFE v. EDELSTON, [1930] 2 K. For petitioner it was submitted that the memorandum of agreement relied upon was not a deed of separation, but merely an agreement for maintenance for a limited period. Even if it were a deed of separation, the wife was entitled to change her mind, & she had in fact shown a sincere desire to live together again with her husband, though her motive might have been the welfare of the children: —Held: the memorandum of agreement was a valid & binding & subsisting agreement to live separate & apart. The wife's proposal, not being made to restore the connubial relationship simpliciter, but merely so that she & her husband & the children should set up house together, was not a sincere desire that they should live together. 2518a. ——.]—A husband & wife intermarried in Feb. 1922, & continued to cohabit until July, 1927, when the wife left the husband. On Nov. 2, 1927, the wife petitioned for a divorce founded upon an act of sodomy alleged to have been committed on her by the husband in Mar. 1922, & alleged acts of cruelty consisting of (a) acts of shameless uncleanness & invitations to repeat them, & (b) ordinary acts of cruelty, such as acts of ill-temper & abuse.

At the trial the judge in summing up to the jury did not warn the jury against finding that the sodomy alleged had been committed on the uncorroborated evidence of the wife, who was an accomplice; nor did he clearly point out that before it could be held that there was cruelty as regards the sexual malpractices it must be shown that they caused danger to life, limb or health, bodily or mental, or a reasonable expectation of it. The jury's verdict was that sodomy had been committed as alleged; that the husband had been guilty of cruelty of the class (a), & that he had not been guilty of cruelty of class (b). The judge then made a decree nisi for dissolution of the marriage. On appeal:—Held: (1) the judge ought to have warned the jury that cogent evidence was required to overcome the presumption of innocence of sodomy, & that they should not convict on the wife's uncorroborated evidence; (2) the ct. must take notice of the fact that there had been condonation of the offence, even though the husband did not plead it; (3) the judge had misdirected the jury by saying that the sexual malpractices were cruelty in themselves, as there could not be legal cruelty without danger to life, limb, or health, physical or mental, or reasonable apprehension of it; & (4) instead of directing a new trial the ct. should dismiss the wife's petition.

(5) The wife having on the evidence been a consenting party to the act of sodomy alleged to have been committed it would be impossible for her to obtain a decree of divorce based solely on that act.

(6) The rules with regard to condonation & connivance as a bar to a decree for divorce were well established in the practice of the Ecclesiastical Cts. before the Act of 1857. In my judgment these rules apply to cases in which the ground alleged for divorce is sodomy (GREER, L.J.).—STATHAM v. STATHAM, [1929] P. 131; 98 L. J. P. 113; 140 L. T. 292; 45 T. L. 2813a. Petition for judicial separation—Whether petition brought only for collateral purpose.]—A wife petitioned for judicial separation from her husband, on the ground of his adultery. She needed no protection against interference from her husband, but she required orders for permanent maintenance & for custody. The judge, following his usual custom, asked petitioner why she prayed for judicial separation & not dissolution of the marriage. Petitioner stated that she did not wish her husband to marry the woman who had ruined her home :—Held : permanent maintenance & custody being, at any rate, a part of the purpose for which the suit was brought, petitioner had a right to a decree of judicial separation. The ct. had a discretion to refuse such a decree, but not an unlimited discretion, & that discretion must be exercised upon some legal ground, such as the absolute & discretionary bars & the ground that the suit was not brought bonâ fide, but only for some collateral purpose. It was not such a legal ground that the ct. thought it would be better that the relief to be granted should be dissolution, & not judicial separation.—BLANCHARD v. BLANCHARD (1928), 138 L. But where the wife's application is based upon a charge of desertion only, such a clause should not be inserted in the order, inasmuch as it prevents the continuance of desertion in strict law after the date of the order. In the present case the wife was granted a separation order on the ground of desertion, & the non-cohabitation clause was inserted in the order :—Held : the justices were entitled to find as they did, but were wrong in allowing the non-cohabitation clause to be included in the order. 3040a. Agreement not to sue for matrimonial offences prior to separation deed—Validity.]—By a separation deed executed by spouses who were then parties to a suit for judicial separation on the ground of the cruelty of the husband, it was agreed that neither of them should sue the other for any misconduct which had theretofore taken place, & the deed further stipulated that any offence that either of them had committed should be forgiven or condoned, & that in case either of them should take proceedings against the other in respect of any complaint thereafter arising no offence antecedent to the deed should be pleaded or alleged by either or be admissible in evidence. The wife subsequently sued the husband for dissolution of marriage on the ground of his adultery alleged to have been committed since the date of the deed. The husband traversed the allegation, & by his answer counter-charged the wife with adultery antecedent to the deed. The wife disputed the right of the husband to make the counter-charge, having regard to the deed. The husband contended that the provisions of the deed were against public policy, in that they provided for the withholding from the ct. matters material & necessary for its consideration by virtue of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 178 (3) :—Held : on a motion by the wife to strike out the allegation in the answer of the husband of her adultery, the deed was not against public policy, & it did not constitute any bargain between the parties to pervert the course of justice by withholding from the ct. any matter material for its consideration, & the agreement made by the deed being one honestly entered into was good, & it was no answer to it to say that if the intention of the parties had been to obtain a collusive divorce or to cloak the past, the deed could have had a dishonest & illegal operation.—L. v. L., [1931] P. 63 ; 100 L. 3069a. —— ——.]—A decree of a foreign ct. in a country where the parties were not domiciled, purporting to annul an English marriage at the instance of the wife on the sole ground of want of cohabitation, was consented to by the husband, & the wife subsequently went through a form of marriage with another man with whom she cohabited. The husband filed in this ct. a petition claiming dissolution of his marriage on the ground of the adultery constituted by cohabitation under the form of marriage last mentioned. It appeared that both the husband & the wife honestly believed at the time of the proceedings in the foreign ct. that those proceedings were competent & that their marriage was effectually dissolved :—Held : there was no guilty intention amounting to connivance on the part of the husband at the subsequent adultery of the wife, &, further, although the facts might technically raise the discretionary bar of conduct conducing on his part, the latter offence was in the circumstances present of a degree which justified the exercise of the discretion of the ct. in his favour.—CLAYTON v. CLAYTON & SHARMAN, [1932] P. 45 ; 101 L. 3077a. —— —— Petitioner in fear of co-respondent.]—In an undefended divorce petition by a husband it was admitted that he had spent many week-ends at his home under the same roof with his wife & co-resp. when the two latter were, to his knowledge, committing adultery ; & that before the husband filed his petition citing his wife's paramour as co-resp., he entered into a deed of separation which in terms permitted his wife to "reside at such places, & with such persons as she may from time to time think fit." The case was remitted from assizes to the Divorce Ct. on the question of connivance :—Held : there was a strong case for the husband being an accessory to his wife's adultery, but, though almost terrified to be under the same roof as co-resp., he resented & resisted as far as he dared the continuance of the adulterous relations. He did not encourage it. They defied him. He was not an accessory, & did not enter into the deed with the idea of consenting to his wife's living in adultery with co-resp. Decree nisi granted & papers sent to the King's former action, in which she, as pltf., claimed the same relief against the present pltf., but which was decided against her. 3135 ii. ——.]—"Collusion" is a species of statutory fraud on the ct., &, like "fraud," is incapable of exhaustive definition, & will ever be widened to prevent the mischief which the statute was intended to prevent. Collusion is possible in a good case, i.e. although the ct. is convinced that matrimonial misconduct was proved, yet if evidence of collusion, too gross & palpable to admit of being overlooked or explained, appeared, no decree should be made.

In the present case the ct., having concluded that there was an arrangement between the parties to obtain a divorce & as to the testimony which should be offered to support the claim therefor, & that the testimony given by the resp. was in accordance with this arrangement, & largely untrue, refused the decree, holding that, aside from the admission as to the arrangement, the appearances of collusion were too gross & palpable to admit of being overlooked or explained, & that the arrangement itself was clearly collusive.—SANBORN v. SANBORN, [1928] 1 D. PART XIII. SECT. 7, SUB-SECT. 4.—D. (a) ii.

3446 i. Principle on which court acts.]—There is nothing in Marriage Act, 1915, s. 131 (1), to indicate that the general rule is that the discretion of the ct. should be exercised against a petitioner who has himself been guilty of adultery, or that it should only be exercised in his favour in exceptional circumstances. The discretion of the ct., on the wording of the section, is quite open. If anything, the words would appear to indicate that ordinarily the decree nisi would be granted notwithstanding the adultery of the petitioner, but that in such a case the ct. is not bound to grant it. Under the section the ct. has an unfettered discretion, & it is neither desirable nor possible to lay down definite & rigid rules by which the ct. should be guided in all cases. The mere non-disclosure in his affidavit by a petitioner of the fact that he has during the marriage committed adultery is not a sufficient ground for refusing a decree nisi to which he would otherwise be entitled.—ADAMS v. ADAMS, [1928] V. L. R. 90; [1928] A. L. R. 89.—AUS.

3446 ii. ——.]—A ct. administering divorce jurisdiction in India has a discretion, where petitioner has been guilty of adultery during the marriage, to grant or refuse a decree for dissolution. This discretion is unfettered, but must not be exercised capriciously. The dicta of English judges laying down tests in this matter do not constitute rules or principles which in any way fetter cts. in India.—LILLY SWAINE v. DENNIS SWAINE (1932), I. L. 3449b. ——.]—The discretionary power of the ct. to grant a decree of divorce to a petitioner guilty of adultery is a regulated discretion which it is the duty of the ct. to reduce to method. The primary essential for the exercise of its power by the ct. is that there should be secured to it the means of knowledge of the material facts with reasonable certainty. With this end in view the fact that the exercise of the discretion is sought should appear on the face of the petition. There should be lodged along with the application for the certificate of a registrar that the proceedings are in order, preliminary to setting down, a statement of the matters in respect of which the exercise of the discretion is prayed & the grounds on which the petition in this behalf is based. The intervention of the King's Proctor following suppression of fact or presentment of falsehood by a petitioner in these matters is not the only safeguard for the observance of due procedure. A party to a divorce proceeding who is asking to have the discretion of the ct. favourably exercised & who in doing so acts in such a manner as to obstruct or divert the course of justice is guilty of a contempt of ct. & liable to its consequences. The multiplication of the tribunals in whom is vested the jurisdiction to decree divorce has rendered necessary a more precise procedure to secure the presentment to them of the facts in each case material to the exercise of the discretion &, if necessary, cases can then be adjourned for further consideration & the services of the King's Proctor made available. To formulate & limit with precision the grounds for the exercise of the discretion when the facts are once before the ct. is a practical impossibility; they cannot be rigidly defined but certain broad principles can be gathered from authority. The more strict & early view that two or at most three classes of cases only called for the exercise of the discretion savoured more of estoppel than of the powers of the ct. as defined by statute. Those two classes arose either when resp. had induced petitioner to believe in the death of resp. or when a petitioning wife had been forced by a resp. husband to lead an immoral life, & the question was treated as open whether condonation of petitioner's adultery constituted a third class. To-day these may be stated as guiding principles; a governing consideration is now the interest of the community at large in maintaining the sanctions of honest matrimony; a strong affirmative case is still necessary to justify the ct. in departing from the discretionary prohibition of relief to a guilty petitioner; it is manifestly contrary to law that a judicial discretion in favour of a litigant who has been guilty of adultery should be exercised when that course will probably encourage immorality: if the exercise is not unlikely to have that effect there is an argument against leniency. On the one hand condonation by a resp. of a petitioner's adultery is, though not so in the earlier time, admittedly now a ground for exercising the discretion; on the other hand, it is now a ground for refusing to exercise the discretion that the adultery of petitioner has in some serious degree conduced to that of resp. & conversely that a resp. should not escape the consequences of his or her proved adultery by putting forward similar acts of petitioner for which resp. was in any serious degree responsible. Further matters now considered are the interests of children, the position of a mother in whose care children are, & possible conditions as regards the future of the guilty parties. All these considerations are held to affect the interest of the community at large.—APTED v. APTED & BLISS, [1930] P. 246; 99 L. J. P. 73; 143 L. T. 353; 46 T. L. R. 456; 74 Sol. Jo. 338.

B. Indorsement of Notice to Appear
(Vol. XXVII., p. 375).

Add the following case :—

3635a. Form—Woman charged with adultery named in petition.]—(1) On a wife's petition for dissolution of marriage, which was undefended, a woman named in the petition as having committed adultery with the husband was ordered to pay costs.

(2) As the prayer in the petition contained a claim for costs against the woman named, in accordance with an instruction of the senior registrar, dated June 4, 1927, the notice indorsed on the copy of the petition served on the woman was in the form set out in Matrimonial Causes Rules, 1924, Appendix 1, in accordance with r. 2 of those rules, & the woman's name formed part of the title of the suit as resp.—DAVIS v. DAVIS & HELBING (1928), 138 L. PART XIII. SECT. 8, SUB-SECT. 2.

3511 sq. Non-disclosure of acts of adultery—Nor of circumstances in which respondent left petitioner—Effect of.]—A husband, who petitioned for divorce, on the ground of his wife's adultery, failed, in the affidavit in support of his petition, to disclose certain acts of adultery alleged by resp. against him, &, also, failed to disclose the circumstances in which resp. left him :—Held : the non-disclosure in the affidavit of these facts was, of itself, not a sufficient ground for dismissing the petition, but the petitioner should have been given an opportunity of explaining, if he were able, how the affidavit came to be drawn as it was.—MCKAY v. MCKAY, [1928] V. L. R. 6.—AUS.

3511 sr. — Right to cross-examine petitioner as to—Evidence in disproof not already given.]—Petitioner having failed to disclose, in his affidavit in support of his petition, acts of adultery alleged by his wife to have been committed by him, was cross-examined to show that he had committed such adultery : —Held : the witness, not having already given evidence in disproof of such alleged adultery, should not, by reason of Marriage Act, 1923, s. 8, have been asked such questions at that stage, unless previously warned that he was not bound to answer them. —MCKAY v. MCKAY, [1928] V. L. R. 6.—AUS.

3778a. Discontinuance by solicitor—Grounds for—Petitioner suing as poor person—Adultery induced by petitioner.]—This was a summons, adjourned into ct., by which the solrs. to whom the conduct of a poor person's divorce suit had been allocated by the Poor Persons' Committee of the Law Society sought to be relieved of their duty, with the approval of that committee. It was submitted on behalf of petitioner's solrs. that since the petition was filed in June 1929 there had been brought to their notice letters written by petitioner to his wife several years ago, which entitled them to discontinue to act. The registrar referred the summons to the judge, there being no precedent:—Held: the letters revealed had incited resp. to set up an adulterous intercourse & had not been disclaimed by petitioner. The order admitting the petitioner to sue as a poor person was discharged.—PINK v. PINK (1930), 142 L. T. 579; 46 T. L. R. 214; 74 Sol. Jo. 123.

4063a. 4189a. In suit for judicial separation—Before decree nisi.]—The provision of alimony pendente lite is a privilege of the wife for her subsistence during the litigation; & a wife who has obtained a decree of judicial separation is not entitled to an allotment of alimony pendente lite, unless she has obtained an order for it before the decree, although she may have commenced proceedings earlier in the suit to obtain it.—M. v. M., [1928] P. 123; 97 L. 4278a. —— —— When appeal lies.]—The principle that the ct. will provide for the wife's costs of a matrimonial suit originally arose from the fact that on her marriage her property passed to her husband, but it still obtains, though at the present day the question is whether as a litigant she has sufficient separate estate wherewith to pay the costs of a solr. The power of a registrar under Matrimonial Causes Rules, 1924, r. 91, to provide for the wife's costs is discretionary & not subject to review unless he has clearly proceeded on a basis which is wrong. He is entitled to take into consideration the capital & income of both parties & the nature & availability of it in arriving at a conclusion as to the "sufficient separate estate" of the wife within the rule. Among other matters the amount of an allowance under an existing deed of separation is a factor, although partly & primarily intended as an alimentary provision & not as a fund for defraying costs.—WILLIAMS v. WILLIAMS, [1929] P. 114; 98 L. J. P. 40; 140 L. T. 383; 45 T. L. R. 157; 73 Sol. Jo. 77.

4280a. —— ——.]—On a husband's petitioning for divorce on the ground of his wife's alleged adultery with a named co-resp., the paternity of a child being in dispute, the wife by her answer admitted the birth of the child, & she did not allege that petitioner was the father, but she denied adultery with co-resp. It was urged on behalf of petitioner that the pleadings showed that the wife had not a good ground for her defence so as to justify an order against her husband to secure her costs. In accordance with an offer made by petitioner an order was made for security to be given without payment into ct.—Re A. B.'s PETITION, [1928] P. 25; sub nom. S. v. S. & P., 97 L. J. sz. Pending appeal.]—The Ct. of Appeal of Saskatchewan has jurisdiction to make an order for the payment to a wife of interim alimony pending the disposition of her appeal from a decree nisi for divorce. Such an order should not be made where the wife has been found guilty of adultery, unless special circumstances are shown to exist in her favour. The better practice is for the wife to apply to the trial judge for the continuance of alimony pending the appeal; but if her application is made to the Ct. of Appeal it has the same power as the trial judge & the same right to exercise its discretion.—MILTON v. MILTON & COOK, [1930] 3 W. PART XIII. SECT. 10, SUB-SECT. 1.—C.

4325 i. What interrogatories allowed—Relating to charge of adultery.]—On an examination for discovery, in an action for judicial separation & alimony, deft. should not be required to answer questions intended to fasten responsibility on him for certain letters, where such letters tend to show that he has committed adultery.—LIGHTHEART v. LIGHTHEART (Sask.), [1926] 4 D. L. R. 885; [1926] 3 W. W. R. 494.—CAN.

4325 ii. —— ——.]—The interrogatories in question herein held to fall within the rule that the ct. should not order interrogatories in a petition for divorce where they can be material only in so far as they may tend to establish adultery.—BRAMMALL v. BRAMMALL (B. C.), [1929] 1 W. W. R. 800.—CAN.

n i. ——.]—In an action for divorce if there is evidence, not open to exception, of admissions of adultery by the principal respondent it is the duty of the ct. to act on the admissions, even though there is no other evidence to support them. The ct. will act upon such uncorroborated evidence only if convinced that the admissions were in fact made and were genuine.—MONAGHAN v. MONAGHAN, [1930] 2 W. W. R. 748; 4 D. L. R. 1025; revsd. on facts, [1931] 2 W. W. R. 1; 2 D. L. R. 934.—CAN.

s i. ——.]—Pltf. in a divorce action in Alberta is not a compellable witness; &, if the evidence adduced establishes his or her case & does not also prove anything which is an absolute defence or which gives the ct. a discretion to refuse the decree, the decree must be granted although pltf. has not attended in person at the trial & the action is an undefended one.—EMENY v. EMENY (Alta.), [1930] 1 D. L. R. 253; [1929] 3 W. W. R. 577; 24 Alta. L. R. 303.—CAN.

s ii. ——.]—It is incumbent on a petitioner for divorce, even in an undefended proceeding, to fully establish the case & reveal all material facts; & he may be required to attend personally at the hearing.—BAILEY v. BAILEY (Man.), [1929] 4 D. L. R. 1068; 1 W. W. R. 708.—CAN.

sy. Necessity for preponderance of evidence—Effect of declaration of no intention to remarry.]—In a divorce action the rule as to the preponderance of evidence in civil actions should not be weakened, but the evidence required to establish pltf.'s case should be, if anything, stronger & more preponderating than in other actions. Pltf. in a divorce action who proves a case entitling him to a divorce is not prejudiced or deprived of his right to the divorce because he declares that if he gets it he does not intend to remarry.—LEBOEUF v. LEBOEUF & GERMAIN, [1928] 2 D. L. R. 23; [1928] 1 W. W. R. 423; 23 Alta. L. R. 328.—CAN.

PART XIII. SECT. 11, SUB-SECT. 2.

4376 i. Whether formal proof essential—Suit for dissolution—Damages claimed against co-respondent.]—Where on a petition for divorce damages are claimed against co-resp. primâ facie proof of marriage, if not rebutted, is sufficient to meet the strictness of proof required in the criminal conversation phase of the proceedings.—KNIGHT v. KNIGHT & OWENS, [1925] 2 D. L. R. 467; [1925] 1 W. W. R. 824.—CAN.

PART XIII. SECT. 11, SUB-SECT. 3.—A.

4381 iii. ——.]—Sects. 51 & 52 of the Indian Divorce Act contain the law upon the question whether a resp. or co-resp. can give evidence against themselves of adultery.—BONHIEM v. KA TROLIMON (1929), I. L. R. 57 Calc. 1159.—IND.

sz. Whether respondent can be examined for discovery.]—MYRLOWYSZ v. MYRLOWYSZ, [1930] 3 W. W. R. 83; [1931] 1 D. L. R. 154.—CAN.

PART XIII. SECT. 11, SUB-SECT. 3.—B. (b).

4384 i. "Proceeding instituted in consequence of adultery"—Suit for nullity.]—In a suit for nullity petitioner may be compelled to answer questions tending to show that he has committed adultery.—W. v. W., [1926] S. A. S. R. 425.—AUS.

PART XIII. SECT. 11, SUB-SECT. 5.

h i. —— ——.]—In a suit by a husband for divorce, letters written by the wife to co-resp., but not delivered to him, are not made evidence of adultery admissible against co-resp. by Ceylon Evidence Ordinance, 1895, s. 9. The fact that co-resp.'s counsel has based questions in cross-examination upon the contents of the letters, which had properly been admitted as evidence against the wife, does not make the letters evidence against co-resp.—GABRIEL v. ELIATAMBY, [1926] A. C. 133; 95 L. J. P. C. 9; 134 L. T. 200.—CEYLON.

PART XIII. SECT. 12, SUB-SECT. 1.

sa. Discretion of Court of Appeal.]—In an undefended divorce action leave to adduce affidavit evidence of adultery may properly be granted when special circumstances are shown to exist, as when the essential witnesses reside outside the province & it is shown that pltf. is unable because of lack of means to pay the expenses of a commission or of obtaining their attendance at the trial. On an application for such leave each judge in Chambers has to exercise his own discretion, having regard to the relevant facts of the case before him. Where he declines to exercise that discretion, or acts on a wrong principle or on wrong grounds when exercising it, the Ct. of Appeal must bring its own discretion to bear on the question whether the leave should be granted or refused.—WOOD v. WOOD, [1931] 2 W. W. R. 190; revsg., [1931] 1 W. W. R. 112; 25 S. L. R. 172.—CAN.

PART XIII. SECT. 12, SUB-SECT. 2. —A.

4480 i. When parties abroad—Petitioner unable to afford commission.]—In view of the special circumstances of the present undefended action for divorce & the nature of the evidence sought to be adduced by the affidavits in question, held that the case was a proper one in which to allow pltf. to give affidavits evidence of adultery. The witnesses were all living in England & pltf. had not the means to enable her to secure their attendance or to meet the expense of obtaining their evidence by commission.—RICE v. RICE & PRESCOTT, [1929] 2 D. sc. Delay making impossible legitimation of child.]—In support of an application for leave to use as evidence an affidavit of a medical practitioner residing in Capetown testifying to deft.'s condition of pregnancy, it was urged that the delay which would be consequent upon having the evidence taken on commission might make impossible the legitimation of a child expected to be born to deft. in about three months' time :—Held : the affidavit be accepted as evidence.—HUSBAND v. WIFE, [1931] N. PART XIII. SECT. 13, SUB-SECT. 3.

4508 i. Witness out of the jurisdiction.]—Held : in an action of divorce under the provisions of Conjugal Rights (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1861, s. 13, & Evidence (Scotland) Act, 1866, s. 2, it was within the competence of the Lord Ordinary to grant a commission to examine witnesses in England, even though the evidence of these witnesses might, apart from the pursuer's own evidence, be substantially the whole evidence adduced in the case; &, in accordance with established practice, the poverty of the pursuer was per se a special cause within Evidence Act, 1866, s. 2, for granting such a commission.—LAWSON v. LAWSON, [1930] S. C. 18.—SCOT.

PART XIII. SECT. 16, SUB-SECT. 1. —B.

sr. Charge of adultery—General rule.]—Under Divorce & Matrimonial Causes Act, 1908, r. 52, where the relief sought in a defended cause is grounded upon adultery, there is no absolute right to either party to have the case tried before a jury, but there is a primary right to have the case set down for trial before a judge & jury. On an application "for trial otherwise" under the rule, if either party desires that the issue be tried before a jury, the ct. should, as a general rule, refuse to make an order for trial otherwise than before a jury.—ELLIOTT v. ELLIOTT, [1932] N. Z. L. R. 484.—N.Z.

st. —— Conduct conducing to.]—In a suit for divorce on the ground of adultery, the ct. has a discretion, under sect. 161 of Marriage Act, 1915, as to whether the issue raised by an allegation in resp.'s answer that petitioner was guilty of wilful neglect or misconduct conducing to the adultery should be tried by a jury.—LACK v. LACK, [1931] V. L. R. 72; Argus L. R. 21.—AUS.

sv. —— ——.]—In a suit for divorce on the ground of adultery, questions whether the petitioner connived at, or condoned, or was guilty of conduct which conduced to, the adultery alleged, are not "matters of fact in relation to" the charge of adultery within sect. 79 (3) of Marriage Act, 1928, & the parties are, therefore, not entitled as of right to have such questions submitted to a jury.—CLARKE v. CLARKE, [1931] V. L. R. 69; Argus L. R. 20.—AUS.

4640a. Cruelty.]—There is now no statutory right of a party to a matrimonial suit to insist on the trial of any issue of fact by a jury. On a petition by a husband seeking dissolution of marriage on the ground of the alleged adultery of resp. wife with the co-resp., resp. counter-charged petitioner with cruelty & prayed a judicial separation. An order having been made for the trial by a jury of the issue of adultery, the Ct. of Appeal refused to extend the order to include the issue of cruelty.—RUGG-GUNN v. RUGG-GUNN & ARCHER, [1931] P. 147; 100 L. 4763a. —— —— As res judicata.]—(1) A finding of adultery as a fact on which a decree nisi has proceeded is not res judicata, so that it cannot subsequently be questioned in the Divorce Div. in any event, nor is resort to the Ct. of Appeal the only means of reviewing it. The decree nisi resembles any other order nisi in that it proceeds merely upon the materials before the ct. at the time of its pronouncement & cause can be shown against it being made absolute. (2) The King's Proctor, not being a party to the suit as originally constituted, cannot resort to the Ct. of Appeal, but if he comes to the conclusion that the decree has been obtained contrary to the justice of the case he must intervene & show cause against making the decree absolute. For that purpose he may call fresh evidence to show that there has been no adultery notwithstanding the previous finding in the affirmative.—CHALMERS v. CHALMERS, [1930] P. 154; 99 L. J. P. 60; 142 L. T. 654; 46 T. L. R. 269; 74 Sol. Jo. 216.

4767a. —— Effect of—On status of parties.]—A decree for restitution of conjugal rights with the usual finding that the parties to the suit are husband & wife, though it may not directly affect their status, nevertheless proceeds upon the basis of their status being thus conclusively established inter partes. Resp. in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, who does not resist such a finding, cannot afterwards dispute the validity of the marriage of the parties. A subsequent suit for nullity of the marriage, in which bigamy is alleged to have been in fact committed by one of the parties to it, does not, after this finding of its validity as between them, afford any exception to the general rule of estoppel.—WOODLAND v. WOODLAND (OTHERWISE BELIN OR BARTON), [1928] P. 169; 97 L. J. P. 92; 139 L. T. 262; 44 T. L. R. 495; 72 Sol. Jo. 303.

4836a. —— Abortive trial—Discretion to make no order "at present."]—A husband filed a petition for divorce, alleging adultery by his wife with a co-resp. The wife filed a cross-petition for judicial separation, alleging adultery & cruelty on the part of the husband, to which he pleaded condonation. At the trial the jury disagreed as to the wife's adultery, & as to condonation by her, but signified, without returning a formal verdict, that they were prepared to find both adultery & cruelty on the part of the husband. The judge at the trial declined to enter any verdict. The Ct. of Appeal refused to do otherwise. On an application by the wife for her costs of the abortive trial, the judge refused to make any order at that stage in the proceedings:—Held: the refusal at that stage was a matter for the discretion of the judge, with which the Ct. of Appeal would not interfere.—WAUDBY v. WAUDBY & BOWLAND (1901), 84 L. which petition was originally undefended, her husband, by leave, filed an answer alleging adultery admitted by his wife as her reason for having her prayer struck out. The registrar refused to make an order for securing the wife's costs on the fact of the wife's admission being brought to his notice. At the trial of the suit on the husband's prayer the ct. granted the husband a decree nisi & made an order for the wife's costs " in the ordinary way." A difficulty arose in the interpretation of the order, inasmuch as the usual order for security had not been made :— Held : though solrs. acting for a wife must avail themselves of the rules in the divorce jurisdiction for securing payment of the wife's costs from the husband, in this case the husband, until his wife's admission of adultery, had desired the success of his wife's suit, & therefore the ct. directed, in the exercise of its discretion, that the husband must pay his wife's costs properly incurred up to service of the summons for leave to file an answer.—GODDARD v. GODDARD (1929), 140 L. 5360a. On lunacy of husband.]—The jurisdiction in lunacy to appoint a receiver of the estate of a person of unsound mind does not exclude other cts. from enforcing lawful claims against his estate, including claims arising in the Divorce Div. Although the primary duty of those concerned with the care of a person of unsound mind is to apply his estate for his maintenance, & there is power under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 171, to direct a settlement of the property of a lunatic or defective, the Divorce Div. is not thereby discharged from the duty of providing for the permanent maintenance of a petitioning wife out of the estate of a husband of unsound mind. When by an order in lunacy a provision has been directed for the wife during the lifetime of the husband & pending his incapacity, & the Divorce Div. approve the quantum of the order, the proper course, on application in that Div. by the wife for permanent maintenance, is to order it to be secured to her at the rate ordered in lunacy so far as the husband's means permit & without prejudice to any further order in lunacy, the security not to be enforceable pending subsistence of the order in lunacy, & should it subsist during the life of the husband not to be enforceable till his death.—C. In an undefended case, therefore, on allegations of unreasonable delay being made in the maintenance proceedings, sufficient evidence must be received to enable the ct. properly to determine whether the allegations are established &, if so, how if at all the conduct in question should affect the sum of money which the husband should be ordered to secure &/or to pay.—CHAPPLE v. CHAPPLE (1929), 98 L. A petitioner having obtained a decree absolute for nullity of marriage presented a petition under sect. 190 of the 1925 Act for permanent maintenance. Resp. in his reply made serious allegations of misconduct both before & after the marriage against petitioner. Petitioner filed an affidavit in which she dealt with the allegations of misconduct. The registrar refused leave to resp. to file a rejoinder & directed the allegations in the answer as to misconduct to be struck out. On appeal the judge confirmed the registrar's order & directed petitioner's affidavit in reply to be struck out. On appeal:—Held: the words "conduct of the parties" in sect. 190 (1) referred to the conduct of the parties both before & after the marriage, & in exercising its discretion under the sect. it was essential that the ct. should have before it all the relevant evidence of the conduct of the parties both before & after the marriage. Therefore, the order directing that the paragraphs in resp.'s answer containing the allegations of misconduct & the affidavit of petitioner in reply should be struck out must be set aside & leave would be given to resp. to file a rejoinder.—RESTALL v. RESTALL, [1930] P. 189; 99 L. 5382a. ———.]—Although the considerations which applied in the Ecclesiastical Cts. to awards of alimony must have due weight in determining the proper award of maintenance to a wife after a decree of divorce, the assumption of a fixed arithmetical rule & an indispensable process of applying that rule is erroneous, & disregards the duty imposed on the ct. by Jud. (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 190 (1) & (2). Where the husband's whole income has been expended on the requirements of the matrimonial home, a third of his means may well be required for the wife's maintenance; but where, beyond everything called for by such requirements, the husband possesses an ample fortune, the amount of his income affords no definite guidance as to the sum required to supply his sometime wife with the necessaries, comforts, & advantages incidental to her station in life.

Where the husband's gross income was £25,337 a year, derived mainly from his interest in a business concern, the registrar by his report submitted that the husband should be ordered to secure to his wife, who had divorced him, by way of permanent maintenance for her life, the annual sum of £3,500 less tax, & to pay to his wife during their joint lives the further annual sum of £500 less tax. The ct. confirmed the report.—GILBEY v. GILBEY, [1927] P. 197; 96 L. J. P. 55; 137 L. T. 31; 43 T. L. R. 283.

Petitioner, his former wife, had obtained an order for permanent maintenance of £400 a year & of £100 for her son, when resp.'s annual income was about £1,500. Subsequently, when resp.'s income, not taking into account the settlement, was about £4,500, petitioner applied for an increase in the amount of the order, on the ground that resp.'s means had increased. The registrar increased the order for permanent maintenance from £400 to £1,200 a year, less income tax, & from £100 to £150 a year, free of income tax, for the son:—Held: (1) resp.'s means had increased, as by sharing the advantages of the matrimonial home as of right settled upon his wife, a larger portion of the £1,500 unsettled income was left free to be dealt with by him & by the ct.; (2) the order could not be made disregarding the settlement, which subsisted; (3) an order for permanent maintenance, or an increase of it, should not be based on the income of the husband during a year of exceptional prosperity; (4) an order for permanent maintenance in such a case should not be based on the old practice of the Ecclesiastical Cts. in the case of a decree a mensâ et thoro, of granting to the wife one-third of the husband's available means, as the conditions arising from the two decrees were not the same, petitioner & resp. being divorced, & free to marry again; (5) in view of the increased means of the husband, having regard to the wife's fortune, the ability of the husband & the conduct of the parties, the order for permanent maintenance for the former wife should be increased from £400 a year to £750 a year, less income tax.—N. v. N. The jurisdiction is now embodied in the Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 190 (1), (2), & if an order for maintenance is limited "until further order," the ct. in reviewing it should regard all the present circumstances of the case as if they had existed at the date of the original order. It may consider not only the descending income of the husband but the ascending scale of that of the wife. Even in the absence of the limitation relevant facts as to the fortune of the wife may have weight in relation to the discretionary power to review, if occasion arises under sect. 190 (2), by reason of the inability of the husband to pay. The ct. does not derive its power to review an order for maintenance from sect. 196. Where after a lapse of eight years a husband resp. petitioned for a reduction in a consent order for maintenance, expressed to be made "unconditionally," the registrar refused to make an inquiry on the ground that he had no power to vary such an order, as it contained no such words of release. 5450. Add the following para. & citations:—On May 8, 1924, a wife obtained a decree nisi on the ground of her husband's adultery, which was made absolute on Nov. 24, 1924. On Dec. 22 the wife filed her petition for permanent maintenance, & on July 1, 1925, an interim order was made at the rate of £650 per annum for maintenance of the wife & her child. It appeared on the inquiry as to the husband's property that he had no capital other than chattels, but he was a sculptor who had been fortunate in obtaining work in connection with certain important war memorials, the payments for which had made his income up to £2,000 a year. There was no prospect of his continuing to earn nearly so large an income in the future. In July, 1925, before any final order for maintenance had been made, the husband assigned most of the moneys so owing to him to trustees of a settlement upon his second marriage, which he entered into on July 23, 1925. This settlement did not attempt wholly to defeat petitioner, for it set aside £1,500 to satisfy any order that might be made against him for maintenance during the following three years. On Nov. 18, 1925, the registrar made a final order for the payment of maintenance to the petitioner at the rate of £550 a year for petitioner & £100 for the child, & for security to be given by the husband for a further £150 a year for life. On cross-applications by petitioner that the security should be given for £250 a year, & to admit of this being done that the settlement by the husband on his second marriage should be set aside, & by the husband that no order should be made for security:—Held: by HILL, J., although the Divorce Ct. had power to restrain a resp. husband by injunction from parting with his own property in order to defeat the claims of the petitioning wife to alimony or permanent maintenance which the ct. had already ordered, it had no power to set aside an assignment of his property made by him in consideration of a second marriage, even if the result might be to defeat the claim of the petitioner to maintenance not yet actually ordered. Therefore, the marriage settlement could not be set aside, but that the order of the registrar must be varied by increasing the annual payment to £700 for the petitioner & by omitting the order on the husband to give security for £150. On appeal by petitioner:—Held: by the Ct. of Appeal, the order of HILL, J., must be affirmed, & it was a fatal objection to petitioner's application to set aside the settlement that neither the trustees nor the second wife were before the ct.—[1926] P. 93; 95 L. 5469a. —— What court should consider.]—(1) The ct. has no power to reserve liberty to apply for security in making an order for maintenance under Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 190 (1), (2), on a decree for divorce. The insertion of such a provision would permit the conversion at a subsequent date of an order to pay maintenance into an order to secure it, & this is ultra vires of the statute.

(2) In considering th e question of security which must thus be ordered in the first instance, if at all, the interests of both spouses are to be considered. The maintenance ordered will be secured as far as circumstances permit, but in cases where the nature of the means of the husband renders it impossible to secure the whole maintenance proper to be ordered, the question arises whether it is in the interest of the wife to order security of a part, as compulsion of the husband to realise or transfer assets in order to give security under sub-sect. (1) may hamper him in earning the income out of which he may be ordered to make payments under sub-sect. (2). The wife has no greater inherent right to security than to an order for payment simply. Her right is to present maintenance, & if the property of the husband produces no present income or if an order for security would for any reason, such as the husband's absence from the jurisdiction, be unenforceable, it is more in the wife's interest that an order for payments should be made than an order to secure.

(2) There is no fixed rule that the ct. will allow to the wife one-third of the husband's disposable income as permanent maintenance. It is no more than a rough working rule & does not impose an absolute limit. Further, in estimating the amount of the allowance the ct. must not focus its attention only on the disposable income of the husband in the year preceding the making of the order, but must have regard to his earnings in 5542a. To order settlement where wife not domiciled in England.]—(1) The property of a guilty wife, amenable, under Jud. (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 191, to the jurisdiction to order a settlement of it, is primâ facie the property of a woman in England & subject to English jurisdiction. That jurisdiction can be invoked against a person not domiciled in England, & in respect of property beyond the jurisdiction, only subject to the principle that English cts. will not infringe the authority of foreign tribunals in their domestic affairs, or adjudicate with regard to property when their judgment will be ineffective. Apart from jurisdiction over property, the exercise of jurisdiction in personam in such a case depends upon the question whether the party to be affected by it is within the reach of the compulsory process of the ct.

(2) The provisions of Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857 (c. 85), s. 42, for service out of the jurisdiction, apply to the service of the petition in a suit, & not to proceedings for a settlement.

(3) The practice with reference to appearance to a petition for a settlement is governed by Divorce Rules, rr. 71 & 72, & (4) an appearance under these rules, qualified during the proceedings upon it, by denial of the existence of jurisdiction, is not to be regarded as a submission to that jurisdiction.—TALLACK v. TALLACK & BROEKEMA, [1927] P. 211; 96 L. 5625b. —— ——.]—(1) In deciding whether a settlement comes within the meaning of "post-nuptial settlement" on the parties within the purview of Jud. Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 192, the material question is whether the settlement in question is upon the husband in the character of husband or on the wife in the character of wife or upon both in the character of husband & wife. Mere form is immaterial. The settlement may be one in the strictest sense or it may be, for instance, a covenant to pay by one spouse to the other or by a third party to a spouse. What is material is that the settlement should provide financial benefit for one or other or both of the spouses as spouses & with reference to their married state. 5781b. ——.]—The ct. has no jurisdiction to make an order for custody in divorce proceedings, in the case of a child of the parties who was born before their marriage & had not been declared legitimate, in accordance with Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60). The word "children" in Jud. (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 193, means legitimate children.

Petitioner was given the "care & control" of the child by a direction of the ct., made under the general jurisdiction of the High Ct. in respect of infants.—GREEN v. GREEN, [1929] P. 101; 98 L. J. P. 58; 140 L. T. 93; sub nom. G. v. G., 45 T. L. R. 7; 73 Sol. Jo. 111.

In a divorce suit between the parents of such a child, the child is not a party, & the ct. has therefore no jurisdiction to make an order for the child's "custody," but may make an order, as thought fit, providing for its "care & control," as in the case of Green v. Green, No. 5781b, ante.—JONES v. JONES (1929), 98 L. 5995a. —— Restraint from receipt of dividends—Until payment of costs.]—A wife was granted a decree of judicial separation on the ground of her husband's cruelty in an undefended petition, & an order for permanent alimony for herself & her four children was made at the rate of £950 a year. The husband had capital of at least £40,000. When each instalment of alimony became due he adopted an attitude of passive resistance, & on three successive occasions she secured payment only by execution on her husband's household effects, & on one occasion she secured a charging order on certain of his securities for the payment of a monthly instalment accrued due. Therefore she applied for an order to secure, under the control of the ct. or of a receiver, sufficient of the husband's capital from which payments of the monthly instalments could be made to her as they became due. The judge held that owing to a defect in the matrimonial law the ct. had no power to grant the relief asked for. The summons must be dismissed, but the husband would pay the wife's costs:—Held: under the law as it now stood, the husband could not be treated as in contempt with regard to future payments, but as he was in contempt as regards past payments & had expressed an intention to disobey the order for alimony as regards future payments, the ct., while not overstepping the proper limitations with regard to future payments, would make an order restraining him from receiving any dividends in respect of investments to the extent of £395 16*s.* 8*d.*, being the amount of the arrears of alimony & costs, directing that the solr. of resp. should receive the dividends & pay the same to the petitioner, & would give liberty to apply in chambers in regard to future arrears.—BURROWES v. BURROWES (1929), 141 L. After the marriage differences arose between the wife & her mother-in-law which resulted in the wife's leaving the husband. The wife summoned the husband for wilful neglect to provide her with reasonable maintenance. The husband offered to take her back to the mother's house, & said that it was the only home which he could afford to provide. The justices made a maintenance order for £1 a week for wife & child. The husband appealed:—Held: the justices were right. The husband's first duty was to provide his wife with a home according to his circumstances. The justices were right in holding that, by reason of the difficulty about the husband's mother, he had failed in that duty by putting his mother first. In view of his small earnings the wife's allowance was reduced from 15*s.* to 12*s.* a week. Otherwise the appeal failed.—MILLICHAMP v. MILLICHAMP (1931), 146 L. T. 96; 95 J. P. 207; 75 Sol. 6124h. —— Wife required to live next door to mother-in-law.]—On a summons by a wife on the ground of wilful neglect to provide reasonable maintenance, it was found by the magistrates that the action of the husband in requiring his wife to live in a house next door to his mother, & in keeping control of the purse, & of the housekeeping with the assistance of his mother, constituted unbearable conditions for her. She had left the house with the infant child of the marriage after an altercation. The magistrates made an order against the husband for the payment of 30*s.* a week. The husband appealed:—Held: the wife had not made out her complaint, & the order must be discharged.—JACKSON v. JACKSON (1932), 146 L. T. 406; 96 J. P. 97; 48 T. L. R. 206; 76 Sol. Jo. 129; 30 L. 6126 i. Causing to leave & live apart—Husband's failure to pay allowance during separation—Or provide home.]—Applt., the husband, had, while intoxicated, threatened his wife, & she left home, being in fear of him. Subsequently she wrote suggesting reconciliation, but the letters were unanswered. The husband contributed nothing to her support except a sum of 10*s.* & her tram fare to Adelaide, &, almost eight months after she had left him definitely refused to take her back or support her. On these facts the magistrate granted relief for neglect to maintain, but refused to grant relief for desertion on the ground mentioned above:—Held: desertion should have been found by the special magistrate.—MORGAN v. MORGAN, [1927] S. A. S. R. 140.—AUS.

6128a. —— Effect of Summary Jurisdiction (Separation & Maintenance) Act, 1925 (c. 51), s. 1 (1)—Neglect of marital duties by wife.]—On this appeal from justices the ct. explained the true effect of the change made by Summary Jurisdiction (Separation and Maintenance) Act, 1925 (c. 51), s. 1 (1), in sect. 4 of the principal Act of 1895, as not providing that a married woman was entitled to maintenance even though she did not carry out her marital obligations.

The marriage took place twenty-two years ago, & there were a number of children. In Jan. 1929 the parties separated. Soon afterwards the wife summoned the husband for desertion, & her summons was dismissed. Later, solrs. for the wife wrote to the husband that she was willing to live with him again & make a fresh start. On Mar. 27, 1931, she summoned him for alleged desertion & wilful neglect to maintain her. At the hearing on Apr. 2, the justices heard the complaint on the basis that it was one for wilful neglect, & dismissed the summons. The wife appealed. The husband was not represented:—Held: the legislature had not provided that a married woman, who had not committed adultery, might in any circumstances whatever be entitled to an order for maintenance. The law still took account of the mutual character of marital obligations. The justices had thought that the wife had renounced her wifely duties, but the summons would be sent back to them so that they might state their precise reasons for their conclusion.—CLARK v. CLARK (1931), 145 L. 6128b. Effect of separation deed.]—This was an appeal from the decision of a metropolitan police magistrate dismissing a summons by a wife on the ground of wilful neglect to provide reasonable maintenance. She had entered into a common form separation deed which provided for the payment to her by the husband of £2 a week. The payments fell into arrears, & a judgment against the husband went unsatisfied. In the following year the wife entered into a deed by which in return for the payment of a lump sum to start her in a new life in Canada, both spouses covenanted (inter alia) not to petition for judicial separation, restitution of conjugal rights, or divorce, & the wife covenanted in all respects to support & maintain herself & indemnify her husband against all liabilities into which she might enter.

The wife was paid the money & went to Canada. She had a breakdown & returned to England. She summoned her husband for wilful neglect, & said that he had become substantially better off. The summons was dismissed. She appealed:—Held: there was no evidence to show whether or not the magistrate had considered himself bound by the effect of the separation deeds to dismiss the summons. Whether the later deed operated as a final release of the husband was still an open question. It had never been decided what was the effect on the magistrate's matrimonial jurisdiction under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts of a wife's agreement to waive maintenance. Order rescinded, so that the matter might be reconsidered by the magistrate.—BURTON v. BURTON (1929), 142 L. T. 165; 94 J. P. 32; 29 Cox, C. C. 26, D. C.

6133a. Jurisdiction to make—On summons for maintenance.]—Where a wife under Summary Jurisdiction (Separation & Maintenance) Acts, 1895 to 1925, merely asks in her summons for an order for maintenance on the ground of wilful neglect it is improper for justices to decree a separation or make an order for the custody of children.—SMITH v. SMITH (1930), 144 L. 6137a. Rule not applicable to wage-earners.]—This was an appeal from a maintenance order granted to a wife by the justices on the ground that her husband had wilfully neglected to provide reasonable maintenance. The husband was earning £3 a week, & the wife, in addition to living rent free as a caretaker of flats, was earning from 10*s.* to 15*s.* a week as a waitress. The magistrates made an order that the husband should pay his wife £1 a week, & the order included a non-cohabitation clause. The husband appealed:—Held: the non-cohabitation clause was unwarrantable & must be struck out. The magistrates were well warranted in their conclusion that there was wilful neglect to maintain. The conventional standard of maintenance in the Divorce Ct., one-third of the joint income, was not applicable to wage-earners. The allowance was reduced to 10*s.* a week.—JONES (A.) v. JONES (D. independent evidence required under the ecclesiastical procedure in proceedings for desertion in the Divorce Ct. was not necessarily applicable to the matrimonial jurisdiction in the police cts. Nevertheless it was obvious that in matters of the greatest consequence between man & wife to act on evidence unsupported by a body of facts would be dangerous. When one found that during seventeen years the husband had not lived with his wife, & had not provided her with maintenance, there was a body of facts which, unless satisfactorily explained by applt., established the wife's case. The justices refused to make an order, & on the wife's appeal it was urged that the justices' minds were biased in favour of the husband by the probation officer's improper & unsolicited testimonial:—Held: the justices were entitled to come to their decision on the evidence. Upon that application no evidence was submitted to the justices on behalf of the husband. The justices confirmed the order with the modification or variation of substituting £2 10*s.* per week, i.e., £2 for the married woman & 10*s.* for the child, in lieu of £5 10*s.* per week, they being of opinion that they were bound to reduce the amount payable under the order to the limit prescribed for such orders made by a ct. of summary jurisdiction under Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895 (c. 39):—Held: (1) the justices had power to state a case for the opinion of the K. c i. —— Under Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1923.]—A maintenance order was made against one C. in England in 1908. A copy of the order, which was certified as a true copy by a person described as "clerk to the justices," was registered in N.S.W. in 1929. Proceedings were taken in this State against C. in Aug. 1930, to enforce payment of arrears of maintenance, the greater portion of which was referable to the period prior to registration. A sworn complaint by the original English complainant contained the only evidence of non-compliance prior to the date of registration. Proof of the identity of C. with the person against whom the original order was made consisted in a similarity of names, evidence that C. had been concerned in maintenance proceedings in England, & evidence as to the nature of his occupation & his request as to service of the process. An order was made that C. be imprisoned until the arrears of maintenance had been paid, & against that order a rule nisi for prohibition had been granted:—Held: the sworn complaint was not a deposition within Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1923, s. 11, & could not be accepted as evidence of non-compliance with the order prior to the date of its registration in N.S.W.—Re MCMASTER, Ex p. CORMACK (1929), 47 N. confirmation, & he made an order confirming it:—Held: (1) as desertion is a continuing offence, there was evidence upon which the South African ct. could find that the wife was deserted in South Africa, although the commencement of the desertion had been elsewhere; (2) it was open to the husband, on the application to confirm, to raise the question of the jurisdiction of the magistrate's ct. in South Africa to make the provisional order, although that ground was not one of those enumerated in the statutory "statement" sent over by the South African ct. of the grounds upon which the application for maintenance might have been opposed by the husband if a party to the proceedings. Therefore, the ct. being satisfied, on consideration of the South African statutes, that the magistrate's ct. had jurisdiction, held that the Metropolitan magistrate's order confirming the provisional order was right.—Re WHEAT, [1932] 2 K. 6250e. —— —— —— ——.]—In this appeal from an order by magistrates the ct. took the point that, apart from the merits, the husband was out of time in applying for the revocation of a maintenance order made in Sept. 1904. The order was for 6*s.* The husband complained by summons towards the end of 1930 that his wife, now aged 60 years, had committed adultery with a man up to Mar. 1930, & claimed that the order be discharged. The wife's defence was a denial of adultery with the man for whom she had acted as housekeeper till his death in 1929. The justices found that adultery had been committed, & revoked the order on Jan. 5, 1931. The wife appealed on the ground that it was contrary to the weight of evidence:—Held: on the evidence before the justices the wife ought not to have been found guilty of adultery, but apart from that the husband was out of time in applying for the discharge of the order of 1904. The ground of the husband's complaint occurred more than six months before he took proceedings, & therefore the justices had no jurisdiction to hear the summons.—MELLARS v. MELLARS (1931), 145 L. 6250f. .]—In Oct. 1924, a husband was ordered to pay his wife 30*s.* a week maintenance, subsequently reduced to 20*s.*, on the ground of desertion. In Apr. 1931, he petitioned for divorce on the ground of his wife's adultery in Aug. 1928. On Dec. 5, 1931, he was granted a decree nisi, the suit being undefended. The decree was made absolute in May, 1932. On Dec. 16, 1931, the husband applied, under Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895 (c. 39), s. 7, for the discharge of the maintenance order of 1924 on the ground of fresh evidence, namely, the wife's adultery in 1928. The magistrate dismissed the summons on the ground that the proceedings were out of time & that decision was affirmed by the Div. Ct.:—Held: the husband's application for the discharge of the order might be made "at any time"; it was not limited to the "six calendar months" referred to in Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848

(c. 43), s. 11, from the time when the matter of the complaint arose. The matter must therefore be sent back to the magistrate to deal with under the discretion left open to him under Summary Jurisdiction (Separation & Maintenance) Act, 1925 (c. 51), s. 2.—NATBORNY v. NATBORNY (1932), 101 L. 6250g. —— —— —— Particulars of adultery.]—A wife had obtained an order under Summary Jurisdiction (Separation & Maintenance) Acts, 1895 to 1925, that her husband should pay her 30*s.* a week by way of maintenance. The order did not contain a non-cohabitation clause. Subsequently the husband took out a summons asking that the order for maintenance should be discharged, on the ground that the wife had committed adultery. The husband gave evidence that, since the date of the maintenance order, his wife had given birth to a child, & of non-access on his part. This was the only evidence of adultery. The justices found that the wife had committed adultery, & discharged the weekly order for maintenance:—Held: (1) the evidence of the husband of non-access to bastardise his child was not admissible, & the justices' order discharging the maintenance order must be set aside; (2) in proceedings under Summary Jurisdiction (Separation & Maintenance) Acts, 1895 to 1925, if there is a charge of adultery, the act or acts of adultery should be specified with particulars, if possible, of the place where, the time when, & the name of the person with whom it is alleged the adultery has been committed.—BOSTON v. BOSTON (1928), 138 L. (2) A finding of adultery against a wife by justices is not conclusive, whereas a subsequent finding by a judge of the High Ct., that the adultery alleged was not committed, is conclusive. Such a finding by a judge of the High Ct. is a new fact, & the nature of his finding is also a new fact, & both these facts are "fresh evidence" within the statutes.—PRATT v. PRATT (1927), 96 L. J. It was submitted on her behalf that there was no cause shown on fresh evidence for the revocation of the maintenance order:—Held: it appearing from the correspondence which had passed since the maintenance order that the husband had offered to maintain her if she returned, & there being no evidence that the offer was not made bonâ fide, there was fresh evidence upon which the justices could act & the order was rightly revoked.—KAY v. KAY (1931), 95 J. Two months later the justices revoked the order on the application of the husband raising the same case of adultery & adducing additional evidence in support of the charge:—Held: it was open to the husband to call the evidence at the hearing of his wife's summons which was afterwards given on his application to revoke. It was not fresh evidence & the appeal must be allowed. There would be no limit in the Divorce Ct. to the number of fresh trials if the evidence in this case was held to be fresh evidence.—CROSS v. CROSS (1931), 95 J. P. 86; 29 L. G. R. 276, D. C.

NOTE.—The property in Sched. A., No. II., was transferred to Sched. D., Case III., and the property in Sched. A., No. III. was transferred to Sched. D., Case I., by Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), s. 28, Sched. III.

SECT. 1.—APPLICATION OF SCHEDULE (Vol. XXVIII., p. 6).

11a. General rule.]—(1) Income tax under Schedule A., as under every other Schedule, is assessed on profits & gains, & the test in regard to liability to tax under Schedule A. is not whether the person taxed had an independent ownership of the property, but whether he had profits & gains in respect of his occupation.

(2) A person who by a will is given a right of residence in a house rent free so long as he wishes, & who is in residence during the year of assessment, is assessable to income tax for that year under Schedule A. in respect of his beneficial occupation ; & the amount at which he is assessed must be included in a return of the total income for super tax purposes in the following year.

(3) When the right of residence is given to two persons jointly, it is for the Special Comrs. to fix the proportion of the total assessment applicable to each person, &, when such a finding has been made, it should be accepted in any higher ct.—SHANKS v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1929] 1 K. 25 ii. —— —— ——.]—The Finance Acts contain in each year, except in years of revaluation, a provision that the annual value of property which has been adopted for the purpose of income tax under Sched. A. for one year shall be taken as the annual value of that property for the same purpose for the next year :—Held : this provision does not preclude an increase in the assessment or an additional first assessment under Income Tax Act, 1918, s. 125, where the original assessment is found not to have included the whole annual value.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. DICKSON, [1928] S. allowances under Sched. A., No. V., r. 7 (1) (b), as amended by Finance Act, 1923 (c. 14), s. 28. The property was within the area to which Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (c. 67), applied, & in the valuation list in force during the tax year in question the gross value of each flat was shown separately, & the assessments complained of were in amounts corresponding to such gross values. All the flats were self-contained & had separate front doors abutting on to a common staircase inside the building, & there was one entrance to the street giving access to the whole building. Each flat was let to a separate tenant at a rent which included the rates & the cost of lighting & cleaning the common staircase & entrance & of providing a porter, with the result that the rents paid by the tenants largely exceeded the gross values contained in the valuation list. During the year of assessment the amount of the total rents payable under the leases was admitted, but the owners refused to give the particulars necessary to arrive at any outgoings, which should by law be deducted in making the assessment. The owners contended (a) that the gross assessments in the valuation list were conclusive for the purpose of income tax under Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (c. 67), during the quinquennial period in question & that the actual outgoings during any specific year forming part of that period were irrelevant; (b) that under r. 7 of Sched. A., No. V., as amended by Finance Act, 1923 (c. 14), s. 28, they were entitled to the appropriate allowances from the gross Sched. A. assessments set out in para. 3 of that rule for the purpose of collection. The Crown contended (a) that under Sched. A., No. VII., r. 8 (c), the whole house was the unit of assessment & assessable in one sum, namely, the total amount of the gross values of the eight flats & the porter's rooms; (b) that, on the figures before the Comrs., the claim to reduction failed, since under Sched. A., No. V., r. 7 (2), as amended by Finance Act, 1923 (c. 14), s. 28, there was no title to the reduction claimed where the amount of the assessment was less than the rent by a sum greater than the authorised reduction which would be allowable if the assessment were on the amount of the rent after deducting from such rent any outgoing which should by law be deducted in making the assessment. The Comrs. were of opinion that the income tax assessments should follow the assessments as fixed under Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (c. 67), & therefrom the appropriate deductions allowed for repairs in the case of each flat, & they reduced the assessments in accordance with para. 3 of r. 7:—Held: (1) it was incompetent to the Crown to raise their first contention, as 1918 Act gave the Crown no right of appeal against an assessment; (2) if the tax-payer was to make good his claim to reduction, inquiry must be made as to outgoings, & the case should be remitted to the comrs. to determine what reduction, if any, should be allowed on the basis that the outgoings referred to in para. 2 of r. 7 were to be ascertained separately as to each flat & as to each year of assessment.—CONSOLIDATED LONDON PROPERTIES, LTD. v. JOHNSTONE, [1927] A. s b. Company for advancement of woollen industry.]—A limited co., membership of which was restricted to persons engaged in the woollen industry in Scotland, was formed "with a view to the advancement of the woollen industry in Scotland, to promote by means of a college systematic education, instruction & study in all branches of the industry." Its income & property were dedicated to these objects, & no profits could be distributed among its members. It owned & occupied a college at which classes were held for instruction in the principles & practice of woollen & worsted cloth manufacture. The students were fifteen years of age & upwards, & paid fees for the courses of instruction:—Held: (1) the college was not a "public school"; (2) the college buildings were "heritages owned & occupied by a charity," & the co. was entitled to exemption under 1921 Act, s. 30 (1).—SCOTTISH WOOLLEN TECHNICAL COLLEGE v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1926] S. o i. —— ——.]—A society was composed almost exclusively of medical men residing in the city of Aberdeen. Its objects were to facilitate the interchange of ideas on medical subjects & for social intercourse between its members; to bring them into touch with their colleagues elsewhere; to maintain their interest in the work of the university; to maintain a code of ethics for the guidance of members in their professional relations; & "to support & advance the interests of the medical profession." Its premises comprised a medical library for the use of members, & a hall where monthly meetings were held at which papers on medical subjects were read & discussed. These papers were published in the medical press:—Held: the Society's premises were not exempt from income tax in respect that it was not a literary or scientific institution, but was substantially a professional assocn.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. ABERDEEN MEDICO-CHIRURGICAL SOCIETY, [1931] S. &, further, the school was largely maintained by public moneys, & in the view of the Board of Education the school satisfied the regulation which prohibited any Parliamentary grant to a school conducted for private profit. In accordance with the Board's wishes it was provided that the co. should be converted into an educational trust at the end of a period & exceeding fifty years from 1905, & that in the event of a winding up before the end of that period the surplus assets of the co. should be subject to an educational trust & should not be distributed among the shareholders; that during the period above-mentioned the dividend paid on share capital should not exceed a sum equal to 4 per cent. a year. The Comrs. found on the facts the Trust School was a public school, & as such entitled to the benefit of the exemption from income tax provided for by 1918 Act, Sched. A, No. VI., r. 1 (c):—Held: there was ample evidence on which the Comrs. could find that this school was a public school, & the possibility of profit arising to an individual in the course of carrying on a school did not of necessity prevent the school having the character of a public school.

The existence of a perpetual foundation is not by itself conclusive, but only one of the factors to be considered. There is no distinction between money used for a public school raised by debentures at interest, & money raised by preference shares with limited interest. The judgments in Blake v. London Corpn., No. 60, were not intended to lay down a rule that no school from the conduct of which any person could derive pecuniary benefit could in any circumstances be a public school.—GIRLS' PUBLIC DAY SCHOOL TRUST v. EREAUT, [1931] A. 79a. "Dealer in milk"—Land insufficient for keep of cattle—Liability to be assessed under Schedule D.]—Resp. occupied a farm which was charged to tax under Schedule B. on which he kept a number of cows for milking. The soil was of such a poor quality that resp. had to expend considerable sums yearly on feeding stuffs. The produce grown on the land represented only about thirty per cent. of the food required for the cows. Resp. sold his milk to regular customers in the district, & only purchased milk for resale when his own supply was insufficient for his customers' ordinary requirements. He sold his cows when they became dry. The general comrs. held that resp. was not a dealer in milk, & they discharged an assessment made upon him in accordance with 1918 Act, Schedule D., Case III., r. 4:—Held: resp. was a dealer in milk whose land was insufficient for the keep of the cows within the rule, & the further question whether the assessable value afforded no just estimate of the profits was for the comrs. to find, & the case must be remitted to them for that purpose.—HUXHAM v. JOHNSON (1926), 136 L. After his death the lands were let for grazing under Court Grazing Agreements, & were subsequently let under a Court Letting Agreement for a year. Arrears of income tax having been claimed by the Revenue Comrs., the receiver applied to the land judge for directions:—Held: the owner of the lands who had been in occupation was liable for the arrears of tax under both Scheds. 93a. —— Exchange transaction.]— Under an agreement made on Mar. 8, 1921, for the supply of marble by a co. to building contractors, the contractors agreed to advance £20,000 of the price, percentage deductions being made from the amount due on each consignment of marble until the advance had been repaid. On Mar. 17, 1921, the £20,000 was paid to the co., & in anticipation of the marble being purchased in Italy, though not till the autumn of 1921, the co. at once arranged for the conversion of the greater part of the £20,000 into lire at one hundred & three to the £, & a lira account was opened. In May, 1921, the lira had appreciated in value, &, as the money was not yet required by the co., their nominee, without the co.'s knowledge or authority, directed the sale of the balance of the lira account, & at seventy-two to the £ the lire realised a profit of £6,707, which was received by the co. The lire were subsequently repurchased for the purposes of the contract for £19,386, which was allowed as a deduction from the co.'s profits for income tax purposes :—Held : in computing the co.'s profits for the purposes of assessment to income tax for the year 1922–23 the £6,707 was not a profit arising out of the contract for the supply of marble, but was merely an appreciation of a temporary investment, & was not assessable to income tax as part of the profits of the co.'s trade.—McKinlay v. Jenkins (H. The co. having exercised its option of purchase, & paid to the syndicate a sum for the purchase of the American patents out & out, the Special Comrs. decided that profits on the sale of the patents arose in the course of the co.'s business & were chargeable to income tax:—Held: the Special Comrs. had not wrongly directed themselves, & there was ample evidence to support their conclusion of fact.—DUCKER v. REES ROTURBO DEVELOPMENT SYNDICATE, INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. REES ROTURBO DEVELOPMENT SYNDICATE, [1928] A. 97b. Payments for grant of shop rights of patented invention.]—Applt. was managing director of a co. engaged in the dyeing industry, & also carried on the business of selling yarn & machinery on his own account. He had invented new apparatus for dyeing which was patented in the United Kingdom & America. He exploited this invention by providing & selling the necessary machinery to firms in America, & he did not dispute that he was assessable to income tax, under Case I. of Sched. D., on the profits made on the machinery. Under the agreements made with these firms, however, in addition to the price paid for the machinery, he was entitled to further payments for grant of "shop rights," i.e. the right of the purchasers to use the machinery & processes in their own mills or within a limited area. Applt. contended that these payments were for the acquisition of an exclusive licence to use the patented processes in a limited area, that they were payment for portions of the patent rights & therefore capital payments in respect of which he was not assessable. The Special Comrs. found that the agreements were primarily for the sale of machinery & that the grant to the purchasers of "shop rights" was consequential on the sale; & therefore that the payments for the "shop rights" must be included with the payments for the machinery in the receipts of applt.'s business:—Held: the Comrs. had decided rightly on the evidence before them.—BRANDWOOD v. BANKER, BRANDWOOD v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. He appealed against assessments to income tax made upon him under Schedule D. in respect of stallion fees, & the comrs. decided that in regard to stallion fees the expenses required to make the profits from service to mares, plus any expenses of keeping up the stud to the number of stallions earning fees should be allowed, but the number of horses to be used for replacement should not exceed one-third of those earning fees:—Held: applt. was assessable to income tax under Schedule D. in respect of profits from stallion fees, in accordance with the principle laid down by the comrs.—MARSHAL v. TWEEDY (1926), 11 Tax Cas. 524.—SCOT.

99f. —— Sum set off against unpaid duty.]—Applt. became liable for the payment of excess profits duty in respect of the profits of his business in 1918 & 1919. By agreement with the Revenue authorities the greater part of that duty was not paid when due, but was allowed to stand over as an amount due to the Revenue. In 1920, however, applt.'s business suffered a big loss & there was a large deficiency in duty. By agreement in Jan. 1923, after setting off the sums due to the Revenue from applt. for excess profits duty for 1918 & 1919 & those due to be repaid by the Revenue to applt. in respect of his losses in 1920, a small balance was due to applt. & was repaid to him in Jan. 1923. Applt. was assessed to income tax for 1923 on the amount of the excess profits duty so set off, the contention of the Revenue being that in effect the excess profits duty for 1918 & 1919 had been repaid to applt. :—Held : the mutual agreement to set off one claim against the other amounted to a payment by applt. within Finance Act, 1921 (c. 32), s. 36, & a repayment by the Revenue, & the amount of such repayment was a subject-matter of income tax for 1923.—TARRANT v. ROBERTS (1930), 47 T. sc. Profits of storage of whisky by distillery company.]—A distillery co. owned bonded warehouses, in which, on certain conditions, it undertook to store its customers' whisky, after purchase, for three years, or for a longer period, as required. The conditions were (inter alia) that, in return for storage, customers should pay to the co. a sum calculated by taking a fixed rentcharge per cask of whisky for each week of storage, less a deduction for any deficiency due to leakage. The deduction for deficiencies could not be ascertained until the casks were removed at the conclusion of storage, &, until then, no sum was demandable from customers. The Revenue maintained that, in estimating the co.'s profits & gains for purposes of income tax, the weekly rent charges fell to be treated as profits accruing week by week, &, subject to an allowance being made for the deficiencies as ultimately ascertained, should be brought into account as profits of the year in which they accrued :—Held : the profits from storage contracts were neither earned nor ascertainable until those contracts had been completed, & ought not, therefore, to enter into the computation of the co.'s profits & gains for the purpose of income tax in any year before that in which the contracts were completed.—DAILUAINE-TALISKER DISTILLERIES v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1930] S. The vessel was immediately put into the hands of shipbuilders to carry out the repairs, but they failed to complete the repairs until five months after the expiry of the period specified in their tender. The owners having claimed as damages a sum based on the estimated profits which the ship would have earned during the five months, the claim was ultimately compromised by a payment of £3,000 :—Held : this sum constituted profits on which the owners were liable to income tax, in respect that it was compensation for the loss of trading profits, not for injury to a capital asset.—BURMAH STEAM SHIP CO. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1931] S. The co. covenanted to commence & continue drilling operations, &, on discovery of oil, to instal machinery for pumping it, etc. It struck oil, sold all the oil produced in 1927, & paid to applt., as being the royalty under the agreement, one-tenth of the gross proceeds thereof. The question now in issue was whether or not applt., in respect of the amount so received by her as royalty, was assessable by the Crown for income tax under Income War Tax Act, 1917 (Dom.), as amended. Applt. was not a dealer in or in the business of buying & selling oil lands or leases :—Held : applt. was not so assessable.—SPOONER v. MINISTER OF NATIONAL REVENUE, [1931] S. C. R. 399 ; 3 D. L. 99k. Royalties.]—Applt. co. carried on business in the United Kingdom as literary agents, acting on behalf of authors in making arrangements with publishers & others for the publication or disposal of authors' literary productions. The co. remitted to the authors the royalties less the co.'s commission & expenses. The co. was assessed for the year 1925–26 in respect of sums paid under such arrangements to certain authors who were not resident in the United Kingdom. The books concerned were written out of the United Kingdom. The co. appealed to the Special Comrs. The Comrs., in an interim decision, determined that the copyright royalties in question were not profits or gains arising from any trade, profession, or vocation exercised in the United Kingdom; that they were profits or gains arising from property in the United Kingdom; & that the non-resident authors were assessable in the name of the co. under rule 5 of the General Rules. At a further hearing the Comrs. held that the assessments should be under Case VI. of Sched. D, & they should be in the amount of the royalties less the agents' commission & incidental expenses, so far as they related to the royalties brought into charge, & not, as contended on behalf of the revenue, without any such deduction. Both parties appealed:—Held: that the royalties were annual profits or gains arising from property in the United Kingdom & so were assessable under Sched. D; & that allowance should be made in the assessments for the expenses indicated.—CURTIS BROWN, LTD. v. JARVIS; JARVIS v. CURTIS BROWN, LTD. (1929), 14 Tax Cas. 744; 73 Sol. Jo. 819.

They bought Treasury Bonds cum coupon & at the same time sold bonds of the same nominal value ex coupon. By cashing the coupons detached they received interest on the bonds less income tax deducted under Sched. C.:—Held: the net interest received by the co. having been taxed under Sched. C. could not again be brought into account for the purpose of the assessment of income tax under Sched. D. in respect of the profits or gains of the co.'s business.—THOMPSON v. TRUST & LOAN CO. 99m. Remission of debt.]—In 1919 applt. co. entered into a contract with an oil-producing co. for the purchase of petroleum for a minimum period of twenty years. Applt. co. was adversely affected by the slump in the petroleum business in 1921 & was unable to meet its liability under the contract for oil supplied, etc. Accounts of applt. co.'s business were made up for the year ended June 30, 1921, & for the eighteen months ended Dec. 31, 1922. At June 30, 1921, the agreed amount owing to the oil-producing co. under the contract was £1,073,281; at Sept. 30, 1921, the amount was £1,270,232. Under the terms of an agreement dated Nov. 25, 1921, applt. co. paid to the producing co. the sum of £325,000 & was released by the producing co. from its liability to pay the balance remaining due, viz., £945,232. The amount so released was carried direct to applt. co.'s balance sheet & was shown as a separate item under the head "Reserve" at Dec. 31, 1922. The Crown contended that the amount released should be brought into account in computing applt. co.'s profits for purposes of income tax & Corporation Profits Tax, either in the account for the eighteen months to Dec. 31, 1922, or, alternatively, in the account for the year to June 30, 1921, that account being re-opened for the purpose. The Special Comrs. held that the amount released should be brought into the profit & loss account of the co. for the eighteen months to Dec. 31, 1922:—Held: the amount remitted should not be included as a receipt in the account for the eighteen months to Dec. 31, 1922, & the account for the year to June 30, 1921, should not be re-opened & adjusted by reference to the remission.—BRITISH MEXICAN PETROLEUM CO., LTD. v. JACKSON, BRITISH MEXICAN PETROLEUM CO., LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. Sums of £5,000 were thereafter annually debited in the accounts of the gas undertaking & credited in those of the electricity undertaking:—Held: these sums of £5,000 were properly included in the profits of the gas undertaking for income tax purposes, irrespective of the purpose to which they were applied.—ALLOA MAGISTRATES v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1931] S. 114a. —— "Turning over" cotton mills.]—During the boom in the Lancashire cotton trade in 1919, applt., with other persons, engaged in the operation known locally as "turning over" a cotton mill, i.e. acquiring a controlling interest in the mill, organising its administration & finances, & reselling it to a new co. The operation was successful & applt. joined other syndicates, composed partly of the same persons engaged in "turning over" three other mills. In each case a profit resulted to applt. On Mar. 24, 1923, the additional comrs. for the division in which applt. resided signed the book containing an estimated assessment upon applt. to income tax under Schedule D. for the year 1919–20. The book was not delivered to the general comrs. until Apr. 18, 1923; notice was given to applt. on May 5, 1923, & the assessment was signed by the general comrs. on Sept. 5, 1923:—Held: (1) though each adventure of "turning over" a mill, taken singly, was not a trade, but a capital transaction, yet the succession of such adventures, in each of which applt. took part, might constitute the carrying on of a trade, & the Special Comrs., on an appeal against the assessment, were not estopped by their previous decisions from reconsidering the whole of the facts, & finding that applt. was carrying on a trade, on the profits of which he was liable to income tax; (2) the assessment was made in time, having been made when it was signed by the additional comrs. within the three years allowed by 1918 Act, s. 125 (2), & the subsequent steps need not be within that time.—PICKFORD v. QUIRKE, PICKFORD v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 114b. —— Isolated transaction—Assignment of option.]—Resp. joined with three other persons in obtaining an option to purchase a rubber estate in the Malay Peninsula. As the estate was too small for resale to a co. for public flotation, they acquired a further option to purchase an adjoining estate. Ultimately the two estates were sold to a co. at a profit. Resp. having been assessed to income tax on a sum representing his net share of the profit appealed. The Comrs. found that resp. acquired the property or interest in the property with the sole object of turning it over again at a profit, & that he at no time had any intention of holding the property or interest as an investment, & confirmed the assessment. They subsequently found, on the case being referred back to them, that the transaction was not a concern in the nature of trade:—Held: having regard to the finding of the Comrs. that the transaction was not a concern in the nature of trade, & to its being an isolated transaction of purchase & resale of property, the profits arising therefrom were not in the nature of income but were an accretion to capital, & were therefore not subject to tax under 1918 Act, Sched. The co. admitted its liability to be assessed in respect of its profits from the services supplied to the tenants under Sched. D, but the Crown claimed in making the assessments under Sched. D to include the rents of the offices as part of the receipts of the trade, making allowance for tax assessed under Sched. 119a. "Trading" — What amounts to — Operations of partnership during winding up.]—Resp. firm carried on a large business of corn & seed merchants between Mar. 1923 & Mar. 31, 1926, when the partnership which was for a limited time came to an end. Under Partnership Act, 1890 (c. 39), s. 38, the partners, after dissolution, had authority to bind the firm, & their rights & obligations continued so far as necessary to wind-up the affairs of the partnership. At the time of dissolution, on Mar. 31, there were large contracts outstanding, & in the course of completing those contracts after dissolution a profit of £6,190 was made in the year ending Apr. 1927, which was assessed to income tax. In the course of the winding-up, large quantities of grain were delivered, payments for which were recovered & freight was paid; other items dealt with were discharging, lighterage, & storage of grain, arbitration fees, & gratuities to the late employees, bank charges, & interest. During the winding-up the partners & staff were thus employed, & the gratuities to the staff were given for their work. The comrs., on those facts, decided that the partners were trading during the winding-up, & the profits of such trading were consequently liable to income tax:—Held: what was done after dissolution constituted trading, the profits of which were rightly assessed to income tax.—HILLERNS & FOWLER v. MURRAY (1932), 146 L. The co. invested its reserve funds in British Govt. securities. From the date of the co.'s incorporation in 1919 till 1928 it occasionally changed its investments in these securities. In several years there were no sales of investments. In 1928 the co. made a profit of £4,800 on the realisation of certain investments. 131a. —— —— —— ——.]—Applt. was employed by a British co. as general manager of their sugar estates in Demerara where he lived & where his salary was wholly earned & paid. He was in England on leave from June to Sept. 1918, & during that time the co., at his request, placed to the credit of his banking account in England £525, being an advance on account of salary falling due before Apr. 5, 1919, & an assessment to income tax was made upon him for the year 1918–19 in respect of this sum under Schedule D., Case V. His wife had been for several years, & was throughout the year 1918–19, the owner of a house in Kent, towards the upkeep of which he contributed out of other income arising in England, but since Sept. 1917, she had been mainly living with him in Demerara, the house being left unoccupied. During his stay in England in 1918, applt. lived for the most part in hotels & in fact spent only one night at the house. The Special Comrs. having decided that applt. was resident in the United Kingdom during the year ending Apr. 5, 1919, & that he had been rightly assessed to income tax in respect of the above sum as having been received in the United Kingdom during that year from an employment abroad:—Held: inasmuch as applt.'s salary was payable in Demerara, the sum credited to him in the United Kingdom must be regarded as remitted to him from abroad & as constituting income from a foreign possession chargeable under Schedule D., Case V.—FLEMING v. WILKINSON (1925), 10 Tax Cas. 416, C. The manufacturers supplied advertising material but all other expenses were met by applt. out of his remuneration, which consisted of commission only, based on the net cash received by the manufacturer in respect of all goods shipped to the relative agency district, with a small guaranteed minimum. The whole of the commission was paid into an account in a bank in England. Between Nov. 16, 1916, & June 16, 1923, applt. was in the United Kingdom for the following periods only: Apr. 14, 1919, to Aug. 10, 1919; July 26, 1920, to Nov. 22, 1920; Dec. 20, 1921, to Apr. 12, 1922. (2) A Danish co. & an English co. established a line of steamers between Copenhagen & Hull, & the English co. were appointed exclusive agents for the Danish co. at Hull. The English co. controlled the freights at this end, quoted rates, accepted consignments of goods & put them on board the steamers of the Danish co. The bills of lading were signed "for the master" by one of the English co.'s clerks. The English co. collected the freights for outward bound goods & any other moneys due from the consignors, & remitted what was due to the Danish co. On an appeal against assessments to income tax for the four years ended Apr. 5, 1913–1916 of the English co. as agents for the Danish co. :—Held : on the principle of Erichsen v. Last, No. 168, the Danish co. exercised a trade in the United Kingdom to the extent to which goods were taken on board their ships at Hull for carriage elsewhere, & this trade was carried on by the British co. as their regular agents. Therefore, the Danish co. were assessable to income tax in the name of the British co. for the three years ended Apr. 5, 1915, under 1842 Act, s. 41, in respect of the profits arising from such trade, so far as regards freights collected by the British co. in respect of such goods, & for the year ended Apr. 5, 1916, under 1842 Act, s. 41, as amended by Finance (No. 2) Act, 1915 (c. 89), s. 31, in respect of all the profits arising from such trade, whether the freights were collected by the British co. or not.

sz. Realisation of wool by Imperial Government—Whether profits earned in Victoria.]—Pursuant to an agreement between the Imperial & Commonwealth Governments, resp. co. was incorporated in 1920 in Victoria, with a head office at Melbourne, for the purpose of selling the undisposed of surplus of wool acquired for the war, & distributing the proceeds. The Commonwealth Govt. transferred to the co. its undivided half of the Australian wool & in cash its share of profits already realised, in consideration of the issue of priority wool certificates & fully-paid shares to its nominees, the wool suppliers. The co. also agreed with the Imperial Govt. to sell on its behalf for a commission all the rest of the wool, whether Australian or not. The wool was all sold during the years 1921 to 1924; the co. had no other dealings in wool. The contracts of sale were made, & deliveries & payments thereunder took place, outside Australia. The proceeds of the half share of the Australian wool largely exceeded the sum at which it had been taken into the books of the co. The priority wool certificates were redeemed, & the whole of the capital credited as paid on the shares was paid off under successive schemes sanctioned by the ct.; there remained a large surplus in the hands of the liquidator of the co. Assessments were made upon the co. under the Income Tax Act, 1915, of Victoria, in respect of proportions of the surplus proceeds of sale & of the commission earned. The co. raised objections thereto, & a special case was stated: —Held : (1) the surplus resulted merely from the realisation of capital assets, & therefore no part of it was income chargeable to tax under sect. 35 of the Act; (2) no part of the surplus, or of the commission, was a profit "earned in or derived in or from Victoria" so as to be chargeable to tax under that sect.—Taxes Comr. v. British Australian Wool Realization Assocn., Ltd., [1931] A. sb. —— Whether profits earned in Queensland.]—As the general scheme of the Queensland Income Tax Act of 1924 bases liability to tax thereunder upon the source of the income, not the residence of the taxpayer, being in Queensland, & as the power of a legislature to tax property, whether real or personal, is limited territorially, sect. 10 (2) of the Act, which purports to tax profits arising from the sale of "any personal property whatsoever," applies only to personal property in Queensland; so, too, para. (ii) (b), which was added to sect. 10 (2) by an amending Act of 1926, & purports to tax money received from a co. in respect of shares issued in circumstances stated in para. (ii) (a), cannot be construed as referring to a co. which does not carry on business, or possess assets, or derive its profits from a source in Queensland. Consequently, a wool grower resident in Queensland is not liable to income tax under sect. 10 (2) of the above Act in respect of sums received by him as a shareholder in the British Australian Wool Realization Association, Ltd. Further, the excess of the sums so received over the market value of the shares when issued cannot be treated as an addition to the profits of the shareholder's business, because income tax having been paid by him upon the shares when issued they became property with its own incidence, if any, to tax.—Taxes Comr. v. Union Trustee Co. of Australia, Ltd., [1931] A. 173a. —— —— C.i.f. & consignment business.]—Applt. acted as representative of an American co. in connection with the sale of the co.'s products in L. & in the North of England generally. There was no written agreement defining his position. The business was carried on in two ways: (a) "C.i.f. business." An offer to buy bacon or hams at prices stated by the bidder was received by applt. & cabled to the co. If the co. accepted it they cabled to applt. accordingly who notified the bidder, usually first by telephone & later in writing. The written acceptance sent to the bidder represented the transaction as a purchase by applt. for the bidder from the co. Applt. received neither the goods nor documents relating to them nor did he collect any moneys. He was paid a commission on all orders originating in his "territory." (b) "Consignment business." Consignments were sent by the co. to applt. to be sold on its behalf. They were sold by auction. The bills of lading were made out to applt. He collected the proceeds of the sales & was responsible for bad debts. He was paid the usual agency commission for such business:—Held: the co. exercised a trade within the United Kingdom.—ROWSON v. STEPHEN, ROWSON v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 204f. Option to be assessed otherwise than on basis of preceding year—Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), s. 29 (3)—Necessity for receipt of profits in period preceding three years anterior to year of assessment.]—A co. took over a business as a going concern as from Apr. 3, 1925, & was assessed for the years 1925–26 & 1926–27 by reference to the average profits of preceding years as having succeeded to the trade. The profits of the business for each of the years ending Mar. 31, 1925, & Mar. 31, 1926, were less than the average annual profits for the six years ending Mar. 31, 1924. The co. having given due notice, claimed that it was entitled under Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), s. 29 (3), to be assessed for the year 1927–28 on the basis of the average profits of the business for the three years ending Mar. 31, 1927 :—Held : the co. not having been in possession of the source of the profits for any part of the period preceding the three years mentioned in the sub-sect., the sub-sect. was not applicable, notwithstanding that the co. fell to be treated for income tax purposes as successors in the business.—BROWN (E. G.) & CO., LTD. v. STEWART (1929), 14 Tax Cas. 423.

204g. —— —— ——.]—Applt. co. was formed in Oct. 1924, to take over a partnership business of wool merchants, the partners themselves becoming the holders of practically all the shares. In the year ending Mar. 31, 1926, the co. sustained a loss of £64,016. Under Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), Part IV., dealing with income tax, the assessment on a three years' average was abolished, & it was provided that the profits for income tax purposes should be computed on the amount for the year preceding the year of assessment. It being obvious that in the readjustment of the system in that way hardship would arise, to mitigate certain cases of hardship sect. 29 (3), was framed. The question in dispute was whether in the circumstances above set out the co. had shown that it was within the mischief which sub-sect. 3 aimed at alleviating. The co. contended that sects. 28 & 29 of Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), were intended to cover all cases where the abolition of the three years' average would cause exceptional hardship, & also that in a case where there had been a change of ownership of the business during the three years on which the 1927–28 average would have been computed the new owners, in this case the co., should be treated as having been in notional possession of the source during the six years mentioned in sub-sect. 3 of sect. 29 preceding the three average years. On an appeal against an assessment to income tax Sched. D for the year ending Apr. 5, 1928, in £68,032 less £539 wear & tear allowance, the comrs. held that the co. came within the provisions of sect. 29 (3), & were entitled to the relief granted by that sub-sect., & they reduced the assessment to £5,480 less the £539:—Held: though the co. could bring their case within the first part of sect. 29 (3), it became impossible to apply that part of the sect. unless the co. could show that it was in possession of the profits during the six years, preceding the three years before 1926–27, but in fact the co. was not in possession of the profits for any portion of those six years. To work the sub-sect. the co. must have been in possession for some part of the six years, either all of it or part of it. The co. must have been in possession or the sub-sect. did not arise at all.—BETTS v. LAYCOCK, SONS & CO., LTD. (1930), 142 L. T. 506; 15 Tax Cas. 431, C. A.

204h. —— —— ——.]—The taxpayer's wife succeeded on Feb. 1, 1924, to a business previously carried on by her father. Accounts of the business were made up for the eleven months to Dec. 31, 1924, & thereafter annually to Dec. 31, until Dec. 31, 1927. The taxpayer was assessed to income tax in respect of the profits of this business for the years 1927–28 & 1928–29 by reference to the profits of the preceding years ended Dec. 31, 1926, & Dec. 31, 1927, respectively. He appealed to the General Comrs. against the 1927–28 assessment & to the Special Comrs. against the 1928–29 assessment, claiming in respect of each year that he was entitled to be assessed on the average of the three preceding years by reference to Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), s. 29 (3). The General Comrs. allowed the appeal for 1927–28. The Special Comrs. refused the appeal for 1928–29. Appeals were entered against each decision:—Held: as the taxpayer was not in possession of the business during any part of the six years preceding the three years upon the average of which he would have been assessed for 1927–28, i.e., the three years ended Dec. 31, 1926, the case did not fall within the application of sect. 29 (3).—ALLEN v. MARGOLINSKY, MARGOLINSKY v. ALLEN (1931), 16 Tax Cas. 77.

204j. —— —— Validity of notice—Notice by accountants.]—A firm of chartered accountants had been employed by applt. co. as their accountants & auditors for many years. They had each year interviewed & corresponded with the appropriate inspector of taxes with regard to the co.'s income tax liabilities with a view to agreement as to the figures upon which liability was to be based. All returns were signed by the co.'s duly authorised officer. The co. was admittedly entitled to exercise the option with regard to the basis of assessment afforded by Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), s. 29 (3), if it so desired.

The accountants informed the inspector in two letters dated Oct. 3 & 4, 1927, that the co. claimed "to be charged for the year 1927–28" as if sect. 29 had not been passed. No reference was made to the year 1928–29.

In a letter dated Oct. 25, 1927, the accountants purported to withdraw the claim. The amount of the liability for the year 1927–28 computed on the average basis was greater than the amount on the preceding year basis. The co. appealed against an additional assessment for the year 1927–28 on the difference between these amounts, contending, inter alia, that the accountants had no authority to give the notice required by the sect. & that valid & effective notice was not given. It was not suggested that the accountants had specific authority to lodge the notice or that the co. had confirmed the accountants' action:—Held: the accountants had not a general authority to bind the taxpayer in the matter; they had not been held out as having such authority; & further the notices were invalid as purporting to be made by reference to one year only. Rubber Estates, Ltd., commenced to trade on July 16, 1925. The co. claimed that the assessment made upon it under sched. D for the year 1927–28 should be reduced to the amount of the profits of the year of assessment, on the ground that sect. 23 of Finance Act, 1927, extended the application of proviso (a) of sect. 29 (1) of Finance Act, 1926, so as to cover any case where a trade had been set up or commenced within the period of two years referred to in sect. 23. The special comrs. on appeal refused the co.'s claim:—Held: sect. 23 of Finance Act, 1927, did not so extend the application of proviso (a) of sect. 29 (1) of Finance Act, 1926.—KUALA MUDA RUBBER ESTATES, LTD. v. TODD (1930), 15 Tax Cas. 440.

An understanding, conditional upon the success of certain general negotiations in progress, was reached in Mar. 1919, as to a new schedule of prices to take effect as from May 1, 1919. A definitive agreement was signed in Dec. 1925, & was deemed to have come into operation on Dec. 31, 1920. For some time after May 1, 1919, ironstone was invoiced by the co. to its customers at the

ab. Informal arrangement during coal strike.]—A Glasgow coal merchant & a London firm of coal exporters & importers made, during a coal strike, an informal business arrangement, the main feature of which was that coal was invoiced by the firm to the merchant at cost, the merchant to pay also to the firm one-half of whatever net excess over this cost price he might obtain from his customers. The arrangement continued for a few months only & was brought to an end by an accounting & division of profits between the parties. The special comrs. on appeal proceedings decided that, having regard to all the facts of the conduct of the business between the parties, the trade in question was carried on jointly within r. 10, Rules applicable to Cases I. & II., Sched. D, & they found as a fact that the transactions involved were partnership transactions. An assessment was accordingly confirmed charging the total profits in one sum separately from any other liabilities of the parties:—Held: the evidence justified the comrs.' decision.—GARDNER (JOHN) & BOWRING, HARDY & CO., LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. old prices; but during subsequent accounting periods the co. was paid, by instalments, a sum representing the difference between the invoiced prices & the prices calculated according to the schedule agreed in Mar. 1919. On appeal against certain estimated assessments to income tax, the co. contended that this sum was received as a capital payment & not as the price of ironstone; or, alternatively, that the instalments could only be brought into account in the years in which they were paid. The Special Comrs. held that the amount in question was a revenue payment & must be related to the period during which the ironstone, by reference to which the sum was calculated, was delivered:—Held: the Special Comrs.' decision was correct.—FRODINGHAM IRONSTONE MINES, LTD. v. STEWART (1932), 16 Tax Cas. 728.

It was assessed in respect of the profits of the trade carried on in the United Kingdom:—Held: the Société was a legal person distinct from the individuals composing it & the profits in question were not the profits of a partnership within sect. 20 of 1918 Act.—DREYFUS (C. Commencement of partnership.]—Applt., who had for many years carried on, solely, a practice as solr., informed his son on Dec. 31, 1928, that it was his intention to take him into partnership as from that date & on Jan. 1, 1929, instructed another firm of solrs., by letter, to draft a partnership deed. The deed, which was expressed to have effect as from Jan. 1, 1929, was executed on May 11, 1929. No formal notice of the partnership was at any time given by advertisement, circular or otherwise. No alteration of the name under which the practice was carried on, or in the business bank account, was made until after the date of the partnership deed. From Dec. 31, 1928, the son was credited with the share of profits to which he was entitled under the partnership deed. Applt. appealed to the General Comrs. against an assessment to income tax, Sched. D., made upon him for the year 1929–30, contending that a partnership existed between himself & his son as from Jan. 1, 1929. The Comrs. held that for income tax purposes the partnership commenced on May 11, 1929, the date of the partnership deed:—Held: the partnership constituted by the deed commenced on the date of the deed & there was no evidence before the comrs. of the existence of a partnership before that date.—WADDINGTON v. O'CALLAGHAN (1931), 16 Tax Cas. 187.

—— Whether profits in year of assessment may be considered.]—On Mar. 1, 1919, a firm set up a new trade. On Dec. 31, 1919, they made up the first account of the trade for the ten months from Mar. 1, 1919, to Dec. 31, 1919, that account showing a profit for that period of £1,000. The firm sold the trade as from Jan. 1, 1920, to a co. consisting of the same persons. The co. made up an account of the profits of their trade for three months from Jan. 1, 1920, to Mar. 31, 1920, showing a profit for those three months of over £12,000. For the year ending Apr. 5, 1919, the assessment to income tax under 1918 Act, Sched. D., was made on the firm in a sum equal to a proportionate part, from Mar. 1 to Apr. 5, of the profits shown by the account to Dec. 1919, & it was agreed that that was correct. For year ending Apr. 5, 1920, assessments were made on the firm & the co. on a sum representing twelve-thirteenths of the profits shown by combining the two accounts for the respective periods of ten months & three months, that sum being apportioned between the firm & the co. according to their respective liabilities. The firm & co. appealed against the assessments on the ground that they ought to have been made on a sum representing twelve-tenths of the sum shown in the account for the ten months from Mar. 1 to Dec. 31, 1919, & the comrs. acceded to this argument:—Held: upon the true construction of r. 1 (2) of the rules applicable to Cases I. & II., except in the case of a trade set up within the year of assessment, the profits should be computed without bringing in any profits of the year of assessment.—CLARE & HEYWORTH v. BETTS, [1927] A. 210a. - ——.]—Resp. co. was incorporated & commenced trading on Aug. 16, 1926. Its first account, for the period from Aug. 16, 1926, to Mar. 31, 1927, showed a loss & its second account, for the year ended Mar. 31, 1928, showed a profit. The co., on an appeal against an assessment for 1927–28 in respect of its trading profit contended that, having regard to the decision in the case of Betts v. Clare & Heyworth, No. 210, its liability for that year should be computed solely by reference to the account for the period ended Mar. 31, 1927. The Crown contended that the liability should be based on the results for the year ended Aug. 15, 1927, ascertained, in accordance with Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), s. 35, by the inclusion in respect of the period Apr. 1 to Aug. 15, 1927, of the appropriate proportion of the profit shown by the account for the year ended Mar. 31, 1928 :— Held : as a result of the amendments to r. 1 (2) of the rules applicable to Cases I. & II. of Sched. D. effected by Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), s. 36, & Sched. IV., the decision in the case of Betts v. Clare & Heyworth, No. 210, had no application, & the 1927–28 assessment should be computed in accordance with the Crown's contentions.—MANSON v. PERRYS (EALING), LTD. (1931), 16 Tax Cas. 60.

210b. —— —— Power to make additional assessment.]—Changes in the constitution of a firm took place on Mar. 21, 1929, & Mar. 20, 1930. On the occasion of the first change, no notice under the proviso to r. 11 (1) of the rules applicable to Cases I. & II. of Sched. D. was given ; on the occasion of the second change, such notice was given. The assessment for the year 1929–30 was accordingly made under Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), s. 31 (1) (a), on the actual profits of the year of assessment, & an additional assessment for the year 1928–29 was made, under sect. 31 (1) (b) in an amount which represented the excess of the actual profits of the year 1928–29 over the amount of the original assessment for that year. This additional assessment was made upon the firm which carried on the business between the first & second changes, i.e., from Mar. 21, 1929, to Mar. 20, 1930. The original assessment for the year 1928–29 was made upon the firm which carried on the business up to Mar. 21, 1929, & was not apportioned under r. 9. The firm appealed against the additional assessment, contending that they were never charged for the year 1928–29 & could not, therefore, be subjected to an additional assessment under sect. 31 (1) (b). The Special Comrs. upheld this contention & discharged the additional assessment : — Held : that the Special Comrs.' decision was correct.—OSLER v. HALL & CO. (1932), 17 Tax. Cas. 68.

210c. —— Partnership.]—By a deed dated Nov. 22, 1922, A. & B., partners in a firm, dissolved partnership as from Apr. 1, 1922. Upon the dissolution of the partnership A. continued to carry on business at the firm's address, but from Nov. 22, 1922, until his death in June, 1923, B. carried on, in his own name at his private address, a small amount of business previously done by the firm. By a deed dated Dec. 15, 1922, A. took C. into partnership as from Apr. 1, 1922. An assessment having been made on the firm for 1922–23 upon the average of the profits for the three years ended Mar. 31, 1922, the comrs. found that the partnership between A. & B. was not dissolved until Nov. 22, 1922, & that there had been no discontinuance of the business, but that A. had succeeded to the business of A. & B., & that A. & C. had succeeded to the business carried on by A. after the dissolution of his partnership with B. :—Held : there was evidence upon which the comrs. could come to their conclusions, & they had not misdirected themselves in law.—FARADAY, RODGERS & ELLER v. CARTER (1927), 11 Tax Cas. 565, C. A.

210d. —— Absence of formal contract.]—During Mar. 1928, there were negotiations & detailed correspondence between the resp. co. & another co. who were proposing to purchase the business of resp. co., culminating in a letter dated Mar. 21, 1928, in which the prospective purchasers indicated that the terms contained in the correspondence, & as arranged at interviews between the parties, were generally accepted " subject to such terms being fully set out in a formal contract or agreement, to be submitted to us & finally approved of." On Mar. 29, 1928, two of the directors of resp. co. resigned & entered the service of the purchasers. On Mar. 30 resps. gave notice to their foreign agents terminating their engagements. The formal contract was dated Apr. 16, 1928. Resp. co. were assessed for the year 1927–28 in accordance with the provisions of rule 11 (2) on the footing that the succession took place after Apr. 5, 1928. The General Comrs. allowed their appeal against this assessment, finding that a contract for the sale & purchase of the business existed before Apr. 6, 1928. The Crown appealed :—Held : the correspondence did not constitute a contract & that there was no evidence of a de facto succession before Apr. 6.—TODD v. JONES BROS., LTD. (1930), 15 Tax Cas. 396.

210e. —— Purchase from liquidator.] — A co. carried on business as (a) motor engineers, (b) cinema theatre proprietors, &, until a short time before going into liquidation, (c) haulage contractors & char-a-banc proprietors. On the liquidation of the co. applts. purchased the co.'s lands & property & stock-in-trade, the purchase-price being £16,000, of which £15,850 was stated, in the agreement of sale, to be in respect of lands & property, & £150 in respect of stock. Applts. retained the co.'s employees & continued without any interruption the work in the co.'s hands. They carried on business as motor engineers & as cinema theatre proprietors but not at any time as haulage contractors & char-a-banc proprietors. The General Comrs. held that applts. had not succeeded to the business previously carried on by the co. :—Held : there were no grounds for disturbing the Comrs.' decision as being erroneous in point of law.—WILSON & BARLOW v. CHIBBETT (1929), 14 Tax Cas. 407.

210f. Transfer of tied houses to different brewery.]—Applt. co., a brewery co., acquired the control of another co., the B. Brewery Co. by an arrangement whereby the shareholders in the latter exchanged their shares for shares in applt. co. The B. Co. then leased its brewery & its tied houses, comprising the whole of its property, licensed & unlicensed, to applt. co. at an annual rent. Applt. co. supplied its own products to the tied houses, which became " tied " to them, & brewing at the B. Co.'s brewery immediately ceased. Shortly after the date of the lease applt. co. purchased all the stock & loose effects of the B. co., & about a year later they purchased the brewery at a valuation, the lease, as regards the brewery, thus only remaining in effect for about eighteen months. Applt. co. appealed against assessments made on the footing that it had succeeded to the business of the B. Co. & that accordingly in arriving at applt. co.'s liability the profits of the B. Co. should be brought into the computation. The General Comrs. held that the assessments had been correctly so made :—Held : the matter was primarily a question of fact & there were no grounds for disturbing the Comrs.' decision.—SHIPSTONE (JAMES) & SONS, LTD. v. MORRIS (1929), 4 Tax Cas. 413.

A co. was incorporated in Jan. 1920, to take over the assets & business of a former cotton spinning co. The old co. had been very prosperous, its profits for the years 1912 to 1917 inclusive having averaged nearly £7,000 a year. For the three years 1918 to 1920 inclusive the average was about £22,000. The undertaking of the new co. proved unsuccessful, & for the year ending Feb. 26. 1921, it made a loss of £11,268. The co. having been assessed to income tax in respect of that year in the sum of £16,459, being £22,000 the average of the preceding three years less £6,000 depreciation, appealed, & contended that it was entitled to relief under the r. 11 of the rules applicable to Cases I. and II. of Sched. D. It appeared that in the latter half of 1919 & the first half of 1920 there was an extraordinary boom in the cotton trade & in trade generally in the United Kingdom, but this was followed, as the comrs. found, by a depression in the cotton trade since Jan. 1920, which was extraordinary & abnormal, & did not arise merely from the ordinary fluctuations in business the comrs. further found that the profits & gains of the co.'s business had fallen short since that date from some specific cause (the depression) within the meaning of r. 11 :—Held : (1) the findings of the comrs. justified them in giving special relief provided by r. 11, inasmuch as the co. had fulfilled requirements of both limbs of the rule, namely, it had shown that it had succeeded to a business previously carried on, & had established by evidence, which was accepted by the comrs., that the depression was abnormal ; (2) an ordinary fluctuation in trade is not a " specific cause " within the meaning of r. 11, but an abnormal & extraordinary depression if accepted & so found by the comrs. may be so.

Per SCRUTTON, L.J. : " Specific cause " in r. 11 in itself means a precisely stated definite cause as distinguished from a mere statement " I have lost profits, because I have made less money," or words to that effect.—ELLIOTT v. DUCHESS MILL, LTD., [1927] 1 K. 212a. -.]—Held : in order to establish that there has been a falling short of the profits or gains of a trade within the exception to r. 11 of the Rules applicable to Cases I. & II. of Sched. D., it has only to be shown that the profits or gains in the year of assessment have fallen short from some specific cause, & not that the aggregate profits or gains since the change have so fallen short ; & if the profits or gains in the year of assessment are found to have fallen short from some specific cause, income tax is computed on the actual profits or gains of that year instead of on the average of the three preceding years.—KNEESHAW v. CLAY & HORSFALL, [1929] 1 K. D., for 1927–28 on the profits of the respective businesses for the year ended Dec. 31, 1926. In each case the coal strike of 1926 has enabled large profits to be made during that year & the cessation of the conditions which had obtained during the strike was alleged as a " specific cause " in support of a claim under r. 11 for 1927–28 :—Held : the cause alleged was a " specific cause " within r. 11.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. ANDERSON (A. & G.), FREW (ALEXANDER) & CO., LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 213 ii. ——.]—A firm of manufacturing confectioners, in which changes of partnership had taken place, claimed that a falling short of profits was due to two specific causes, (1) an increase in the price of sugar due to interference with the Cuban supplies by the American Govt., the formation of a speculative ring in New York, & curtailment of European supplies owing to the French occupation of the Ruhr, & (2) an increase in bad debts caused by the failure of inexperienced venturers in the confectionery trade :—Held : (1) the expression " specific cause " denoted an exceptional circumstance, which could be clearly identified, & to which the shortage of profits could substantially be attributed ; (2) the causes of the falling off of profits alleged were not " specific causes."—STEWART & YOUNG v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1926] S. 217a. —— Advances made to company by company's solicitors.]—A firm of writers to the signet advanced money from time to time without security & without any written acknowledgment to a limited co. for which they had acted as law agents since its inception. The co. failed, & the advances were irrecoverable. On an appeal to the General Comrs. from an assessment to income tax under Sched. D. the firm claimed that the amount of the advances was a permissible deduction in ascertaining their profits & gains as writers to the signet:—Held: the loss was not a permissible deduction, as it did not represent moneys wholly & exclusively laid out or expended for the purposes of the firm's profession within r. 3 of the rules applicable to Cases I. & II.—HAGART & BURN-MURDOCH v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1929] A. 217b. Rent—Proviso for abatement if profits insufficient.]—Resp. co. was assessed to income tax for the years 1923–24 & 1924–25 under Sched. D. of 1918 Act, in respect of its profits in the respective sums of £800,000, less £450,000 wear & tear of plant & machinery & £800,000, less £350,000 for wear & tear. The co. claimed that as it had paid in 1922 & 1923 two sums of £630,000 & £960,000 respectively under a lease dated Dec. 29, 1921, those sums ought to be allowed as deductions from the profits in the years of assessment. The co., under the terms of that lease, was in possession of a very large number of properties in different parts of the world used by it for the purposes of its trade & for which under the lease it had to pay £960,000 a year. The document of Dec. 29, 1921, was in the form of a strict lease, but contained a proviso that if the profits of the business of the co. after providing for the rent therein reserved, should be insufficient to enable the co. to pay interest on debenture stock & specific mtges., the dividend on preference shares, & a dividend of 10 per cent. on ordinary shares, then the rent should be abated to the extent of the deficiency ascertained. The comrs. held that the payments of £630,000 & £960,000 were not payments antecedent to or necessary to earn profits, but contingent payments dependent on & payable only out of profits earned & were not allowable deductions from profits assessable to income tax:—Held: the real substance of the transaction was that in the events specified there should be a rebate of the rent, & whatever was the rent after the application of that rebate was still to be paid and it still remained an expense necessarily incurred in earning the trading profits of the co.—ADAMSON v. UNION COLD STORAGE CO., LTD. 217c. Excess profits duty—Holding company & subsidiary company.]—The whole of the share capital of resp. co. was held by another co., which accordingly was assessed to & paid excess profits duty on the profits of the two cos. as though the subsidiary co. were a branch of the main co. In the computation of the main co.'s income tax liabilities on the three years' average basis, allowance for excess profits duty paid was made in the same manner as a deduction would be allowed for an ordinary outgoing in the course of trade. The main co. went into voluntary liquidation in 1918, liability to income tax ceasing before Apr. 6, 1918. In consequence of the operation of the average basis for income tax, the main co. had received effective benefit in respect of a part only of the excess profits duty paid. Resp. co. claimed deductions in the computation of its income tax liabilities for subsequent years in respect of the excess profits duty paid, for which allowance had not effectively been given to the main co., in so far as such duty was attributable to its own profits. The General Comrs. on appeal allowed the claim & the Crown appealed:—Held: the co. was not entitled to any deduction.—OGSTON v. REYNOLDS, SONS & CO., LTD., REYNOLDS, SONS & CO., LTD. v. OGSTON (1930), 15 Tax Cas. 501, C. 220a. Quarry — Railway freights — Rebates — Whether capital repayments or discounts.]—Resp. co. purchased in Oct. 1924, certain quarries formerly owned & worked by a private firm, &, by arrangement with the parties concerned, took over their predecessors' rights & obligations under certain agreements made in 1921 & 1924 between the predecessors & a railway co. The agreements in question provided for the construction of siding accommodation at the quarries. The cost of construction was borne by the firm, & the railway co. agreed to allow to the firm at half-yearly intervals, as from Sept. 30, 1924, sums equal to 10 per cent. of the railway co.'s share of the receipts in respect of traffic conveyed to or from the siding, until the expiration of ten years from Sept. 30, 1924, or until the total amounts allowed to the firm should be equal to specified amounts expended by the firm in connection with the siding construction. Resp. co. received from the railway co. in the years 1927 & 1928 allowances calculated by reference to the terms of the work in this connection. The advances were not made by the firm as factors for the co. The co. having failed, the loans became irrecoverable, & the firm claimed to deduct the loss thus incurred in arriving at the profits of their profession for income tax purposes:—Held: the advances were not money "wholly & exclusively laid out for purposes" of business & the deduction of them was inadmissible.—INLAND [illegible] B., [1929]

Where a deduction of an amount so fixed has been disallowed in part, & the evidence is not confined to proof of the resolution & payment thereunder, the question is whether the co. fully satisfied the onus under sects. 14 & 25 of showing that the assessment is excessive; in the present case that onus was not discharged.—ASPRO, LTD. v. TAXES COMR., [1932] A. 224a. —— —— ——.]—Applt. co. was a member of the Cold Rolled Brass & Copper Assocn., an unincorporated body having as its objects the fixing of prices for goods manufactured by its members, & the provision of a common fund to be applied in the interests of its members. The common fund consisted of members' entrance fees & monthly payments proportional to output tonnage, & in the event of the Association being wound up was distributable between the members in proportion to their contributions. In 1918 the Ministry of Munitions had large surplus stocks of brass & copper & the Assocn. was specially authorised by its members to negotiate with the Ministry in regard to its disposal. As a result the Assocn. contracted to purchase the metal from the Ministry at fixed prices per ton, & this contract, & also the draft arrangement for the disposal of the metal to the Assocn.'s members, were subsequently approved by the Assocn. in general meeting. By these arrangements members were given, firstly, an option of purchasing a quantity of the metal proportional to their monthly output, at prices scheduled by the Association varying according to quality & size, & secondly, an option to apply for any residue. The whole of the metal was thus disposed of by the Association at prices higher than those paid to the Ministry, & the "profit" was carried to the common fund. Applts. debited in their accounts the full cost of the metal purchased by them from the Assocn., & did not bring into the accounts their share in the "profit." They were assessed to income tax under Case I. of Sched. D. on the basis that they were entitled to deduct only the net cost of the metal, i.e. the full cost less their share in the "profit" :—Held : applts. were able to share in the distribution of the metal only on payment of the prices scheduled by the Assocn.; their share in the "profit" was in proportion, not to the price paid, but to the quantity taken; the profit carried to the common fund could not be regarded as the individual members' profit; & in the circumstances applts. were entitled to deduct as a business expense the price paid by them to the Assocn.—CLIFFORD & SON, LTD. v. PUTTICK, CLIFFORD & SON, LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. Subscription to guarantee fund of British Empire Exhibition.]—Applts., asphalters, subscribed to the guarantee fund of the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley, solely, as the General Comrs. found, in the hope of obtaining preferential treatment in the allocation of contracts for asphalting work within the exhibition grounds. They did not in fact obtain any contract at all from the exhibition authorities. Having been called upon to pay a considerable part of the amount guaranteed they sought to deduct the sum so paid from their profits assessable to income tax as a trade expense. The General Comrs. held it was an allowable deduction :—Held : the question was one of fact, &, as there was evidence to support the finding of the General Comrs., their decision must be affirmed.—MORLEY v. LAWFORD & CO. exporter of cloth, habitually financed his shipments by drawing bills on the buyer in Shanghai & borrowing from a bank in London on the security of the bills & shipping documents. In 1920 a buyer became unable to meet his acceptances, & applt. found himself responsible to the bank for a large sum. In computing his assessable profits for the year ended Mar. 31, 1921, he was allowed to deduct a sum of £22,410, being the estimated amount of the bank's claim against him, but subsequently he advanced certain contentions against the bank & eventually, at the end of 1922, the bank accepted £8,000 in settlement of its claim. Applt. objected to additional assessments made in order to bring into charge the difference between the £8,000 & the £22,410 previously allowed, contending that the sums advanced by the bank were a liability for the year ended Mar. 31, 1921, & that the subsequent reduction of the debt was immaterial in determining his liability for that or any later year:—Held: applt.'s transactions with the bank constituted part of his business & that the loss incurred was a trading loss; & the computations for the purposes of income tax must be reopened & adjusted by reference to the actual amount of this loss.—BERNHARD v. GAHAN, BERNHARD v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 228a. —— Deduction of owner's rates.]—A co. owned & occupied for the purposes of their business certain lands & heritages which were "mills, factories or other similar premises" within 1918 Act. The annual value of those mills & factories was £5,976, & the co. paid owner's rates in respect of these premises to the amount of £1,752 annually. Both in 1927 & 1928 the co. were, for the purposes of Sched. A, allowed to deduct the sum of £1,752 paid by them in respect of owner's rates from their assessment of £5,976, & in making their return for Sched. D they claimed to be allowed to deduct the £5,976 as the annual value of the premises & also the £1,752 as disbursement of money wholly & exclusively laid out or expended for the purposes of the trade:—Held: the owner's rates payable by a trader who owns the premises in which he conducts his trade are not a permissible deduction in the computation of his profits & gains for the purpose of assessment under Sched. The lessors reserved the right in certain circumstances to terminate the lease at six months' notice. If this right were exercised all future instalments of the premium were to be cancelled. In negotiations before the terms of the lease were settled there had been a provisional agreement under which a rent was to have been paid equal to the total annual payments of rent & premium secured by the lease. 249a. Payment to agent to terminate agency.]—The Anglo-Persian Oil Co. paid to its agents in Persia the sum of £300,000, in compensation for the latter relinquishing a contract of agency. The co. treated that sum in its books as a payment out of revenue, & charged instalments of £60,000 to revenue account during each of the following five years. The Crown claimed that these were not permissible deductions, but should be placed to capital account :—Held : the question was not entirely one of fact, on which the decision of the comrs. was binding, for questions as to what are, or are not, permissible deductions turn upon certain defined principles of law, as laid down by LORD CAVE in British Insulated & Helsby Cables, Ltd. v. Atherton, No. 264; (2) is making the payment the co. was not enlarging its operations, nor improving its goodwill. It was not, within the meaning of LORD CAVE in Atherton's Case, "bringing into existence an asset or an advantage for the enduring benefit of its trade." 254a. Nature of estimate to be made.]—Applts. were assessed under Sched. D. for the years 1921–22 & 1922–23 on the basis of a writing down in two years successively of a doubtful debt. That was done by agreement with the inspector of taxes, who had all the facts before him. Subsequently, by additional first assessments, the writing down of the doubtful debt was disallowed, on the ground that since the writing down of the debt was allowed, it has come to the surveyor's knowledge that applts. had permitted the debtors to increase their indebtedness to them. On an appeal against the additional first assessments, the General Comrs. were not satisfied that the debt or any part of its had been proved to be a bad debt within the meaning of r. 3 (i) of Cases I. & II. of Sched. D., & they confirmed the additional first assessments:—Held: (1) the General Comrs. had not considered the right question. The question which they ought to have considered & decided was whether there had been a "discovery" by the surveyor within sect. 125 of 1918 Act. If they had considered that question there was no evidence which would have supported a decision in favour of the inspector of taxes. The word "discovers" does not mean a mere change of opinion on the same facts & figures. To justify an additional assessment the surveyor must ascertain some new fact which, if it had been known when the original assessment was made, would have resulted in an increased assessment; (2) an estimate of the value of a debt made in 1923 & 1924 on the then facts & probabilities was not overthrown by a finding of the General Comrs. that in 1930 it had not been proved that the debt or any part of it was a bad debt within the meaning of the rule. What the statute requires is an estimate of the extent to which a debt is bad for a profit & loss account. Such an estimate is not a prophecy to be judged by after events, but a valuation of the debt as an asset, to be judged as an estimate on the existing facts & probabilities.—ANDERTON & HALSTEAD, LTD. v. BIRRELL, [1932] 1 K. 263a. -.]—A co. in 1883 inaugurated a scheme under which pensions were paid to its employees who had retired or become incapacitated, but reserving an uncontrolled discretion to vary or cease payment of such pensions. The payment of such pensions had ever since 1883 been a recurring business expense, & the pensions paid had been debited to the profit & loss accounts under the heading of wages, & were admitted to have been proper deductions in computing the profits of the co. for income tax purposes. In 1918 the co. entered into an arrangement with an insurance co. whereby the insurance co. undertook, in consideration of the sum of £23,100 paid to it by the co., to pay to the co. during the remainder of the lives of the persons who were receiving pensions, & who were named in the sched. to the policy, annuities which were equal in amount to

During the first year of the arrangement the directors authorised him to draw two sums on account of his commission, & in subsequent years he drew sums on this account without special authority but with the knowledge of the directors. These sums were debited to a commission account. During the year ending Dec. 31, 1923, he drew out £5,141 in sums varying between £150 & £400. It was subsequently ascertained that no commission was due for that year, & the commission account showed a balance due by him to the co. of £3,391. the pensions which were being paid by the co. in pursuance of its pension scheme. The amounts received from the insurance co. under the policy were paid direct to the co., & payments equivalent to the annuities received from the insurance co. were made by the co. to the pensioners. The co. had full power to stop the payment of any pension in case of misconduct, but in fact no pension had been withdrawn. The pensioners did not at any time know of the existence of the policy. The co. had power in certain events to cancel the policy & claim repayment of part of the purchase money. p i. —— Separate assessments under Schedules B. & D.]—A farmer bred horses & cattle on a considerable scale. He used his stallions for his own horse-breeding purposes, & also earned fees by sending them on journeys for the service of other owners' mares. In this connection he kept a reserve of stallions to replace any which might become incapacitated. All his stallions, of which only a small proportion earned fees, formed part of one undivided stud. He was assessed to income tax, on the profits of his general farming business under Schedule B., & on the profits of his fee-earning stallions under Schedule D. As a method of fixing the amount of profits assessable under the latter Schedule, the comrs. determined to regard a certain number of stallions as exclusively used in earning fees, & to allow the deduction of the cost of their full upkeep & attendance, & to provide for replacements by allowing a similar deduction in respect of other stallions in the stud to the extent of one-third of the number of travelling stallions. The farmer contended that his stallion-owning business should be treated as entirely separate from his farming business, & that the whole of the expenses & losses connected with his stallions should be set against the revenue derived from them:—Held: it was primarily a question for the comrs. to determine, & no cause had been shown for disturbing their determination.—MARSHALL v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1927] S. 292b. —— Loss on individual rents of tied houses—No loss on aggregate rents.]—A brewery co. owned freehold & leasehold licensed houses, which they let to tenants who were tied to the co. for all the beer, wines, & spirits sold on the premises let to them. Under the decision in Usher's Wiltshire Brewery, Ltd. v. Bruce, No. 287, the co., where rent was forgone by reason of the tie, was entitled, in the computation of the profits of the trade for assessment under Sched. D. to income tax, to a deduction of the difference between the Sched. A. assessment of its freehold houses or the rents paid by the co. for its leasehold houses, on the one hand, & the rents received by it from the tied tenants, on the other hand, as an expense wholly incurred for the purposes of its trade. Some of the tied tenants paid premiums, & it was admitted, in the course of the hearing, that they must be taken into account in determining whether rent had been forgone by the co. by reason of the tie. In some cases the co. suffered a loss in respect of rent forgone, but in other cases the rents received by the co. exceeded the annual value or the rent paid by the co., as the case might be. In assessing the co. to income tax under Case I. of Sched. D. the Crown claimed that the amount of such excess should be brought into account under Sched. D., but so far only as was required to wipe out the debit above mentioned, & that for this purpose the whole of the houses must be aggregated:—Held: the claim of the Crown failed, on the ground that the profits & gains arising from the ownership of land, whether used for the purposes of trade or not, were determined exclusively by reference to annual value under Sched. A., & accordingly the rents received could not be included in an account under Sched. D. of the profits & gains of the trade for the purposes of which the land was used.—HOARE & Co., LTD. v. COLLYER, [1932] A. C. 407; 101 L. J. K. B. 274; 146 L. T. 469; 48 T. L. R. 256; 76 Sol. 295a. —— Mutual insurance—Surplus from other business done with fire policy holders—Whether liable to tax.]—The main object of applt. co. which was incorporated as a co. limited by guarantee & not having a capital divided into shares, was to enable local authorities & other public bodies by co-operation to insure against fire & other risks on the most favourable terms. Since 1913 the co. had, in addition to the fire insurance business conducted on the mutual system, carried on an extensive business of a miscellaneous character & particularly employers' liability business. Considerable profits were derived from this miscellaneous business, & it was admitted that in general applts. were liable to be assessed to income tax in respect of these profits, but they claimed to be exempt in respect of any surplus arising from employers' liability or other miscellaneous business done with fire policy holders:—Held: as the principle of mutual insurance did not apply either to the employers' liability business or to the miscellaneous business, inasmuch as the fire policy holders in a body had not contributed, the surplus arising from any part of that business must be treated as profit & gains under Sched. D. & chargeable to income tax accordingly.—MUNICIPAL MUTUAL INSURANCE, LTD. v. HILLS (1932), 147 L. T. 62; 48 T. L. R. 301; 16 Tax Cas. 430, H. L.

307a. Accident Insurance—Mutual society.]—A mutual insurance assocn. was formed, its sole activity being the indemnity of its members, who were coal-owners, against liability for compensation in respect of fatal accidents to workmen. The members of the assocn. were the persons protected by it, every member being liable to contribute a sum not exceeding £25 in the event of a winding up. The assocn. formed a general fund by making calls upon members proportionate to the wages paid in their works for the time being, & the balance of the ordinary call fund was transferred to a reserve fund, into which any extraordinary calls were also paid. A member, on retirement, was entitled to get back in cash a proportion of his share in the above reserve fund, but, apart from this, members had no right at all to the cash in the reserve fund, though the interest accruing on the reserve fund could be used in diminution of members' calls:—Held: (1) the sums paid by the members to the assocn. were admissible deductions in computing the profits made by a member for the purpose of assessment to income tax, as the money was laid out by the respective members on a true insurance principle; (2) the surplus funds of the assocn. were not assessable to income tax, as the assocn. was mere machinery for the purpose of enabling subscribing members to insure themselves.—THOMAS v. EVANS (RICHARD) & CO., JONES v. SOUTH-WEST LANCASHIRE COAL OWNERS' ASSOCN., [1927] 1 K. 307b. Marine insurance company—Building ships—Cancellation of shipbuilding contracts.]—A marine insurance co., having entered into contracts for the building of four ships, accepted delivery of two of the ships & then, owing to a slump in the shipping trade, cancelled the contracts for the other two ships on payment of £70,000. It was contended that a new business of dealing in ships had been begun by the co., & that the £70,000 was a proper deduction in arriving at its profits:—Held: the co. was not carrying on any trade, from the profits of which the £70,000 was an admissible deduction.—DEVON MUTUAL STEAMSHIP INSURANCE ASSOCN. v. OGG (1927), 13 Tax Cas. 184.

309a. Loss on investments—What amounts to.]—Applts., an insurance co., had investments in British railway stocks, & it was admitted by the Crown that any loss suffered by applts. on such investments was deductible from their profits for purposes of income tax. The result of Railways Act, 1921 (c. 55), was that applts. received in exchange for their various railway holdings stocks in the four amalgamated railway cos. created by that Act. The market value of these new stocks was less than the original cost to applts. of the old stocks, & they claimed that the loss so occasioned to them should be allowed as a deduction from their profits for 1922 & 1923 in computing their income tax liability:—Held: as the effect of what had happened was that the old investments had been closed & realised, & new investments had been begun, applts. were entitled to the deduction claimed.—ROYAL INSURANCE CO., LTD. v. STEPHEN (1928), 44 T. By agreement between himself, his co-trustees & the beneficiaries, his remuneration was calculated as a percentage of the annual income of the trust funds, which income had already been brought into charge to tax:—Held: this remuneration was chargeable to income tax against the solr. under 1918 Act, Schedule D, Case II., as his profits or earnings arising from an employment, & was not constituted of annual payments payable wholly out of profits or gains brought into charge to tax within Rules applicable to all Schedules, r. 19.—JONES v. WRIGHT (1927), 139 L. 317a. —— —— —— Different holdings of War Loan.]—Applt., who owned £2,350 5 per cent. War Loan inscribed in the books of the Bank of England, in June, 1924, converted this holding into 4½ per cent. Conversion Loan, the interest on which was payable under deduction of income tax. Applt., however, continued throughout the year 1925-26 to hold a small amount of 5 per cent. War Loan Post Office issue, to which he had succeeded on the death of his daughter, & which he was not aware he could convert:—Held: applt. continued throughout the year 1925-26 to hold the same source of income, i.e., 5 per cent. War Loan, & under Schedule D, Case III., r. 2, he was assessable to income tax for that year in the full amount of the interest received from such War Loan in the preceding year.—TURTON v. MITCHELL (1927), 138 L. 317b. —— —— —— ——.]—The words "interest . . . on any securities issued under the War Loan Acts, 1914 to 1917," in 1918 Act, Sched D, Case III., r. 1 (f), designated one taxable subject-matter & not several sources of income.

A taxpayer was the holder of a number of 5 per cent. National War Bonds, 1928 (Third Series). These bonds were on Dec. 1, 1924, converted into 5 per cent. War Loan Stock, 1929-47. The taxpayer in the following year purchased additional 5 per cent. War Loan Stock, 1929-47. Both the 5 per cent. National War Bonds, 1928, & the 5 per cent. War Loan Stock, 1929-47, were securities issued under the War Loan Acts. A question arose whether they were of the same class or source for the purposes of rr. 1 & 2 applicable to Case III. of Sched. D of the Income Tax Act. The taxpayer contended that they were the same source, & therefore the assessment for the year in question should be computed on the basis of the income arising within the year preceding the year of assessment. The Crown, on the other hand, contended that the income arising from 5 per cent. National War Bonds & 5 per cent. War Loan Stock was income arising from different sources, & therefore the assessment for the year in question ought to be computed on the income of the year of assessment:—Held: as both the 5 per cent. National War Bonds, 1928, & the 5 per cent. War Loan Stock, 1929-47, were securities issued under the War Loan Acts, 1914 to 1917, the interest arising from those securities arose from the same source & ought not to be split up for the purpose of charging income tax.—MERRIFIELD v. WALLPAPER MANUFACTURERS, LTD., [1931] 2 K. 321c. —.]—In the first case the W. Bank during the war acquired as part of its assets certain National War Bonds of various issues. In pursuance of the right given by certain of these bonds, or of a similar right offered by the Govt., to convert the bonds into longer term securities, the Bank surrendered them & acquired in exchange certain Conversion Loan & War Loan. The latter securities were greater in value than the bonds surrendered. In assessing the Bank to income tax the profit made on these transactions was included in the assessment. On appeal by the Bank the Crown contended that on the occasion of each conversion the Bank had realised the bonds, & by receiving in exchange investments of greater value had thereby made a profit, & accordingly that such profit should be taken into account in arriving at the Bank's assessments to income tax. The Special Comrs. adopted the Crown's contention. In the second case the N. Bank appealed against similar findings with reference to similar transactions:—Held: the transactions in tax:—Held: the payment of the distributed dividend in question in this case, in bonds, does not bring the transaction within the "obligation" of the bond in question which introduces the exemption in taxes. Such payment is not the payment of the capital of the bond at maturity nor is it the payment of interest upon presentation & surrender of coupons which is what is exempt from taxation. The amount so received as dividend represented by said bonds was liable to income tax as profits & gains.—WATEROUS v. MINISTER OF NATIONAL REVENUE, [1931] Ex. C. R. 108.—CAN.

367a. —— Agreement to pay super-tax on wife's income in excess of specified sum—Whether husband entitled to marshal wife's income.]—A husband & wife lived apart upon the terms of a separation deed by which the husband covenanted during the joint lives of himself & his wife to pay to trustees for the benefit of the wife such a sum in each year as, after deducting income tax at the current rate, should amount to the sum of £3,000. Clause 11 of the deed was in these terms: "In addition to all other payments by this indenture agreed to be made by the husband or his representatives after his decease he or they shall pay & discharge all super-tax which shall be payable in respect of the income of either the husband or the wife except any super-tax in respect of any income of the wife not coming to her under or by virtue of this indenture in excess of £1,400 for any year." Apart from the deed the wife had an income exceeding £1,400 a year:—Held: in computing the super-tax payable by the husband in respect of the income of the wife, the husband was not entitled to marshal the component parts of the wife's income so that one part, namely, the annual amount payable under the deed plus £1,400, should be exempt from super-tax as to £2,000 thereof, & as to the balance should bear the lower rates of tax, & that the higher rate of tax should fall upon another part, namely, the excess of the wife's total income over the first-mentioned part; but clause 11 of the deed required that the whole super-tax payable in respect of the total income of the wife should be divided in the proportion which the amount of one of the above-mentioned parts of the wife's income bore to the amount of the other, & that the husband should pay super-tax in the proportion which the first-mentioned part bore to that secondly mentioned.—FLEETWOOD-HESKETH v. FLEETWOOD-HESKETH, [1929] 2 K. 369c. Payment of interest to debenture holders—Out of accumulated profits.]—The words "profits or gains brought into charge to tax" in rr. 19 & 20 of the All Schedules Rules to 1918 Act, mean profits or gains brought into charge to tax in the same year of assessment as the payment is made of the interest from which income tax is deducted.

A trading co. wrote off against capital depreciation a balance of £68,929 standing to the credit of its profit & loss account & representing accumulated past profits on which the co. had paid income tax in previous years. During years of charge the co. made no profits, but it paid debenture interest, deducting from the payments tax at the standard rate which is claimed to retain on the ground that the £68,929 was to be regarded as available for the payment of the interest, & that the interest was, therefore, "payable wholly out of profits or gains brought into charge to tax" within r. 19 of the All Schedules Rules under 1918 Act:—Held: as during each of the years of charge the co. had no profits or gains brought into charge to income tax, the interest had not been paid out of money already brought into tax within r. 19. The case, therefore, did not fall within r. 19, but within r. 21, by which the co. must account to the Crown for the amount of the tax which it had deducted.—LUIPAARD'S VLEI ESTATE & GOLD MINING CO., LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1930] 1 K. 380a. Instalments paid after death of moneylender —Instalments not representing capital.]—A moneylender made loans on promissory notes which provided for payment to him of monthly or more frequent instalments. Up to the date of his death he was assessed under Case I, Sched. D, in respect of the profits of this business, all instalments due & paid prior to his death being brought into the relative computations. Instalments falling due after his death were collected by the administrator of his estate but it was not suggested that the administrator was at any time carrying on any trade. Assessments were made on the administrator on the basis that so much of the instalments collected by him as did not represent repayment of capital was "interest of money" within rule 1, Case III., Sched. D. The administrator contended that the sums in question were not assessable as "interest of money" within Income Tax Acts :—Held : the sums in question were "interest" assessable under Case III.—BENNETT v. OGSTON (1930), 15 Tax Cas. 374.

391a. Payments in respect of user of patents.]—A French firm, which had acquired from an American owner of patent rights the sole right of manufacture & sale, in the "eastern hemisphere," of certain machinery, entered into an arrangement with applt. co. under which the co. was appointed as the agent of the firm for the manufacture & sale of the machinery in the parts of the British Empire within this area, which included the United Kingdom. The terms of this arrangement were agreed verbally in Paris, were subsequently embodied in a letter, written in Paris, from the firm to the co. & were accepted by the co. by a letter written in England. Under the arrangement, the selling price of the machinery was to be fixed by applt. co. whose manufacturing costs, plus overhead charges plus profit, were not to exceed certain specified percentages of the sales. Payments due by applt. co. to the French firm under the arrangement were in fact made direct to the American owner of the patent rights, the amounts due by the co. to the firm being the same as the amounts due by the firm to the American owner. The machines which formed the subject of the patent rights were manufactured in England & sold by the co. The co. appealed to the Special Comrs. against assessments made upon it under r. 21 of the General Rules, as amended by Finance Act, 1927 (c. 10), s. 26, to cover the payments under the arrangement, contending that the agreement between the French firm & the co. was made in France & that the payments under that agreement were not income arising from property in the United Kingdom :—Held : the payments under the agreement constituted income arising from property within the United Kingdom & were chargeable to income tax.—INTERNATIONAL COMBUSTION, LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. Act, 1899 (c. 14), to secure money advanced by the London County Council. The money so raised was used by resps. in connection with the construction of flats for the working classes in pursuance of a scheme prepared by them under Housing, Town Planning, etc., Act, 1919 (c. 35), s. 1. In making payments of interest on the sums advanced resps. deducted income tax under Rules applicable to all Schedules, r. 21. The interest was paid out of the general fund in the hands of resps.,

392 i. Annual payments partly paid out of taxed income.]—Applt. corpn. had raised the funds required for a housing scheme by borrowing a small portion from the Board of Public Works & as to the remainder by borrowing on mortgages secured on the revenue of the corpn. The revenue account of the scheme for the year in question showed a deficit which was eventually made good from public funds. The loan interest was due & was paid out of the borough fund before the subsidy was received. The total taxed income of the corpn. was sufficient to cover the whole of the loan interest payable. The corpn. was assessed under Finance Act, 1927 (c. 10), s. 26, on the same footing as in Birmingham Corpn. v. I. R. Comrs., No. 393b, & the assessment was upheld by the special comrs. on appeal. Resps. had only one banking account, out of which all payments, including the interest, were made & into which all receipts, including the profits & gains derived from resps.' electricity undertaking, or otherwise, were paid. No special fund in respect of any housing scheme was maintained. Resps. possessed profits or gains brought into charge to income tax sufficient for the payment of interest on the sums advanced, apart from any revenue derived under any housing scheme:—Held: as none of resps.' profits & gains other than the receipts of the housing scheme contributed to the payment of the interest, & as resps. had an indemnity against loss on the scheme, resps. were liable to account for the amount of the deductions.—DICKSON v. HAMPSTEAD BOROUGH COUNCIL (1927), 91 J. 393b. -.]—The Birmingham Corpn. undertook a Housing Scheme, under the provisions of the Town Planning Act, 1919 (c. 35), &, under the provisions of sect. 7. the Local Govt. Board undertook to, & did, refund to them, by means of an Exchequer subsidy, the loss thereby incurred. In order to finance the scheme, the corpn. issued housing bonds, & when paying interest upon them they deducted income tax. They alleged that that interest was paid out of their general borough fund, which was used in financing their markets, gas, electricity, tramways & other undertakings, & that as the income in respect of that fund & those undertakings had already been brought into charge for income tax purposes, they were entitled to retain the amounts deducted:—Held: as the corpn. had an indemnity against loss on the housing scheme the interest so paid could not be regarded as a general payment out of profits brought into charge, & the corpn. must account to the Revenue for the tax so deducted under rule 21 of the rules applicable to all Scheds.—BIRMINGHAM CORPN. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1929] 2 K. 394a. —— ——.]—The profits of the Metropolitan Water Board were assessable under 1918 Act, Schedule A., No. III., r. 3, by reference to the profits of the year preceding the year of assessment. The accounts of the Board for the year ending Mar. 31, 1922, showed a loss, & no assessment was made for the year ending Apr. 5, 1923. The accounts for the year ending Mar. 31, 1923, showed a profit of over two millions, out of which the Board paid over one million interest on water stock, & debentures, deducting & retaining the income tax thereon. On an information claiming that the Board was liable to account for the amount of the tax so deducted, the Board contended that the interest paid for the year 1922–23 was payable out of profits brought into charge for 1922–23 within Rules applicable to all Schedules, r. 19, & was in fact paid out of the profits for 1922–23, & that, although the income tax for 1922–23 was to be measured by the profits of the preceding year, the profits for 1922–23 had been brought into charge, & rule 21 did not apply:—Held: as the Board had been assessed at zero under Schedule A for 1922–23, the interest had not been paid out of profits brought into charge, & the Crown was entitled to succeed.—A.-G. v. METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD, [1928] 1 K. 428a. —— Securities in control of foreign custodian of enemy property—Payment of dividends by Anglo-German Mixed Arbitral Tribunal—When interest accrues.]—Before the war one K., who was a naturalised British subject ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom, deposited certain securities, stocks, & shares with a bank in Germany for safe custody, & the bank collected the interest & dividends & put them to the credit of K.'s account. From the outbreak of war in 1914 K. ceased to operate the account & he died in 1916. The bank, however, continued to credit the account with the interest & dividends until 1917, when the German Govt. appointed a custodian to take over & administer enemies' property in Germany, & the bank then paid the interest & dividends to the custodian.

K.'s last surviving exor. died in 1921, & resps., the exors. of such survivor, recovered the interest & dividends, together with interest thereon, through the Anglo-German Mixed Arbitral Tribunal. Resps. were assessed to income tax in respect of these sums for the years 1922–23 to 1926–27 under Cases IV. & V. of Sched. D. on the ground that they were income arising to resps. in those years as they accrued only when received under the decree of the Tribunal:—Held: the dividends & interest accrued in the years when they were paid into the bank, & it was now too late to make assessments in respect of the years before K.'s death, & as to the years after his death assessments could be made only so far as the assessments were in time. & the further sum paid as interest thereon under the decree of the Tribunal was not income but was compensation comparable to damages for detention of a chattel & therefore was not assessable to income tax.—SIMPSON v. MAURICE'S EXORS. 430b. —— Company making investments on real estate abroad.]—A co. incorporated in the United Kingdom, & carrying on business there at its head office in the making of loans of money upon the security of land in Egypt, was assessed to income tax until Apr. 1, 1922, under Schedule D., Case I., upon the profits of the co.'s business. As from Apr. 1, 1922, the entire control of the business was removed to Egypt. The trade of the co. wholly consisted of the lending of money to approved borrowers in Egypt in accordance with Egyptian law, at rates of interest varying from 6 to 8½ per cent. No loans were entertained without good real security being given, &, in the event of the borrower's default, proceedings were invariably taken in the local cts. to realise the security, & if it could not be sold immediately, the co. would go into possession:—Held: as from Apr. 1, 1922, the co., though it carried on a trade or business, was properly assessed to income tax under Schedule D., Case IV., in respect of income arising from securities in a place out of the United Kingdom, & was to be taxed in the full amount of such income, whether it was remitted to the United Kingdom or not. There was no evidence upon which the comrs. could find, as they had, that the taking of securities for the loans advanced was only "an incident" in such business; on the contrary it was an indispensable condition of the business. The case being one coming both under Case IV. & Case V. the Crown had an option to tax the co. under either case.—BUTLER v. MORTGAGE CO. OF EGYPT, LTD. (1928), 139 L. T. 29; 13 Tax Cas. 803, C. A.

441a. —— —— —— —— Application of American law.]—Testator, a subject of the United States, directed that his residuary estate should be held upon trust to dispose of the income thereof to the use of his daughter, now the wife of applt., during her life. Testator's residuary estate consisted wholly of foreign securities & foreign stocks & shares, & the existing trustees were an American trust co. Applt. appealed against assessments to income tax made upon him in respect of his wife's income arising from the will under Case IV. & Case V., r. 1, as being income arising from foreign securities, stocks & shares, & chargeable to tax, whether received in the United Kingdom or not, & claimed that, by reason of the interposition of the title of the trustees, it should be assessed under Case V., r. 2, as being a foreign possession other than stocks & shares & chargeable only to the extent to which it was remitted to the United Kingdom. The assessments were ultimately upheld by the House of Lords upon the assumption that the American law was the same as the law of England. Upon an appeal by applt. against further assessments to income tax made upon him in respect of the same income for the three succeeding years, expert evidence was adduced as to the law of the United States to the effect that under that law the wife had no estate or interest in the securities, stocks or shares, but that her sole right was to compel the trustees to discharge their duties

——— ——— ———.]—Testator, a citizen of the United States left the residue of his property in trust for his daughter during her life. The trustees, who had full power over the investment of the trust fund, were a co. constituted under the law of the State of New York & resident therein. The trust fund consisted of foreign govt. securities, foreign stocks & shares, & other foreign property. The trustees paid over such of the sums they received as they considered to be income, after deducting expenses, to the order of the daughter at a bank in New York. No part of the income was remitted to the United Kingdom. Resp., the husband of testator's daughter & resident in the United Kingdom, was assessed under Schedule D., Case IV., in the full amount of the income of the trust:—Held: (1) the daughter was specifically entitled under the will in equity during her life to the interest & dividends of the securities, stocks, & shares comprised in the trust fund, & her husband was assessable under Case IV., r. 1, & Case V., r. 1, to income tax in respect thereof, except such, if any, as were shown to be "foreign possessions other than stocks, shares & rents," whether such interest & dividends were remitted to the United Kingdom or not; (2) the matter should be remitted to the comrs. to state which of the items of the trust fund were (a) "securities" within Case IV., r. 1, (b) "stocks, shares or rents" within Case V., r. 1, & (c) "possessions out of the United Kingdom other than stocks, shares or rents" within Case V., r. 2.—BAKER v. ARCHER-SHEE, [1927] A. D of 1918 Act: "The tax in respect of income arising from stocks, shares or rents in any place out of the United Kingdom shall be computed on the full amount thereof on an average of the three preceding years, as directed in Case I., whether the income has been or will be received in the United Kingdom or not":—Held: the income on the full amount whereof the tax was to be computed meant the income arising from the class of foreign possessions consisting of stocks, shares or rents, & not the income arising from the separate items making up that class.

An English co. holding shares in several foreign cos. claimed that for the purposes of assessment to income tax each holding should be treated as a separate source of income:—Held: the assessment for each year should be arrived at by including the

The company regularly paid dividends, & resps. were assessed for the year 1923–24 under rule 1 of Case V. on the average of the amounts so arising in the three preceding years. Remittances were received from the firm in each of the three years 1920–21, 1921–22 & 1922–23, & the average amount of these remittances formed the basis of an additional assessment on resps. for the following year, 1923–24, under rule 2 of Case V. In 1923–24, however, no remittance was received from the firm, & resps. contended that there was therefore no income from that source to be assessed:—Held: each foreign possession must be treated separately in determining whether or not liability existed for any year, & if in any year no income arose from a particular possession, no liability could exist for that year in respect of that possession.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. DRYSDALE'S TRUSTEES (1928), 13 Tax Cas. 565.—SCOT.

The fees charged for the services of a nurse, or for admission to the assocn.'s hospital, varied from sums which, in the case of the poorest class, were considerably below the cost of the services rendered, to sums which, in the case of the wealthiest class, were reasonably equivalent to such cost. Nursing facilities, when not required for members, were granted to non-members at increased rates. Funds were held by the assocn. which had been raised by public subscription, & the hospital had been acquired with funds similarly raised. "the full amount of the same before any dividend thereof is made" & that the co. "paying such dividend shall be entitled to deduct the tax appropriate thereto":—Held: by "the tax appropriate thereto" was meant the tax at the standard rate on the gross amount of the dividend paid by the co. & not a proportionate part of the tax paid by the co. in the year in which the dividend was paid in respect of its profits or gains; &, therefore, in making the return of his total income for the purpose of surtax the shareholder must include the gross amount of the dividend, & not the proportionate part of the total income on which the co. had borne tax for the year of assessment in which the profits distributed were made.—HAMILTON v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1931] 2 K. 483c. Exemption of industrial societies—1918 Act, s. 39—Number of shares unlimited.]—Resp. Society, which was registered under Industrial & Provident Societies Act, 1893 (c. 39), claimed exemption under Sched. D. on the ground that the number of its shares was not limited by its rules or practice. The Society was formed to carry on the business of (inter alia) manufacturers & dealers in butter, cheese, milk & other dairy products. Admission to membership was at the discretion of the committee & subject to taking up a qualifying number of shares; further every member was bound by the Society's rules to sell to the Society any milk produced on any lands farmed by him if required to do so. The number of shares held by any individual member was limited to 200. The majority of the members were dairy farmers, & milk dealers & consumers were not in practice admitted to membership. Approximately 98 per cent. of the Society's sales were made to non-members. The Crown contended that practically the whole of the Society's sales were to non-members, & that the restriction of membership in general to persons willing to supply milk to the Society & the exclusion of milk dealers constituted an effective limitation of shares. The General Comrs. found in favour of the Society:—Held: the number of the Society's shares was not limited within 1918 Act, s. 39 (4), either by its rules or practice, & it was entitled to the exemption.—BENSTED v. MIDLAND DAIRY FARMERS, LTD. 489a. —— Foreign director of British company.]—Applt. in the first case was appointed foreign director of a British co. for fourteen years from 1918. The co. had subsidiary cos. on the Continent, the principal one being a French co. of which applt. was managing director. He was also a director of a German co., & had control over selling organisations in other European countries. He was thus responsible for the whole of the British co.'s Continental business, & his only remuneration was a fixed salary payable by the British co. plus commission on the co.'s profits from trading on the Continent. Since 1918 applt. had lived in Paris with his family. He came to London once a month to attend the co.'s directors' meetings, his function being to report & advise the directors on questions affecting the Continental business. It was no part of his duty to attend to the general business of the co. Applt. was assessed in respect of salary & commission for each year from 1920–21 to 1926–27 by the General Comrs. for the division in which the co.'s registered office was situated:—Held: (1) his office was an office within the United Kingdom; (2) the General Comrs. had jurisdiction to assess for 1920–21 & 1921–22 as well as for later years.—PROCTOR v. RYALL, RYALL v. PROCTOR (1928), 14 Tax Cas. 204.

Resp. arranged the sale of the works to a new co. & the directors of the old co. by minute, authorised the payment to resp. of the agreed excess amount "for services rendered by him in connection with the "negotiations & completion of the sale." The amount was subsequently paid to resp. by the liquidator of the old co & was described in the liquidator's accounts as a payment "for services rendered prior to liquidation." At the time when the payment was authorised resp. had ceased to perform the duties of secretary of the old co. or to receive any salary, though he remained secretary in name. Resp. was assessed to income tax under Sched. E. in respect of this sum, as representing profits of his office of secretary, & the General Comrs., on appeal, held that the sum was a gift & not taxable :—Held : there was no evidence upon which the Comrs. could come to their conclusion.—SHIPWAY v. SKIDMORE (1932), 16 Tax Cas. 748.

Art. 109 of the co.'s arts. provided that in the event of any director, who had held office for not less than five years, dying or resigning or ceasing to hold office for any cause other than misconduct, bkpcy., lunacy or incompetence, the co. should pay to him or his representatives by way of compensation for loss of office a sum equal to the total remuneration received by him in the preceding five years. All three directors had held office for not less than five years. In cases (a) & (b) resp. resigned office as director & received from the co. as "compensation" a payment calculated in accordance with Art. 109. In case (c) resp. desired to retire from active management of the co., but his co-directors wished to be able still to consult him, & it was agreed that he should resign the office of Chairman, receive as "compensation" a lump sum in lieu of the provision under Art. 109, waiving any future claim under that article, & remain on the board of the co. at a reduced rate of remuneration :—Held : (1) in the Court of Appeal, in cases (a) & (b) the payment constituted a profit of the office of director & was properly assessable to income tax under Sched. E. for the last year of office. In these cases there was no appeal to the House of Lords ; (2) in the House of Lords, in case (c) in the circumstances of that case the sum received was not income assessable to income tax.—HENRY v. FOSTER (A.), HENRY v. FOSTER (J.), HUNTER v. DEWHURST (1932), 16 Tax Cas. 605 ; sub nom. DEWHURST v. HUNTER, 146 L. In the assessment one-sixth of the net amount was allowed as earned income relief, but applt. contended that one-sixth of his gross salary, before deducting the superannuation contribution, should be so allowed: —Held: earned income relief must be calculated on the net amount of remuneration assessable after deducting allowable expenses. —FRAME v. FARRAND (1928), 13 Tax Cas. 861.

He was given an allowance of one-sixth of the amount of his salary remaining after deducting from it the amount by which the charges exceeded the taxed income. The General Comrs. rejected his appeal on the point & he appealed to the High Ct.:—Held: the earned income allowance was rightly computed on the amount of salary remaining after deduction of the charges treated as paid out of it.—ADAMS v. MUSKER (1930), 15 Tax Cas. 413.

545d. Lunacy percentage.]—Under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), & the Rules in Lunacy, 1892, the Crown is in certain circumstances entitled to receive 4 per cent., but not exceeding £400, of the clear annual income of a lunatic. A., a lunatic, had a considerable income & the whole of the funds were in ct. The income as it came in was credited to the lunatic's account by the Paymaster-General, & the appropriate lunacy percentage was debited annually in that account. Applt., the committee of A., was assessed under Case III. of Sched. D. for the year 1926–27 in the sum of £452, the amount of War Loan interest arising in 1925–26; the remainder of the lunatic's income was received under deduction of income tax. Applt. claimed that a deduction of £161, the lunacy percentage for 1925–26 on the whole of the lunatic's income, should be made from the assessment, on the grounds that the lunacy percentage did not form part of the lunatic's income & that there was no authority for charging it to income tax. The Crown contended that there was no provision in the income tax Acts for allowing such a deduction, that the payment was merely an application of the lunatic's income, or alternatively that the deduction from the assessment should be restricted to the percentage appropriate to that source of income:—Held : lunacy percentage is a payment out of the lunatic's income, & that no deduction is admissible for income tax purposes.—A. 557a. Right to relief on whole income paying Dominion tax—Without deduction of sums paid in debenture interest.]—A co. incorporated in England under Cos. Acts, carried on business in the United Kingdom & in New Zealand & Australia, & its income chiefly arose from trading operations in the latter countries. In respect of that income it was liable to income tax in the United Kingdom & in those Dominions. The co. having paid the full United Kingdom income tax on all its profits & gains & also Dominion income tax on so much as was earned by it in New Zealand & Australia, claimed relief from the double tax over a period of eight years ending on Apr. 5, 1924. The co. had issued debentures, the principal & interest of which were secured on its whole undertaking & assets, & in paying the interest on the debentures the co., as it was entitled to do, had deducted the full amount of United Kingdom income tax in respect of that interest. The sole question in dispute was whether the amount of relief was to be calculated on the whole of the profits earned by the co. in the Dominions or only on the balance of such profits remaining after deducting therefrom the excess of the interest paid by it on its debentures over the amount of income arising in the United Kingdom:—Held: (1) the word "income" in Finance Act, 1920 (c. 18), s. 27 (1), & the repealed sects. 43 of Finance Act, 1916 (c. 24), & 55 of Income Tax Act, 1918 (c. 40), meant "taxable income" & not "income less charges," & the word "paid" in relevant sections must be construed in its natural sense & not as meaning "paid & ultimately borne," & therefore the co. was entitled to relief under Finance Act, 1920 (c. 18), s. 27, & corresponding sections of earlier Acts in respect of all income (including that part applied in paying debenture interest) which had already borne Dominion income tax; (2) Income Tax Act, 1918 (c. 40), s. 17, had no application to the relief given by any of above-mentioned Acts.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. DALGETY & CO., [1930] A. The interest due on June 1, & paid to the trustees on that date, amounting to £1,000, was treated by them as capital, & estate duty was paid thereon. The trustees, having been assessed to income tax on the £1,000 of interest, contended that trustees acting for behoof of a British resident who was capax were not assessable to income tax. The Comrs. decided that the trustees were assessable as regarded the two-thirds of the interest effering to the portions destined to the testator's wife & daughter in life rent, but not as regarded the one-third payable by them to the son:—Held: the trustees were assessable to tax on the whole interest, under Rule 1 of the Miscellaneous Rules applicable to Sched. The income of the trust fund was dedicated to the payment of the annual premiums. The truster further directed applts. to utilise the educational endowment payable under the policy & any other income available from the trust fund for the education & advancement of his daughter from the time when she became fifteen until her majority. If the daughter attained the age of twenty-one the capital of the trust fund was to be made over to her absolutely, but if she died before, the fund to revert to the truster or his representatives. The trust deed contained no gift of income to the daughter. While the daughter was still under fifteen applts., on her behalf, claimed repayment of income tax deducted at the source from a sum of £33, the annual income of the stock, on the ground that that income was the income of the daughter for income tax purposes, & that, as she had no other income of her own, she was within the limit of total exemption:—Held: the daughter had no present beneficial right to receive the income & the claim failed.—DEWAR v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1931] A. The settlement contained a power for the settlor with the consent of any one of several persons, including the trustees, to revoke the trusts thereby declared. The settlor duly paid the annuity & deducted income tax therefrom at the appropriate rate. He had not revoked the settlement:—Held: as there had been no revocation the annuity was income of the son for purposes of relief from tax, & the power of revocation did not make it payable "for some period less than the life of the child" within Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), s. 20 (1).—WATSON'S TRUSTEES v. WIGGINS (1932), 101 L. 585a. Sum claimed already allowed as deduction.]—Applt. co. habitually financed its purchases by loans from its bankers repayable on demand ; the loans were for no specified period, but were paid off with interest when the co. received payment for the goods, usually within three months. The interest was paid without deduction of income tax, & was debited in the co.'s profit & loss account as a business expense. It had been allowed as such in computing the profits on which the co. was assessed under Case I. of Sched. D. for the four years ended Apr. 5, 1925. The co. claimed repayment of tax under 1918 Act, s. 36, for these four years on the interest paid to the bank, contending that it should not have been allowed as a deduction in computing profits, that this error could be corrected by additional assessments, & that the interest must be treated as having been paid out of profits or gains brought into charge to tax. The Comrs. of Inland Revenue refused the claim, & on appeal the Special Comrs. upheld this decision :—Held : as in fact the interest had been deducted in arriving at the assessable profits, it had not been paid out of profits brought into charge to tax, & that it was not open to the co. to claim revision of the assessments.—MULLER & CO. sh. Death before dividends & interest payable—Apportionment Act inapplicable to claim for repayment.]—A taxpayer, whose total income was such as to entitle her to repayment of all income tax deducted from it, died before certain of the dividends & interest upon her investments fell due. Her exors. afterwards received payment of these dividends & interest under deduction of tax, &, founding on the terms of the Apportionment Act, 1870 (c. 35), s. 2, claimed repayment of tax proportionate to the period of her survivance :—Held : the Apportionment Act had no application to the question in dispute, &, as the dividends & interest payable after the taxpayer's death never formed part of her income, her exors. were not entitled to repayment of any portion of the income tax deducted therefrom.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. HENDERSON'S EXORS., [1931] S. sj. Claim in respect of tax on rents paid to heir-at-law in heritage.]—Testator, by his will, directed that his wife should receive the free annual income of his residuary estate for her life & that on her death his trustees should convert the residue into cash & distribute it among six named beneficiaries. Testator died, domiciled in Scotland, in 1903. The widow claimed her legal rights under Scottish law. She was accordingly paid a capital sum out of testator's movable estate & continued, up to the time of this case, to receive from the trustees one-third of the rents derived from the heritage. The remaining two-thirds of the rents were accumulated by the trustees for a period of twenty-one years when further accumulation became unlawful. Thereafter, in accordance with settled Scottish law, the two-thirds rents were paid by the trustees to the heir-at-law in heritage for the time being of testator. The curator bonis to the heir-at-law in heritage, a minor, claimed repayment of the income tax charged in respect of the amounts paid to him as curator, contending that those amounts represented income of the minor in his hands :—Held : the payments made to or for behoof of the minor were payments of income.—DUNCAN v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. In 1925 the Comr. made a new assessment & fixed the value at £46,835 :—Held : the only sect. under which the Comr. can alter an assessment which has been made is sect. 37 of Land & Income Tax Assessment Act, 1907, & having once made an assessment the Comr. may let it stand or may alter it from time to time subject to the restriction imposed by the legislature for the benefit of the taxpayer to prevent his being harassed by frequent re-assessments.—O'CONNOR v. STATE TAXATION COMR. the period of three years, on the average profits of which their Sched. D. liability was to be computed; they also delivered to the assessor of taxes a statement showing the average profits to be £1,447 after making the adjustments required for income tax purposes. The inspector asked that the accounts should be certified by a qualified accountant in view of their magnitude, & applts. refused on the ground that there was no statutory authority for such a requirement. In due course the statement & accounts were laid before the Additional Comrs., who, not being satisfied, made an assessment of £2,000, against which applts. appealed. On the hearing of the appeal the General Comrs. were of opinion that examination of the books as proposed by applts. would occupy them for several weeks, & even then would not enable them to establish the correctness of the accounts because they were not professional accountants. The Comrs. accordingly, not being satisfied on the evidence tendered that the assessment was excessive, decided to confirm it unless within two months applts. should produce accounts audited by a qualified auditor. Applts. expressed dissatisfaction with the Comrs.' decision as being erroneous in point of law & required them to state a case:—Held: the Comrs.' decision was not ultra vires.—HUNT & CO. v. JOLY (1928), 14 Tax Cas. 165.

614a. —— —— Accuracy of accounts.]—Applt. appealed to the Special Comrs. against certain Sched. D assessments made upon him in respect of business profits & untaxed interest. The Comrs. refused to accept the accounts submitted by applt. as satisfactory evidence that the assessments were excessive & adjourned the proceedings for some months on his undertaking to furnish accounts certified, so far as might be possible, by an accountant. Such accounts were not produced & the assessments were confirmed:—Held: the question was one of fact which it was for the Comrs. to determine.—WALL v. COOPER (1929), 14 Tax Cas. 552, C. A.

614b. —— —— Ordinary residence.]—Applt. lived in the United Kingdom until 1909 when she went to India to be married. Her husband died in 1916. Except for one period of five months she was not in the United Kingdom between 1909 & July, 1919, when she returned to the United Kingdom & remained for fifteen months. She spent part of each of the income tax years 1921–22 to 1927–28 in the United Kingdom, the periods spent in the United Kingdom within each year ranging from forty days to one hundred & seventy-seven days in aggregate. She lived in hotels & had no house of her own either in this country or elsewhere. She had no property in this country except investments in War Loan. From 1921 her son was at school in this country. The Special Comrs. had found, in appeal proceedings for the year 1924–25, that she was not resident & not ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom. Her claim to exemption from income tax on income within the provisions of the sects. mentioned above for the year 1927–28 was refused by the I. R. Comrs. On her applying, under Finance Act, 1924 (c. 21), s. 27, for the claim to be determined by the Special Comrs., the Comrs. considered that having regard to the continuance of regular & lengthy visits to the United Kingdom the circumstances were different from those previously under consideration in relation to the year 1924–25, & they held she was resident & ordinarily

The appeal proceedings before the General Comrs. were twice adjourned for the production by applt. of further information & on the occasion of the second adjournment applt. was warned that when the case was next put down for hearing he must be prepared to attend in person with a statement of the facts & arguments which he wished to submit to the Comrs. On the third hearing of the case applt. did not attend & his representative asked for a further adjournment. This the Comrs. refused. Applt.'s representative then gave a general statement of facts, under the reservation that he was not to be bound by any particular statement of fact, & contended that no liability to income tax arose in respect of the sum in question. In consideration that applt. had failed to submit facts or evidence to them, the General Comrs. dismissed the appeal & confirmed the assessment:—Held: the Comrs. had acted within their powers.—HAMILTON (J.) v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 620a. -.]—A co. which had succeeded to the business of a previous co. in 1920 was assessed to income tax, Sched. D., for the year 1923–24 in an estimated amount to represent the average profits of the three preceding years. It gave notice of appeal against this assessment, & subsequently claimed relief under r. 11 of the Rules applicable to Cases I. & II. of Sched. D. The Inspector of Taxes opposed the claim. The co. gave notice of appeal to the Special Comrs. against the refusal to admit the claim, & eventually the case was set down for hearing by the Special Comrs. both on the r. 11 claim & on a question of obsolescence. Before the date fixed for the hearing the co. withdrew the appeal & the withdrawal was accepted by the Special Comrs. Subsequently, the co. applied to the General Comrs. to hear & determine its claim contending that the claim made by it fell under r. 3 (3) of the Miscellaneous Rules applicable to Sched. D., & that only the General Comrs. had power to determine it. The General Comrs. were of opinion that the claim was made by way of appeal under r. 11 & that the Special Comrs. had jurisdiction to deal with it. They refused to hear the claim. The co. obtained a rule nisi calling upon the General Comrs. to show cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue commanding them to hear & determine the claim:—Held: the rule should be discharged.—R. v. WEST GORTON GENERAL COMRS., Ex p. BROOKS & DOXEY (1920), LTD. 628a. —— ——.]—Certain premises were leased to tenants for a term of seven years from Nov. 17, 1925, at a rent of £125 per annum by a lease dated Nov. 10, 1925. By a deed dated Nov. 11, 1925, the tenants agreed, in consideration of the owner undertaking to execute certain alterations & repairs, to pay, from the date of completion of the alterations, & for the remaining period of the lease, an additional £125 per annum. The additional £125 per annum was described as "rent." The owner, resp. in the present case, contended that it represented repayment by instalments of the tenants' obligation to him. The premises were assessed for the purposes of Sched. A for the year 1926–27 in the amount of £250. The General Comrs. on appeal reduced the assessment to £125. The Crown appealed. She was not present at the hearing of the appeal nor was any evidence called on her behalf, & an adjournment was therefore applied for on behalf of the Crown. The General Comrs. refused the application & found, on statements made by her representative, that she was "resident abroad," not that she was not resident in the United Kingdom, "& that the income was earned abroad." When the case first came before the K. B. Div. it was remitted to the Comrs. to hear evidence for the purpose of ascertaining "facts as to the residence of the resp. in the United Kingdom & whether the income accrued in the United Kingdom or not." The Comrs., however, after the rehearing of the appeal at which resp. was present, found only that she was "resident abroad," & that her profession was "exercised abroad," except as regards the three articles written in this country. On the case again coming before the K. B. Div., the A.-G. pointed out that the Comrs. had not complied with the directions of the ct. as to the form of their finding as regards residence, but said that, while he could not admit that on the facts proved the Crown were wrong in taking the view that resp. was resident in the United Kingdom, he would not, in all the circumstances, ask for the case to be again

662a. —— ——.]—A co. having a sum consisting of accumulated profits standing to the credit of its reserve fund & being empowered so to do by its arts. of assocn., passed resolutions that its capital should be increased by the creation of new shares, & that it was desirable to capitalise the sum & make it available for distribution among the shareholders as capital free from income tax, & further resolutions pursuant to which the sum was applied in payment up of the new shares, which were to be offered to the shareholders in proportion to their existing shares with an option to them either to accept the new shares so fully paid up, or to take their nominal value in cash. A shareholder having accepted the whole of the new shares offered to him as fully paid, was assessed to super tax in respect thereof. 664a. —— —— —— ——.]—A limited co. appropriated for distribution among its ordinary shareholders as a capital bonus £200,000 undivided profits which had been carried to the credit of its reserve account, the amount to be applied (1) in subscribing for one hundred & fifty £1,000 4 per cent. debentures of the co., & (2) in paying up in full fifty thousand £1 unissued ordinary shares of the co. All the ordinary shares were held by one of the directors. The debentures, all of which were issued to this shareholder, were redeemable at one month's notice by the co. at any time, & at one month's notice by the holder after May 25, 1920. On Apr. 16, 1920, the whole of the £150,000 due on the debentures was paid by the co. to the holder, interest being waived by him, & the co. thereupon borrowed £72,500 from him at 6 per cent. interest, a liability reduced to £33,117 by June 30, 1920:—Held: the debentures constituted a capital receipt in the hands of the shareholder, & he was not assessable to super tax for the year 1920-21 in respect of the amount of the debentures.—WHITMORE v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1925), 10 Tax Cas. 645.

666. For the existing paragraph substitute the following paragraph:—

Distribution of profits—Assets of company written up—Loans to directors written off.]—A partnership business was converted into a limited co. in 1916, practically the whole of the shares therein being held by two resps., the original partners, who were brothers, & were also the governing directors. The accounts showed profits of £117,000 for the three years ending Dec. 1919, but no dividends were declared or paid. The co., having power to lend money, granted loans amounting to £283,000 to resps. at 5 per cent. interest, against which the capital assets were increased in value by £226,000 & profits drawn upon to the extent of £57,000. The actual cash lent was mainly provided by a bank overdraft. At a later date resps. duly passed resolutions purporting to cancel the debt of £283,000 by writing it off against the general reserve fund. Resps. having been assessed to super tax upon £283,000:—Held: (1) the loans were genuine loans, which gave rise to no liability to super tax, even if cancelled, except as to the £57,000 taken from profit & loss account; (2) the purported release of the debt was wholly invalid & ineffectual, & resps. remained liable to the co. to repay the whole amount of the £283,000 but were not liable for any super tax thereon.—HALL v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1926), 135 L. T. 759; 11 Tax Cas. 24, C. A.

666a. Transfer of assets to subsidiary company—In consideration of shares—Distribution to shareholders in parent company.]—A colliery co. which had accumulated large reserves transferred certain of its assets, comprising land & houses, freehold minerals, railway wagons & outside investments, to a subsidiary co. formed in order to take over the assets. The consideration for the transfer was to be satisfied by the allotment to the parent co. of shares in the subsidiary co. The parent co. declared bonuses on its own shares to be satisfied by the issue to its shareholders of the shares to which it was entitled in the subsidiary co. & those shares were, in fact, allotted direct by the subsidiary co. to the shareholders in the parent co. The transaction was shown in the books of the parent co. by the transfer to the balance of profit & loss account of the balances standing to the credit of reserve & other accounts, & the distribution of bonus shares was recorded as having been made out of the balance of profit & loss account. The original shareholders in the subsidiary co. were identical with those in the parent co. The first directors of the subsidiary co. were the directors of the parent co. &, with one exception, the directors of the two cos. were the same throughout. It was the intention of the directors of the parent co. to retain under their control the assets transferred to the subsidiary co. & the two cos. were to a large extent inter-dependent, the parent co. being partially dependent on the subsidiary co. for finance. Applt. & his wife, as holders of shares in the parent co., received a distribution of shares in the subsidiary co. & an amount representing the value of the shares plus an appropriate addition for income tax was included in an assessment to super-tax made upon applt. The Special Comrs. on appeal held that the distribution was a release by the parent co. of assets to its shareholders & that to the extent to which the distribution represented a distribution of current or accumulated profits it was income assessable to super-tax:—Held: that the Special Comrs.' decision was correct.—BRIGGS v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1932), 17 Tax Cas. 11.

666b. Distribution of shares in another company—Acquired out of accumulated profits.]—A public limited co. promoted & registered a subsidiary co., subscribing in cash for the whole of its issued share capital, which was held by nominees of the parent co. The whole of the shares in the parent co. were subsequently purchased by a third co. under an agreement which provided that part of the consideration should be the assignment to the existing shareholders in the parent co. of the shares in the subsidiary co. & of a debt due by the subsidiary to the parent, in satisfaction of which a further issue of shares was made by the subsidiary. Under the authority of an extraordinary resolution of the parent co. the shares in the subsidiary, which were declared to be capital assets of the parent in excess of liabilities & paid up share capital, were distributed, in specie, among the shareholders of the parent co. in proportion to their respective holdings. Applt. was assessed to super tax in an estimated figure to cover the value of shares so distributed to him to the extent that they had been acquired by the parent co. out of accumulated profits. He appealed to the Special Comrs., contending that the distribution was a distribution of capital. The Special Comrs. held that to the extent that the shares distributed to applt. were acquired by the parent co. out of its accumulated profits they represented income liable to super tax in applt.'s hands:—Held: the Special Comrs.' decision on the point argued before them was correct, without prejudice, however, to the position which would arise in a case where shares acquired out of accumulated profits were required in the balance sheet to answer share capital.—WILKINSON v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1931), 16 Tax Cas. 52.

his trust disposition & settlement, gave the whole of his property, real & personal, to trustees for payment of his debts, except those heritably secured on his real estate, his funeral expenses, & the management expenses of the trust, any legacies he might leave, & an annuity to a niece, & subject thereto, in the events which happened, the trustees were to hold the whole of his property on trust to pay out of the free income thereof an annuity to his sister, & subject to the implement of all prior purposes of the trust, the trustees were, as soon as convenient after his death, to convey all his lands & estates to applt. in life-rent during her life, with remainders over to a series of heirs, & to hold the whole of the residue of his property in trust for her in life-rent during her life & on her death to the person then entitled to the landed estates in fee. In addition to all powers competent to them by statute or common law, testator conferred on his trustees all powers of administration competent to a fee simple proprietor, &, in particular, power to sell any part of his property & to grant leases of any part of the heritable property. On the death of testator in 1919, heavy death duties became payable on the heritable estates, which were already heavily mortgaged. The trustees elected to pay the duties by sixteen half-yearly instalments, of which the earliest were met out of the proceeds of sale of testator's stocks & shares. Pending the realisation of such part of the heritable estates as, after necessary reductions of the charges thereon, would be sufficient to meet the remaining instalments, the trustees retained the estates & the management thereof in their own hands, & paid applt. only the free annual income. On the footing that she was entitled to the life-rent of the estates from the date of her husband's death, applt. was assessed to super tax for the year 1923–24 on the whole annual value of the estates as assessed to income tax, Sched. A., for the previous year, & this assessment was upheld by the Special Comrs. on appeal:—Held: applt. was assessable to super tax for the year 1923–24 only on the amount of the free income actually receivable by her from the trustees for the preceding year, the trustees & not applt. being owners of the estates for the purposes of Sched. A. for that year.—DE ROBECK (LADY) v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1928), 13 Tax Cas. 345, H. L.

668b. —— —— During minority.]—Applt.'s grandfather left a share of his estate in trust for his son, applt.'s father, for life & after the father's death in trust for the issue of the father in such shares & on such conditions as the father should appoint: in default of appointment, in trust for those children equally who should attain the age of twenty-one. The father died in 1919. His will exercised the power of appointment mentioned above & provided, inter alia, that the property settled by the will of the grandfather should on the father's death be divided into as many shares as he should have children surviving him, & that each child's share should be held by trustees on trust to pay the income to the child for twenty years from the father's death & after that period, if the child survived, to transfer the corpus to him absolutely. As the result of Chancery proceedings with reference to the father's will the ct. ordered, inter alia, that a certain sum per annum should be paid to the guardian of applt. out of the income of his share in the grandfather's estate, for his maintenance during minority. It was contended that this amount only should be brought into the computation of applt.'s liability to super-tax:—Held: the income of the share of the estate appropriated to applt. was all income of applt. for super-tax purposes.—STERN v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1929), 15 Tax Cas. 148, C. A.

670a. Partnership—Payments to widow of deceased partner—For use of firm name.]—A partnership deed provided that in the event of death of a partner the remaining partners might continue to use the firm's name, marks, & goodwill, paying to the exors. of the deceased partner for this privilege the sum of £500 quarterly for a period of five years, "after which it may be enjoyed without further payment." One of the partners died, leaving one-half of his residuary estate in trust for his widow, applt. The value of deceased's share in the capital & income of the partnership was agreed & paid to the exors. in full discharge of all claims except the quarterly payments. These payments were duly made, at first in full, but later under deduction of income tax. Applt. was assessed to super tax for the year 1926–27 in respect of her half share of the four quarterly payments received in 1925–26:—Held: the payments were income assessable to super tax.—MACKINTOSH v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1928), 14 Tax Cas. 15.

671a. Loans to controlling shareholder of private company—No dividends declared.]—Applt. was the controlling shareholder of five private limited cos. From time to time he withdrew from the business of each of the cos. sums which he used to finance the purchase in his own name of premises to be occupied by himself trading as a firm. The sums so withdrawn were described in the cos.' accounts as "loans" to applt. trading as such firm. Each of the cos. had power to advance money on loan, with or without security, but, while in some cases the loans shown in the accounts to have been made to applt. were subsequently approved formally in general meeting, no previous formal authorisation was given for any of the loans. The loans were not secured by any document, & no provision was made as to repayment or interest thereon. None of the cos. ever

The Special Comrs. decided that the loans in question had not been made in the course of the businesses carried on by the cos., & that they were not genuine loans but constituted income of applt. for the purposes of super tax :—Held : there was ample evidence before the Comrs. to support their conclusion of fact.—JACOBS v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 672a. Arrears of interest received by purchaser of bonds.]—Where a taxpayer purchases bearer bonds, on which the interest for several years is in arrear, & his purchase confers upon him the right to the arrears, & several years' arrears are subsequently paid to him in one sum, the whole of that sum forms for the purpose of super tax, under 1918 Act, s. 5 (3) (c), part of his income for the year in which payment was received.—LEIGH v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1928] 1 K. 673a. Income received by executor before assent to legacy.]—Under the will of his father, who died in Aug. 1921, resp. was entitled to a specific legacy of certain shares in two cos. Owing to difficulties in administration the exors. did not assent to the legacy until June, 1924, & in the meantime dividends had been declared upon the shares in Feb. & Aug. 1923, & in Mar. 1924, which dividends were retained by the exors. until their assent in June, 1924. Resp. was assessed to super tax upon these dividends for the years ending Apr. 5, 1924, & Apr. 5, 1925, respectively, on the basis that they were his income for the years when such dividends were payable by the cos. Resp. contended that as he was not in a position to require payment of the dividends from the exors. until June, 1924, they were not his income or receivable by him until then, & that he was wrongly assessed :—Held : the doctrine of relation of the exor.'s assent to the date of the death applied, & resp. was rightly assessed.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. HAWLEY, [1928] 1 K. 673b. Income from share of residue—When residue ascertained.]—Applt. on attaining the age of twenty-five became entitled to a quarter share in the capital & income of the residue of his father's estate, which consisted mainly of real property heavily mtged. The will provided that the property was to be divided when the youngest child attained twenty-five, which happened in 1916, & not before, & that until then the exors. & trustees should apply the surplus income, after payment of legacies, annuities, etc., in reduction of the mtge. debts. In fact the exors. did not divide the property & continued, from 1916 to 1925, to apply the surplus income to reducing the mtges. All testator's debts other than the mtge. debts had been paid off before Mar. 1919, & payment of certain legacies & annuities was begun in Dec. 1919, but no payment was made to the residuary legatees until 1921, after which small annual payments were made. The delivery of a residuary account was not necessary in this case as no legacy duty was payable on the residue. Assessments to super tax for the years 1920–21 to 1925–26 were made upon the applt. to include one-fourth of the income from the property, less annual charges, but without deduction for repayment of mtges. : —Held : so long as the mtge. or other debts remained unpaid the exors. were entitled to retain any assets coming to their hands, the applt. did not enforce conveyance to himself of his share of the residue, & therefore the income arising from his share was not his income for super tax purposes.—DAW v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., DUFF-DUNBAR v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 673c. Question of fact.]—A testator by his will devised & bequeathed all his real & personal estate to exors., whom he also appointed trustees upon trust to sell & convert, with power to postpone, &, after payment of his funeral & testamentary expenses, debts & legacies, to divide the residue amongst his children in equal shares. At the time of testator's death the estate was subject to mtges. of considerable amount. The exors. had from time to time made advances to the children, & were in the habit of crediting a beneficiary's share of the income of the residuary estate in reduction of the interest on &, if sufficient, the capital of the advances to him. One of testator's sons having been assessed to super tax for the year ending Apr. 5, 1926, on income which included the sum so credited to him in the preceding year, appealed against the assessment on the ground that the residue had not as yet been ascertained, inasmuch as there was a mtge. on the estate for a large sum, which was still outstanding, & therefore that he had no income from testator's residuary estate to which super tax could attach. The Comrs. held that in those circumstances they were precluded by Daw v. Inland Revenue Comrs., No. 673b, from holding that the residue had been ascertained, & they discharged the assessment :—Held : the question whether the residue had been ascertained & the bequest assented to by the exors. was a question of fact to be determined by the Comrs. & not by the ct.; there was no rule of law that the mere existence of an outstanding mtge. prevented the residue from being ascertained; the Comrs. had misdirected themselves in law in holding that Daw's case, No. 673b, prevented them from coming to a decision on the facts, & the case must be remitted to them for a finding whether on the facts the residue had been ascertained so as to constitute a trust fund; also, Daw's case, No. 673b, decided no principle of law, but was merely a decision on the particular facts of that case.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. SMITH, [1930] 1 K. 674a. Annual value of family mansion occupied under will.]—Held: the occupant of a family mansion, under the terms of a will by which trustees were given general powers of management of the real estate & a discretion to admit to the mansion the present occupant or certain members of his family during his lifetime, must be regarded as being in occupation under the will, & the profits & gains representing the annual value of the house formed part of his income for purposes of super tax.—TOLLEMACHE v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 674b. Difference between net Schedule A. assessment & reduced rental paid under lease.]—Resp. negotiated for a lease of a house at a rent of £135 per annum, but it was eventually agreed that if resp. would pay £683, which was necessary to put the premises in a fit state for habitation, a lease would be granted at a rent of £35 per annum. The sum of £683 was paid before the execution of the lease. The circumstances in which the rent was fixed at £35 per annum were not set out in the lease, which was for a term of seven years, shortly afterwards extended for another year in consideration of resp. contributing £141 towards further repairs, but it was agreed therein that the rent under any new lease should be £140 per annum:—Held: the sums paid by resp. for repairs at the beginning of his tenancy were capital expenditure, & the difference between the net Schedule A. assessment on the house & the rent of £35 actually paid under the lease formed part of his total income for super tax purposes.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. FARGUS (1926), 10 Tax Cas. 665.

674d. —.]—Testator by his trust disposition & settlement directed his trustees to hold & retain his lands & estates at M. & to pay all duties & burdens & the cost of repair & maintenance &, in the event of his death without issue, to allow his wife "to occupy & possess during her lifetime free of rent or taxes both landlord's & tenant's" the mansion-house of M. with the offices & furniture & other effects therein & the game on his estates. Testator having died without issue, his widow, under the terms of the trust, occupied the mansion-house & lands at M. during the year ending Apr. 5, 1920.

On an appeal by her to the Special Comrs. against an additional assessment to super tax for the year ending Apr. 5, 1921, on a sum representing (a) the annual value of the mansion-house & lands, & (b) certain payments by the trustees for rates & wages, the Comrs. upheld the additional assessment, but their determination was reversed by the First Division of the Ct. of Session as the Ct. of Exchequer in Scotland:—Held: (1) as occupier in her own right of the mansion-house & lands the widow was rightly assessed on the annual value of her free enjoyment as being income liable to super tax. The liability of the occupier to super tax is not determined by the question whether he has power to let or otherwise to convert the annual value into money; (2) the money paid by the trustees for rates was paid for the benefit of the widow & ought to be included in her total income for super tax purposes.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. MILLER, [1930] A. 674e. Profits of partnership—Executor of deceased partner becoming partner.]—Applt. was the sole extrix. & residuary legatee of her late husband, who, until his death in 1916, was a partner in a firm. At the time of his death large sums were owing to the firm from residents in enemy countries, & by arrangement with the Inland Revenue these were allowed as bad debts. on the understanding that any sums received in respect of them should be brought into account for income tax as profits of the firm of the year in which they were received. On her husband's death applt. became a partner in the firm. In 1921 a sum was received in respect of the enemy debts, in respect of which the firm was assessed to income tax in the year ended Apr. 5, 1923. By arrangement between the partners applt. bore a proportion of the assessment in respect of the sum so received proportionate to her late husband's share of the profits:—Held: no part of the sum received in respect of the enemy debts formed any part of applt.'s total income for super tax purposes.—LASSEN v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1927), 138 L. T. 463; 13 Tax Cas. 229.

674f. —— Distributed by agreement after accumulation.]—In 1918 one of the partners in a firm died. Availing himself of certain provisions in the deed of partnership he had by his will nominated his son to be a partner & to succeed to his interests in the firm as from the date of his death. The partnership deed made such a nomination subject to the consent of the other partners, provided that such consent should not be unreasonably withheld. This consent was not given & was eventually, in 1926, formally refused. Throughout this period what would have been the deceased father's share of the profits was carried to a suspense account & remained undistributed. Under the provisions of the partnership deed if the son were admitted as a partner this share of the profits from the date of the father's death to the date of the son's admission would belong wholly to applt. in the first case; but if the son were not admitted these profits would be divisible equally between the first applt. & the three other partners. Two of the latter three retired & relinquished any claim they might have in the matter. It was agreed in 1926 that the accumulated profits should be distributed as to 25 per cent. to the one other then remaining original partner (whose exors. were applts. in the second case) & as to 75 per cent. to the first applt. This distribution was not actually made until 1928. The son in 1926 & again in 1928 attempted unsuccessfully to contest by litigation the validity of these proceedings. The Crown contended that the parties were entitled, on the basis of the 1926 agreement, to shares of 75 per cent. & 25 per cent. respectively in the profits in question year by year from 1918 onwards & were assessable to super tax accordingly. The special comrs. on appeal upheld this view. Applts. demanded cases:—Held: the first applt. was assessable in respect only of the 25 per cent. to which he was entitled in any event & in the second case there was no liability.—FRANKLIN v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., SWAYTHLING'S EXORS. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1930), 15 Tax Cas. 464.

674g. Undistributed profits of company—Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), s. 21—"Reasonable time"—Termination by liquidation.]—The share capital of a limited co. registered in 1922 was held by four persons, & the co. was a co. to which above sect. applied. In Feb. 1924, the directors came to the conclusion that the prosperity of the business, which was speculative, might not continue. Accounts for the year to Mar. 31, 1924, were prepared, showing a profit of approximately £34,000, & were presented at the general meeting on May 14, 1924. No dividend was declared & at the same meeting a resolution for the voluntary winding-up of the co. was passed, & a liquidator appointed. The Special Comrs. issued a direction to the co. that for super tax purposes the co.'s income for the year ended Mar. 31, 1924, should be deemed to be the income of the four shareholders. This direction was discharged by the Special Comrs. on appeal, but was restored by the Board of Referees on a re-hearing. The contention of the co. was that above sect. had no application in the circumstances of the case, & that on the passing of the resolution for winding-up it had no power to declare a dividend:—Held: the co., by going into liquidation while the "reasonable time" contemplated by the Act was still running, terminated that reasonable time, & that in view of the intended liquidation it would have been reasonable for them to have distributed the whole of the available income.—SUTCLIFFE (LIONEL), LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1928), 14 Tax Cas. 171.

674h. —— —— What amounts to income—Profits appropriated to endowment policies.]—Applt. co. was formed in 1918 as a private limited co. by a husband & wife, who at all times held all its issued capital except five one-shilling shares. The objects for which it was established did not include the carrying on of any business to which the Assurance Co. Act, 1909 (c. 49), applies. The only business that the co. carried on was the issuing of endowment policies & the management of the funds received by way of premiums for such policies. The only policies issued were a small number of policies issued to the husband & wife in 1918 & 1919, payable in 1928 & 1929. After the surrender of certain policies in force only for a few months in 1918 & 1919 the only policies remaining were four policies, the consideration for each of which had been the transfer in one amount to the co. as a lump sum premium, of National War Bonds of a face value equal to the amount assured by the policy. Under these policies the co. undertook to repay the sum assured "together with any bonus which at the time of payment will be attached to the policy." There was no provision in the policies or in the co.'s articles giving the policy-holders a title to any share in the co.'s profits. The co. each year "appropriated" to the account kept for each of the policies an amount approximately corresponding to the interest on the bonds transferred as the premium for such policy & made corresponding investments, which were treated as held against the policy:—Held: the interest in question was income of the co. for the purposes of sect. 21.—ENDOWMENT CO., LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1929), 14 Tax Cas. 353.

674j. — —— —— Sums applied in repayment of share or loan capital or debt.]—A private limited co. was incorporated in Mar. 1915, to purchase from H. certain freehold & leasehold properties known as the C. Estate, subject to mtges. owing thereon amounting to £238,000, which were vested in H., who also held all the shares in the co. with the exception of two which were held by two directors of the co., who together with H. were the directors of the co. The Arts. of Assocn. of the co. contained an article, No. 95, which provided that "so long as any mtge. or charge affecting any property of the co. shall remain outstanding & unsatisfied the net profits of the co. shall be applied in the discharge & satisfaction, so far as the same shall be available, of the principal moneys & the moneys secured by any mtge. or charge for the time being outstanding & unsatisfied, unless the co. shall by special resolution direct to the contrary." There was also a deed poll executed by H. in Nov. 1915, by which it was provided that the net profits of the co. should be applied, without any deduction for interest on mtge. debts to which he was entitled, in the discharge & satisfaction of the principal moneys & interest payable in respect of the mtge. debts mentioned in the sched. to the deed poll, to which H. was not beneficially entitled. These outstanding mtges. were afterwards taken over by H. No dividends had ever been paid by the co., but the mtges. had been reduced from £238,000 to £186,000, & the co. had also accumulated a reserve fund of £80,000. The Special Comrs. made a direction under Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), s. 21, which was confirmed by the Board of Referees, that for the purposes of assessment to super tax the actual income from all sources of the co. should for the periods ended June 24, 1924, 1925, & 1926, respectively, be deemed to be the income of the members of the co.:—Held: (1) neither art. 95 of the Arts. of Assocn. of the co. nor the fact that no special resolution had been passed by the co. altering the requirements of that article precluded the Special Comrs. from making a direction under Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), s. 21 (1), that the co. had not distributed a reasonable part of its income to its members, & therefore the income of the co. should for the purposes of assessment to super tax be deemed to be the income of its members;

(2) the fact that Finance Act, 1927 (c. 10), s. 31 (1), expressly provided that sums expended or applied in redemption or repayment of any share or loan capital or debt should be regarded as income available for distribution among the members of the co.; & therefore in terms applied to the present case, did not prevent such sums being regarded as available for distribution among the members of the co. under the general provisions contained in Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), s. 21 (1); (3) where there has been no distribution by a co. among its members of a reasonable part of its actual income, & in consequence a direction has been made by the Special Comrs. under Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), s. 21 (1), that the actual income from all sources of the co. shall for the purposes of assessment to super tax be deemed to be the income of the members, the whole of the income of the co. & not merely that part of its income that might reasonably have been distributed by the co. among its members, is to be treated as being covered by the direction of the Comrs.—COLVILLE ESTATE, LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1930] 2 K. 674k. —— —— —— ——.]—G., Ltd., was a private co. incorporated in 1918. At all times material in the present case the whole capital was held by two persons, who were also the co.'s sole directors. G., Ltd., in pursuance of one of the objects for which it was formed, acquired in 1918 the whole issued share capital of another co. The funds necessary for this transaction were obtained partly by loans from the two directors, & partly by a loan from a bank obtained on the conditions (a) that all the shares so acquired were deposited with the bank as security, & (b) that all dividends on the shares were paid to the bank, as & when received, in reduction of the amount due to the bank. From 1919 to 1923 dividends were received & paid over under this arrangement. During these years G., Ltd., had no other income. Its expenses were met by loans from the directors who also from time to time lent to the co. further sums which were paid to the bank to reduce the balance due from the co. At May 21, 1922, the co.'s financial year ended on May 21, the amount owing to the bank was £4,965. In Nov. 1922, the bank advanced further sums with which the co. made other investments. The amount owing to the bank at May 21, 1923, was £7,933. The Special Comrs. issued "directions" under Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), s. 21, that the dividends received by G., Ltd., during the year to May 21, 1922, £19,500, & during the year to May 21, 1923, £6,500, should be deemed to be income of the two shareholders for super tax purposes. On appeal the Special Comrs. discharged these "directions." The I. R. Comrs. required the case to be reheard by the Board of Referees, who restored the "directions." The co. appealed to the High Ct.:—Held: (a) as regards the first year, the co. could not make any distribution & the decision of the Board of Referees could not stand; (b) as regards the second year, the Board of Referees were entitled to come to the decision which they had given, as there was a balance available for distribution, the amount of the dividends received having been in excess of the amount owing to the bank in respect of the 1918 loan.—GLAZED KID, LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. The co.'s net profits for the year ended Mar. 25, 1928, were £38,868 & its income, computed as for income tax purposes, was approximately £26,000. Dividends were declared in respect of the year ended Mar. 25, 1928, amounting to £18,750 & £20,000 was transferred to reserve. A direction by the Special Comrs. under Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), s. 22 (1), in respect of the year ended Mar. 25, 1928, was discharged on appeal & the appeal was re-heard by the Board of Referees. The co. contended that the allocation to reserve out of the profits of the year in question was reasonable & proper having regard, in general, to the co.'s need for a reserve for the maintenance & development of its business &, in particular, to the co.'s commitments in the way of redemption of mtgs. secured on its property & to a possible additional liability to income tax of some £20,000 dependent upon the final decision in the case of Salisbury House Estate, Ltd. v. Fry, which at the time of the allocation was under appeal to the cts.). The Board of Referees held that the co. had not within a reasonable time after Mar. 25, 1928, distributed a reasonable part of its actual income for the year ended on that date & restored the Special Comrs.' direction:—Held: there was evidence upon which the Board of Referees could come to their decision, which was not wrong in law.—LONDON & NORTHERN ESTATES CO., LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 681a. —— ——.]—Lord M., who died on Jan. 7, 1917, by his will bequeathed an annuity of £25,000 free of income tax to his wife. The Ct. of Chancery decided that the annuity was bequeathed free of both income & super tax. The trustees of the will appealed against assessments to income tax for the five years ended Apr. 5, 1926, made upon them in respect of so much of the annuity as was not paid out of profits & gains brought into charge to tax. The will provided for the payment of the annuity primarily out of the income of the residuary estate, but, if insufficient, resort might be had to the capital of the residuary estate from time to time to make good the deficiency. The trustees alleged that for the purpose of arriving at the assessment under r. 21 of the rules applicable to all scheds. & Finance Act, 1927 (c. 10), s. 26, the amount of the annuity ought to be taken to be £25,000 with the appropriate addition to make the grossed amount which would produce £25,000 net after deduction of income tax only, which for example in 1925–26 would have been £31,250; & no addition should be made in respect of any super tax. The Crown claimed that there ought to be added that portion of the super tax assessed on the recipient of the annuity which bore the same proportion to the total super tax assessed on the recipient as the sum of £25,000, together with additions calculated on a similar basis for the previous year bore to the total income from all sources of the recipient during that year, & that a further addition should then be made to the sum so arrived at sufficient to make the total sum, after deduction of income tax at the rate current during the year, produce the sum so arrived at. The comrs. held that the payment of the super tax by the trustees was an additional annuity to Lady M., & that in computing the amount of the annuity for the purpose of assessment under r. 21 & sect. 26 the super tax with the income tax

684a. —— Payable out of estate created by mortgage.]—Applt. was entitled to the income for life of settled property after certain sums had been provided for other persons by accumulations out of the income. Before the sums in question had been wholly accumulated, applt., acting under powers conferred by a private Act, mtged. the income arising from the settled property during his life to raise the necessary balances. The mtges. were protected by policies upon the life of applt. The mtges. were subsequently consolidated & later the consolidating mtge. was, under powers provided by another private Act, taken over by the trustees of the settled property. This second Act (inter alia) provided that the premiums on the life assurance policies should be a first charge on the income of the settled property & specifically directed the trustees to retain the necessary amounts out of the income & to pay the premiums as & when due. The comrs. of Inland Revenue contended that the amounts applied in payment of the premiums formed part of applt.'s income for super tax purposes:—Held: the income out of which the premiums were paid was not income of applt., & the amounts applied in payment of premiums did not form part of his income for super tax purposes.—WOLVERTON (LORD) v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 687a. ——.]—The exor. of a deceased taxpayer appealed against super tax assessments which had been made on deceased in respect of his wife's income from settled funds & from certain shares. Deceased had obtained an advance of £11,000 from the trustees of his marriage settlement on the security of shares not forming part of the settled funds. Subsequently he had charged his life interest in the settled funds, thereby forfeiting it in favour of his wife. Later he was adjudicated bankrupt, & the mortgaged shares which had become practically valueless were sold by the Official Receiver for a nominal consideration to the wife, who thus became entitled to the equity of redemption. In 1920 the shares again became very valuable, & the trustees, to whom the £11,000 was still owing, issued an originating summons to the parties interested, & as a result the ct. sanctioned a compromise by which the trustees were to retain each year any amount by which the wife's aggregate income from the settled funds & the mortgaged shares, after deducting income tax & super tax on that aggregate income, should exceed £4,000.

f i. Annuity & income tax thereon.]—By an antenuptial marriage settlement a husband conveyed funds to trustees for payment of an annuity of £600 free of income tax to his wife, & for payment of the balance of the free income to himself. By a subsequent agreement, following upon divorce, the wife discharged her claims under the settlement, & the husband granted a mandate to the settlement trustees to pay an annuity of £600 free of tax to the wife, & the balance of the free income to himself. The intention of the agreement was declared to be that the wife should receive an absolutely free annuity of £600, & the husband bound himself to relieve her of income tax thereon in the event of her being found liable to pay it:—Held: in computing the husband's income for super tax he was entitled to deduct, in respect of the annuity, such a sum as would, after deduction of income tax, amount to £600; & that rule 23 (2) did not invalidate the payment of £600 in full to the wife, in respect (a) that the annuity was payable under the agreement out of net income belonging to the husband, which had already borne tax, & (b) that the husband had undertaken that the wife could receive such a sum as, after deduction of tax, should amount to £600.—HUTCHISON v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1930] S. C. 293; 15 Tax Cas. 89.—SCOT.

sy. Allowance by father to son—Finance Act, 1922, s. 20 (1).]—A father, who had paid a sum of money to his son, a married man, of full age, under a gratuitous bond by which he had bound himself to pay to the son an annuity for a period of three years, claimed to deduct the sum in question in calculating the amount of his total income for super tax purposes, on the ground that above sect. (c) applied to the case:—Held: the deduction was inadmissible, in respect that the income disponed fell exactly within the description contained in above sect. (b), being for a period of less than six years, & it must accordingly be deemed to be the father's income for super tax purposes.—GILLIES v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1929] S. C. (Ct. of Sess.) 131.—SCOT.

sz. Loss on purchase of shares in other companies.]—In 1920 applt. co. was incorporated in India & entered into agreements with two English cos. what had promoted it & were at all times practically the only shareholders, to purchase from them a large block of shares in B. C., Ltd., the consideration being the allotment to them of an equal number of fully paid shares of Rs. 200 each in applt. co. Half the shares were to be, & were, allotted immediately; the English cos. could retain the B. C., Ltd., shares for 3 years, & pledge them to secure their own liabilities. In 1923, no further shares having been allotted & no B. C., Ltd., shares delivered, a supplemental agreement was made under which the English cos. in 1924 sold all the B. C., Ltd., shares, the price realised & dividends being credited to applt. co.; it was part of this agreement that the shares already allotted should satisfy the original purchase consideration. In respect of super tax for 1924-25 under Indian Income Tax Act, 1922, applt. co. alleged that the transaction had resulted in a loss to them which they were entitled to deduct from profits otherwise accruing. They contended that in ascertaining the result of the transaction the allotted shares must be taken at their normal value of Rs. 200 each. It was found by the commissioner that in 1920 each share in applt. co. was worth Rs. 98:—Held: no loss was proved as the English cos. were liable to applt. co. for the amount by which the sum realised was less than the nominal value of the allotted shares.—TRUSTEES CORPN. (INDIA), LTD. v. COMMISSIONER OF INCOME TAX (1930), 57 L. R. Ind. App. 152, P. C.—IND.

The whole balance of the debt to the trustee was thus paid off within fifteen months & deceased's exor. contended that the surplus income so applied should be deducted from the wife's total income in computing the deceased's liability to super tax :—Held : the surplus income of the wife appropriated by the trustees formed part of deceased's income for purposes of super tax.—PERKINS' EXECUTOR v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 27a. Withdrawal — Notice — Notice of insolvency before expiry of withdrawal notice—Effect on right to repayment.]—By the rules of an industrial & provident society incorporated under the Industrial & Provident Societies Act, 1893 (c. 39), with a capital consisting partly of withdrawable & partly of transferable shares, holders of withdrawable shares could at any time give six months' notice in writing to receive back the money paid up on their shares. An assocn. which was a member of the society gave notice dated Oct. 18, 1929, to withdraw some of its shares, & another notice dated Nov. 5, 1929, to withdraw more of them. On Mar. 18, 1930, the society's board of directors resolved to send out a notice calling an extraordinary general meeting of the society, & the notice was sent out on Apr. 8, 1930. The notice was accompanied by a circular showing that the continuance of the society was practically impossible. The meeting was held on Apr. 30, 1930, & a resolution to wind up was passed. On a summons by the liquidator asking (inter alia) (a) whether notices of withdrawal unexpired before the date of the notice calling the extraordinary general meeting but expired before the date of the winding-up resolution were effectual; & (b) whether the personal representatives of deceased holders of withdrawable shares who had died before the commencement of the liquidation were entitled by reason of the deaths of those shareholders to any priority in respect of repayment :—Held : (1) by the Court of Appeal, the assocn. having had notice during the currency of its withdrawal notices of circumstances which showed that the society could no longer carry on its business as a going concern, was not entitled to repayment on the maturing of its notices; (2) Held : by MAUGHAM, J., personal representatives of deceased shareholders were not entitled to any priority.—Re UNITED CITIZENS' INVESTMENT TRUST, LTD., [1932] 1 Ch. 395; 101 L. so. Loan ultra vires—Guarantee by committee & shareholders—Liability.]—An industrial society, registered under Industrial & Provident Societies Act, 1893 (c. 39), obtained a loan from a bank exceeding the limit of amount allowed for borrowing under their rules. The loan was by way of an overdraft, & was arranged by the Chairman & committee of the society. A guarantee for repayment of the loan was given to the bank, signed by a number of the shareholders who were the members of the managing committee of the society. Subsequently the society got into difficulties, & eventually went into liquidation, & the bank sued on the guarantee. The guarantors admitted liability up to the limit of the borrowing powers allowed under the rules of the society, but they contended that they were not liable for any further sum, such borrowing being ultra vires :—Held : having regard to the position of the guarantors in relation to the society both as shareholders & managing committee, & their knowledge of the limitation on their borrowing powers, their contention was unsustainable, & they were liable for the full amount guaranteed. —MUNSTER & LEINSTER BANK, LTD. v. BARRY, [1931] I. 91 i. Who are contributories — Liability on loan guarantee shares—Compulsory allotment.]—The F. Co-operative Agricultural Society, Ltd., was incorporated & registered under Industrial & Provident Societies Act, 1893. The committee were empowered by the rules of the society to obtain loans "to an extent not exceeding such amount as may be authorised by a general meeting." The rules further provided that, for the purpose of securing advances, the society might issue to every member such number of loan guarantee shares of the nominal value of £1 each as would be equal to the number of ordinary shares held by each such member, & that each member should be bound to apply for, & accept, allotment of such loan guarantee shares when making application for ordinary shares. When the allotment of the ordinary shares of the Society took place, no loan guarantee shares were then issued or applied for. In consequence of losses which the society incurred, the committee found it necessary to obtain a bank overdraft amounting to £1,700. Subsequent trading proved unsuccessful, & in the year 1925 seven members of the committee gave their personal guarantees to the N. Banking Co., Ltd., in respect of the society's indebtedness. Notices were sent out convening a special meeting of the society & intimating that members would be asked to apply for loan guarantee shares, & that, failing applications, such shares would be issued to members to the extent to which they were obliged to accept the same. This meeting was held, &, no applications for loan guarantee shares being received, such shares were forthwith allotted to members in accordance with the terms of the notice convening the meeting. An order for the winding up of the society was made, & the chief clerk included in the list of contributories the names of the persons to whom loan guarantee shares had been allotted. The members affected moved to vary the chief clerk's certificate on the ground that they had been wrongly included in the list of contributories :—Held : the liability of each member to accept loan guarantee shares was an original liability from the time of his joining the society, & applts. were liable, as contributories, in respect of the loan guarantee shares allotted to them.—Re FOREGLEN CO-OPERATIVE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY, LTD., [1930] N. In Mar. 1896, the judge ordered the surplus income to be accumulated for twenty-one years from testator's death, i.e., until Nov. 6, 1914, or until the bachelor's previous death without leaving issue. During this twenty-one years' period the bachelor married & died leaving three children, two of whom were still living. Temporary orders for maintenance were made. In Nov. 1914, the judge declared that as from Nov. 6, 1914, the two children then living were entitled to maintenance under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 43 (1), but that notwithstanding sub-sect. 2 any income not so applied passed as on an intestacy. 1056 i. Expression of contrary intention—What constitutes—Direction for accumulation of income until contingency.]—Testator bequeathed to each of his four daughters the sum of £1,000 if & when she should attain the age of 21, & in the meantime he directed that the money should be lodged on deposit receipt in a bank in the joint names of his trustees & each of his daughters, & should so remain during the minority of each daughter, & on each daughter attaining the age of 21 the amount, with the accrued interest, was to be paid to her. & testator directed that his trustees should not otherwise invest the said moneys. Should any daughter die before attaining the age of 21, her legacy, with the accumulation of income, was to be divided equally among the surviving daughters. Testator devised & bequeathed all the remainder of his property to his son if & when his son should attain the age of 21, provided that during the minority of his son the income of testator's lands was to be paid to testator's wife for the support of herself & the children, & they were to have a right of residence in the testator's dwelling-house. The residue of testator's property, other than his lands, house property, & the furniture in his dwelling-house, was to be sold, & the sum realised placed on deposit receipt in a bank in the joint names of his trustees, & not otherwise invested, the interest thereon to accumulate, & the accumulation thereof with the principal to be paid to the testator's son on his attaining the age of 21. Provision was then made in the event of the son dying before attaining age. The income derived from the lands was found to be inadequate for the support of testator's wife & children :—Held : (1) the ct. had jurisdiction to apply the income derived from the money representing the legacies bequeathed to each of the children towards the maintenance, support, & education of each such child during his or her minority if the ct. was of opinion that the moneys otherwise available for such maintenance, support, & education were insufficient, the direction in the will for the accumulation of income until each child should attain the age of 21 not being the expression of a "contrary intention" within Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 43 (3), which would prevent the application of sub-sect. 1 of that section; (2) the ct. had jurisdiction to disregard the direction as to the lodgments of the amounts of the legacies on deposit receipt & to direct them to be invested in suitable securities, as the predominating object of testator, as expressed in his will, was to provide for the distribution of his property between his widow & children when the children came of age, &, pending that period, for their suitable support, maintenance, & education; &, as the direction in the will that the amounts should remain on deposit receipt was subsidiary thereto & was in conflict therewith, it must give way & be disregarded.—Re LYNCH'S TRUSTS, LYNCH v. LYNCH, [1931] I. When once a child has been taken from its parents & made a ward of a Children's Aid Society & then placed out with foster parents, the parents have forfeited their natural rights, & others have acquired rights. The words "having regard to the welfare of the child" indicate that the intention of the statute is that the judge, in determining whether the parent is a fit person to have the child restored to him, should contrast the situation of the child in the care of its foster parents with that which it would occupy if restored to its natural parents.—Re CHIEMELEWSKI, [1928] 2 D. O., c. 186, by the father of an infant, for an order for the custody of the infant, it was held as the infant was not at the time resident in Ontario, the Supreme Ct. of Ontario had no jurisdiction. As the procedure under Infants' Act is an alternative procedure to the procedure by writ of habeas corpus, the jurisdiction must be limited to cases where a writ would be granted; & a writ will not be granted where the person directed to be produced in ct. is without the jurisdiction. It is only in extraordinary circumstances that the ct. will appoint a guardian to an infant who resides abroad, & has no property in the jurisdiction; & in this case the circumstances were not so extraordinary as to call for the exercise of this jurisdiction.—Re Shand, [1928] 2 D. sw. Implied right of further application—Necessity for change of circumstances.]—The principle that orders as to the custody of children are subject to further application & are to be treated as if expressed to be made "until further order" does not enable applications for custody to be made from time to time under the same circumstances as those which existed at the time the existing order for custody was made. An order awarding the custody of a child is subject to the doctrine of res judicata with respect to all questions affecting the matter up to the time it was rendered. If, however, a change is shown to have arisen in the circumstances of the parties since the order was made which warrants a reconsideration of the question, the ct. will not be bound by the order, but will use its discretion in view of the altered conditions, always keeping in mind the fact that the welfare of the child is the paramount consideration.—Wallis v. Wallis & Grant, [1929] 2 D. L. R. 253; 1 W. W. R. 631; 23 S. L. R. 489.—CAN.

sx. Order not final.]—An order for custody of an infant is never final in the sense that it cannot be changed &, while it is better for an infant generally that its custody should not be changed back & forth, yet it is much more desirable that it should be changed than that it should remain where it is not in the best interest of the child that it should be.—Cairns v. Cairns (No. 2), [1932] 1 W. A., 1924, c. 99. The Act does not, however, create a new canon for the construction of wills. Therefore, where the adopted daughter was the niece of the foster father's wife, & his will, after making provision for said adopted daughter by name, gave part of the residue of his estate to his & his wife's next-of-kin, the daughter took under the residuary bequest as his wife's niece & not as testator's child.—Re Scott Estate, [1928] 1 W. 1916 i. —— Where fraud or collusion can be alleged.]—A suit by a minor to set aside a consent decree, on the allegation that a fraud was practised not on the ct. but on himself, is maintainable.

It is the duty of a guardian ad litem to be as vigilant in guarding the interests of the minor as he would be expected to be if his own interests were involved, & the ct. will ordinarily relieve the minor from the effect of a consent decree & give him an opportunity to defend the suit, if the guardian did no more than put his signature to a petition of compromise without considering for himself the question of benefit to the minor. The grocer having ignored their intimation, the manufacturers sought interdict against his use of their bottles. After a proof as to the circumstances in which the manufacturers allowed to their customers & to the public possession of their bottles :—Held : members of the public were not precluded from acquiring a right to use the manufacturers' bottles, & the tendering by members of the public to the grocer of bottles embossed with the manufacturers' name did not certiorate the grocer that such bottles were in fact the property of the manufacturers, & the grocer was under no duty to the manufacturers to inquire into the history of each bottle tendered to him; interdict refused.—LEITCH & CO., LTD. v. LEYDON; BARR & CO., LTD. v. MACGEOGHEGAN, [1930] S. 830a. -.]—In 1909, V. & Co., defts. in an action, were endeavouring to perfect a system known as the " C. A. V." system, for lighting motor cars by electricity, & the A. I., Ltd. who were pltfs., were licencees of patents for a dynamo suitable for the electrical lighting of motor vehicles. The parties, with a view to utilising pltfs.' dynamo in connection with the " C. A. V." system, agreed for one year that pltfs. should give defts. the " sole selling agency " for the dynamo, which was to be supplied at cost price; defts. were to use their best endeavours to introduce & sell the dynamo, & were not to become directly or indirectly interested in the sale of any other dynamo, & the parties were to mutually communicate improvements in such dynamo. Defts. were to be allowed a commission of 10 per cent. on cost price, & the ultimate profits were to be equally divided, but the agreement was not to create a partnership. Defts. during the pendency of the agreement received certain testimonials. After the termination of the agreement, pltfs. brought an action to restrain defts. from using or publishing these testimonials, & moved for an interlocutory injunction:—Held: defts. were sole purchasers or sole consignees of pltfs.' goods upon special terms, that there could not be implied from the agreement a contract between the parties, that all information of which defts. became possessed during the pendency of the agreement should not afterwards be used by defts. for other purposes, & that a fiduciary relationship had not been established between the parties as would have existed had defts. been in fact pltfs.' agents.—ACCUMULATOR INDUSTRIES, LTD. v. VANDERVELL (C. Deft. on this procedure summons asked for further & better particulars of the secret processes:—Held: deft. was entitled to such particulars, but that they must be disclosed only to three experts not trade rivals of pltf., deft. himself & his legal advisers, & the order must be in such a form as to prevent the persons to whom the secret processes were communicated from disclosing them, & copies of the particulars must be returned to pltf. when the proceedings were closed.—SORBO RUBBER SPONGE PRODUCTS, LTD. v. DEFRIES (1930), 47 R. P. C. 454.

839b. —— —— —— ——.]—Pltf. co., who were manufacturers of a variety of chemical products, including a boiler disincrustant named " Algaloid " claimed that the latter was produced by a secret process. They sought to restrain deft., who had been in their service for some years & ultimately as works manager, from using or disclosing information obtained in their service. In particular pltfs. alleged that deft. was only enabled to make & sell a product " Descalit " by the wrongful use of information. Pltfs. also alleged that deft. had made & taken away copies or had wrongfully carried in his memory extracts from a secret formulæ book. Deft. denied that there was any secret process & that he had wrongfully taken & used any information:—Held: deft. had not made or taken away copies of formulæ from the book, which in fact was a costings book, & deft. was not warned as to secrecy when he entered employment in which he learned the processes without difficulty; an injunction would not be granted to prevent using knowledge that had thus become his own; dishonest or surreptitious obtaining of knowledge would have been upon a different footing, but no obligation could be implied not to use knowledged honestly acquired.—UNITED INDIGO CHEMICAL CO., LTD. v. ROBINSON (1931), 49 R. 842a. —— Against public official.]—Where a public officer, e.g., the Comptroller-General of Patents, claims the right to disclose information to the public which pltf. in an action is primâ facie entitled to withhold from publicity, it is proper to restrain that public official from taking a step which would result in that information being disclosed.—REX CO. & REX RESEARCH CORPN. v. MUIRHEAD & COMPTROLLER-GENERAL OF PATENTS (1926), 96 L. 853a. Conversion of goods—Perishable goods.]—Pltfs., who were an American co., carried on business as exporters of fruit. They had been exporting fruit from Colombia for many years, & they had a large number of contracts with the growers of bananas & dealt with about 97 per cent. of the exportable bananas in that country. Under those contracts the bananas which were to be sold to pltfs. became the property of pltfs. as soon as they were severed from the trees. Defts. imported into England a cargo of bananas, under contracts which they had made with a co-operative society formed by some of the banana growers in Colombia, who desired to break down pltfs.' monopoly & find another outlet for their produce. Pltfs. claimed that 2,041 stems of bananas, an unidentified part of the cargo imported by defts., were from growers with whom pltfs. had contracts, or were from estates covered by those contracts, & they obtained an interim injunction restraining defts. from converting to their own use or otherwise dealing with or in any way disposing of bananas, the property of pltfs., save by delivery of the same to pltfs. or their agents:—Held: the order for an interim injunction was unsatisfactory & embarrassing, because (1) the bananas were perishable; (2) the order did not identify the bananas, dealings in which it was sought to restrain; (3) it did not order delivery to pltfs. The order must be varied by ordering the sale of a specified number of bananas to be selected.—UNITED FRUIT CO. v. FREDERICK LEYLAND & Co., LTD. (1930), 144 L. T. 97; 47 T. L. R. 33; 74 Sol. 906a. —— ——.]—A society, composed mainly of architects, was formed into a co. limited by guarantee under Cos. Acts. By its arts. of assocn. membership of the society was open to persons qualified in certain ways approved by the council of the society, & paying a certain entrance fee & yearly subscriptions; & members were authorised to use the letters "M. S. A." as a professional designation. Deft., who was an architect, but had never been & was not a member of the society, used the letters "M. S. A." as a professional designation. The society brought an action against him for an injunction, which he did not defend, & by its statement of claim alleged, among other things, that the continuous & exclusive use of the letters by its members had given the letters a definite meaning & value in the minds of the public, & the use of them by unauthorised persons would damage the society. On motion for judgment in default of appearance :—Held : pltfs. were not entitled to an injunction.—SOCIETY OF ARCHITECTS v. KENDRICK (1910), 102 L. T. 526; 26 T. L. R. 433.

906b. Use of professional designation implying membership—Of professional institution.]—Pltf. society was incorporated in 1885, under Cos. Act, 1867, as a co. not for gain without the use of the word "limited" under licence of the Board of Trade. In 1886 pltf. society recommended its members to adopt as their professional designation the use after their names of the term "Incorporated Accountant." By 1905 that designation had come to mean to that section of the public who had dealings with accountants a member of the society, which, by its system of tests & examinations, had conferred upon its members the valuable privilege of a recognised status for ability & integrity. In that year deft. association was incorporated under the Cos. Acts as a co. limited by guarantee. Shortly after its incorporation its council recommended its members to adopt the designation "Incorporated Accountant" with the addition of the abbreviation "Lon. Assocn." In an action by pltf. society against deft. assocn. & G., one of its members, claiming (a) an injunction to restrain G. from using in connection with his business of accountant the designation "incorporated accountant," & (b) an injunction to restrain deft. society from holding out, by advertisements or otherwise, that its members were entitled to use such designation : — Held : the designation "incorporated accountant" was a fancy & not a descriptive term, & had come to denote membership of the society, &, therefore, that the unauthorised use of it inflicted an injury on pltf. society, in respect of which it was entitled to maintain an action. Pltf. society had a pecuniary interest in preventing deft. assocn. from attempting, by representations & inducements held out to members of the professions, to reduce the status of pltf. society by conferring improperly an indication of that status. Pltf. society was entitled to the injunctions which it claimed. —SOCIETY OF ACCOUNTANTS & AUDITORS v. GOODWAY & LONDON ASSOCN. OF ACCOUNTANTS, LTD., [1907] 1 Ch. 489; 76 L. J. Ch. 384; 96 L. After his exclusion deft. continued to use letter-paper headed "Honours Final. Institute of Chartered Accountants." In an action by the institute for an injunction the evidence was that this heading conveyed the impression that deft. was still connected with the institute :—Held : though deft. was entitled to state that he had obtained honours in the examination, the institute was entitled to an injunction against his making the statement in such a way as to lead to the belief that he was a member of the institute or was connected with it.—INSTITUTE OF CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS OF ENGLAND & WALES v. HARDWICK (1919), 35 T. An interim order was made restraining deft. until a specified date, &, subsequently, an order was made by consent whereby deft. was restrained from committing, or attempting to commit, any breach of the covenant, simpliciter, & without stating the period for which the order operated:—Held: the intention of the parties was to restrain deft. during the currency of the period of prohibition stated in the covenant; & the ct. had jurisdiction to correct the judgment.—WARREN TEA CO., LTD. v. REINGLASS, [1928] S. 116a. —— Hole in floor.]—Pltf. went to a public-house by appointment to meet a friend, &, as his friend had not arrived, walked into the parlour, & there fell through a hole in the floor, which was being repaired. As far as appeared his only object in going to the house was to meet his friend. In an action against the landlord for negligence in not fencing the hole, & in which pltf. alleged that he was in the house as a guest, the jury found for pltf. The ct. refused a rule to enter a nonsuit, which was asked for on the ground that there was no evidence, either of negligence on the part of deft., or of pltf. being in the house as a guest.—AXFORD v. PRIOR (1866), 14 W. 138a. —— Extent of duty.]—An innkeeper is bound to supply only such accommodation for his guests & their goods as he in fact possesses, & undertakes only that the accommodation which he offers is reasonably fit for that purpose. He is not an insurer of his guest's goods against injury, though, subject to Innkeepers' Liability Act, 1863 (c. 41), he may be considered an insurer of them against loss. In the case of injury to the goods, he is responsible only if negligence on his part is proved. A guest at an hotel that was an inn placed his motor car in the hotel garage, a building suitable for protecting a car in ordinary weather, but not suitable for protecting a car with water in the radiator or water jacket in time of severe frost. During his stay at the hotel there was a frost of great severity, & the water in the water jacket became frozen & the engine of the car was damaged :—Held : in relation to the car the innkeeper's duties were those of an innkeeper only, he was not negligent in not emptying the water from the water jacket, &, in the absence of negligence, he was not liable for the damage to the car.—WINKWORTH v. RAVEN, [1931] 1 K. While the guest was at dinner at the hotel the car was stolen :—Held : there had been no alteration in the law regarding the liability of an innkeeper for the loss of goods brought on his premises by a guest, & where the relationship of innkeeper & guest existed as regards eating & drinking, that relationship extended also to the vehicle of the guest brought by him to the inn, & the common law rule still applied & was not affected by Innkeepers' Liability Act, 1863 (c. 41).—ARIA v. BRIDGE HOUSE HOTEL (STAINES), LTD. sx. For breach of contract—Special contract to receive.]—Held : the fact that pltf. was received under a special contract did not deprive him of his ordinary rights as a guest, but his claim in that capacity to damages was denied ; he could not sue in contract & in tort. It was the contract duty of defts. to furnish him with a room at no more than $1.50 a day ; if they had no room at that price, another just as good should have been furnished at that price. The contract was broken by debarring pltf. from his room without giving him another room & by ordering him out of the house.—LIPPERT v. FORD HOTEL OF TORONTO, LTD., [1930] 3 D. L. R. 722 ; 65 O. L. 186a. ——.]—On Oct. 30, 1929, about 5.30 p.m., pltf. & her husband arrived at defts.' hotel with their suit cases & engaged a room for the night with a view to attending a dance in the neighbourhood. After having tea in their room they dressed for the dance. Pltf., having replaced a diamond ring which she was wearing by a pearl ring, put the diamond ring into a jewel-case & placed that in her suit case, which she latched but did not lock. When they went down to dinner pltf.'s husband locked the door of their room & took the key with him. After dinner they returned to their room, & on leaving it to go to the dance pltf.'s husband again locked the door & then handed the key in at the hotel office. About 2.30 a.m. the following morning they returned to their room in the hotel, having got the key from the hall porter. On getting up between 8 & 9 a.m. pltf. opened her suit case & jewel case & found that the diamond ring was missing. Defts. were immediately informed of the loss & search was made for the ring, but without result. Defts. had exhibited in the hotel a copy of Innkeepers' Liability Act, 1863 (c. 41), s. 1, & in the room occupied by pltf. a notice that all articles of value should be deposited at the office. Pltf. brought an action in the county ct. against defts. as insurers for damages for having failed to keep the ring safely. At the trial the above facts were proved or admitted, & it was found as a fact that the pltf. had taken reasonable care of the ring; but the judge, thinking that he was bound to do so by a previous case, gave judgment for defts. On appeal to the Div. Ct.:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding that pltf. had taken reasonable care of the ring & accordingly that the loss of it was not due to negligence on her part; the fact that she had not deposited the ring at the office in compliance with the notice did not imply that she had retained the protection of it in her own hands to the relief of defts.; & therefore that she was entitled to judgment against defts. in the action.—CARPENTER v. HAYMARKET HOTEL, LTD., [1931] 1 K. 18a. Type calculated to elude observation—Insurers refused benefit of clause.]—Deft. co. insured a quantity of leather, consigned c.i.f., for a voyage from New York to Tunis, by a certificate of insurance which provided: "This certificate represents & takes the place of the policy & conveys all the rights of the original policy-holder as fully as if the property were covered by a special policy direct to the holder of this certificate." One of the conditions of the policy was in much smaller print than other parts of the policy & was as follows: "In case of loss or damage to the property hereby insured the loss shall be reported to the representatives of the co., or, if there be no representative of the co., to Lloyd's agent, as soon as the goods are landed or the loss is known or expected." On the day after the arrival of the goods at Tunis the consignee sold them to pltf., who found them to have been damaged by salt water. In an action by pltf. on the certificate of insurance deft. co. contended, (1) that pltf. was not the right person to sue, & (2) that the clause in the policy as to giving notice within a limited time had not been complied with:—Held: the certificate, having been issued by deft. co. itself, enured to the benefit of pltf., & since pltf. did not know of the condition as to notice, & since the clause as to notice was in such small print that it was not such as a reasonable man, reading with reasonable care, would regard as forming part of the contractual terms, pltf. was entitled to recover.—KOSKAS v. STANDARD MARINE INSURANCE CO., LTD. The agent was not authorised by the insurance co. to fill in proposal forms, & it did not appear that the co. knew that he had in fact done so. His duties were to procure persons to effect insurances & to see, as far as he could, that proposal forms were correctly filled up ; he was not authorised to give a cover note or to enter into a policy of insurance. A policy was issued to the person who had signed the proposal form, & during its currency he made a claim under it, but the insurance co. repudiated liability on the ground of the untrue statements in the proposal form :—Held : the agent of the insurance co. in filling in the proposal form was merely the amanuensis of the proposer, that the knowledge of the true facts by the agent could not be imputed to the insurance co., & therefore that the insurance co. was entitled to repudiate liability on the ground of the untrue statements in the proposal form.—NEWSHOLME BROS. v. ROAD TRANSPORT & GENERAL INSURANCE CO., LTD., [1929] 2 K. 157 iv. —— —— ——.]—Where in a contract of insurance a provision for subrogation contains no limitations or restrictions the insurer's right of subrogation should not be restricted within narrower limits than equity would have given him in the absence of the provision. A motion by the insurer under such a contract for an order compelling the insured to permit the former to use the latter's name in suing third parties was therefore allowed, where the insured pressed for the order because of its belief that the cause of the loss might eventually be found to have been the result of a tort rather than a breach of contract.—NORTHERN ASSCE. 203a. —— —— Refusal of company to insure.]—Applts. were in possession of a motor car under a hire-purchase agreement, it being a term of the agreement that they would insure the car with the B. insurance co. The B. co. refused to accept the insurance " owing to information received " & told applts.' brokers that this was their reason for refusal ; but the brokers did not communicate the fact to applts., but told them that the B. co. had refused the insurance because they did not cover that class of car. Applts.' brokers then succeeded in obtaining an insurance of the car with the L. co., but when the original period of that insurance was coming to an end the L. co. wrote that they could not invite renewal. Applts. had not in fact wished for a renewal & had not made any application to the L. co., & they then effected an insurance with the present resps. The proposal form of resps. contained a number of questions & a stipulation that the truth of the answers to those questions should be the basis of the contract. To a question " Has any co. or underwriter declined to insure ? " applts. answered, No ; the fact being that without applts.' knowledge the B. co. had declined to accept their insurance, & the L. co., as applts. were aware, had intimated that they would not renew. Applts. claimed on their policy with resps., & resps. refused to pay, on the ground that the question in the proposal form had been answered untruly & that there had been concealment of a material fact. Applts. brought an action on the policy & the judge, by whom the action was tried, gave judgment for resps. Applts. appealed :—Held : as regards the B. co. the answer of applts. was untrue, & the fact that they were unaware of its untruth was immaterial ; & as regards the L. co., although there had been no refusal to renew because there had not been any actual request for renewal the intimation that the co. would not invite renewal was a material fact which ought to have been disclosed to resps., & was in fact if not in words a refusal to insure within the meaning of the question.—HOLT'S MOTORS, LTD. v. SOUTH EAST LANCASHIRE INSURANCE CO., LTD. 218a. Representation of underwriter—Estoppel of insurer.]—The claimant owned a motor car which he sometimes let out on hire & sometimes used himself for his own pleasure. He wished to insure the car, & instructed brokers to effect an insurance. The brokers interviewed the underwriter of resps., & he showed them a form of policy & said that it would cover both private pleasure & private hire by the insured. The claimant on being informed of this signed a proposal form for a policy & his broker stated in the form that the purpose for which the car would be used was " private hire " ; the broker meant thereby that private hire would be the principal risk. Resps. then issued to the claimant a policy which in words covered " private pleasure or private hire," but which provided that the signed proposal form was incorporated with it & formed the basis of the contract. An accident occurred while the claimant was using the car for his own pleasure, & he made a claim under the policy. Resps. refused to pay, on the ground that as the proposal form was the basis of the policy & only related to the car while on hire an accident occurring while the car was not on hire was not covered. The dispute was referred to arbitration, & the arbitrator awarded in favour of the claimant, subject to the decision of a special case. On argument of the case :—Held : the arbitrator had acted rightly in admitting evidence of the interview between the brokers & the underwriter, & even apart from such evidence, as there was an inconsistency between the proposal form & the policy, the later document must prevail. On the facts, resps. were estopped from disputing the claim because their underwriter knew that the claimant had taken out the policy in reliance on his representation that it would cover private pleasure.—KAUFMANN v. BRITISH SURETY INSURANCE CO., LTD. The effect of assigning the policy in the manner in which the policy was assigned, which was the ordinary manner in which policies were assigned in England, was to assign to the person holding the policy the right to sue on any claim which the assignor had on the policy, irrespective of the fact that at the time of the loss or damage the assignee was not interested in the subject-matter lost or damaged. Pltfs. were the assignees of the policy; the assignor of the policy had a right to make a claim in respect of the damage; that claim was assignable, & it was in fact assigned to pltfs., & they were entitled to sue the underwriters in respect of the damage.—ARON (J.) & Co. v. MIALL (1928), 98 L. 491a. ——.]—A firm of merchants in Egypt, C. & V., took out with applts., the Atlantic Assurance Co., an unvalued policy of marine insurance to the extent of £8,000, to cover certain textile goods, which they held as security for a debt, on a voyage from Egypt to England. The insured goods were lost on the voyage. Resp. W. had been in litigation with C. & V. & had obtained a judgment against them in the Egyptian Cts., & in part satisfaction of his judgment, & in consideration of other matters, he took from the liquidator of C. & V. an assignment of their rights under the policy, subject to a stipulation that he should pay to the liquidator the first £1,000 recovered by him under the policy. W. then sued applts. on the policy, & judgment was given in his favour for £4,000. Applts. now appealed against this judgment, & resp. W. cross-appealed on the ground that the amount of the judgment should not have been limited to £4,000. The ct., after consideration, allowed the appeal & dismissed the cross-appeal:—Held: (1) per SCRUTTON, L.J., as the policy was an unvalued policy, it was essential that the value of the lost goods should be proved, and as the evidence was not sufficient to enable the ct. to fix any definite value the action failed; (2) per GREER & SLESSER, L.JJ., as the assignment to resp. W. did not pass to him the whole of the beneficial interest in the policy under Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 50, W. could not sue on the policy without joining his assignors, & as the action was brought in his name alone it must fail; (3) per cur., the expression "prime cost" in Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 16 (3), means the value to the owner at or about the date of shipment.—WILLIAMS v. ATLANTIC ASSURANCE CO., LTD. The two cos., which were in liquidation, were closely associated, & shared the same chairman, managing director & underwriter, & the same offices & clerical staff. There was no evidence of any formal contract of guarantee of the policies between the two companies, & on this ground the liquidator of the National Benefit Co. rejected appcts.' proof :—Held: the co., on the evidence, was estopped from denying that the policies issued by the National Marine Co. bearing the above indorsement were so guaranteed, & the appcts. were therefore entitled to prove in the winding-up of the co.—Re NATIONAL BENEFIT ASSURANCE CO., LTD., [1932] 2 Ch. 184 ; 101 L. Both the original policy & the reinsurance policies covered perils of the sea & jettison, & were expressed to be " warranted free from loss arising from . . . destruction . . . in a port of distress or otherwise." The original policy contained no admission of seaworthiness, but the reinsurance policies did contain such an admission, & they provided that defts. would " pay as paid thereon," & that the payment should be subject to the same terms as in the original policy. The vessel carried, in addition to the gunpowder, drums of sulphuric acid, & owing to heavy weather some of the drums burst & the acid disabled the machinery, with the result that the ship had to put in to a port of distress. There the required repairs could not be carried out with the gunpowder on board, & it was thrown overboard & became a total loss. Pltfs. paid the owners as for a total loss, & claimed to be reimbursed by defts. :—Held: as the way in which the sulphuric acid was stowed & loaded affected the safety of the ship & rendered her unseaworthy, pltfs. were under no liability on the original policy, & they could not recover from defts. on the reinsurance policies.—FIREMAN'S FUND INSURANCE CO. v. WESTERN AUSTRALIAN INSURANCE CO., LTD. 720b. " On a voyage."]—Pltfs. insured a consignment of oranges from any port in Spain to Antwerp, &, after the ship had left Valencia & had been in wireless communication with Gibraltar, they reinsured with deft. by a slip, which referred to the fact that the ship had been in such communication with Gibraltar & which contained the words " on a voyage," meaning, according to the evidence, that the risk should attach only from a named port in the course of the voyage. The ship stranded before she reached Gibraltar, the oranges were damaged, & pltfs. had to pay on the policy. In an action on the contract of reinsurance :—Held : on the true reading of the slip, the intention was to limit the risk to the voyage from Gibraltar, & the action failed.—EAGLE, STAR & BRITISH DOMINIONS INSURANCE CO., LTD. v. REINER (1927), 43 T. 720c. Insured object in damaged condition at expiration of insurance—Continuation of risk for "immediate consequences" of such damage.]—Pltfs., reinsurers of a risk under a marine policy, reinsured that risk with defts. The policies were subject to the following conditions : "In the event of the vessel not being at the place of destination on the date of the expiration of the policy, the insurance shall continue in force till the end of the day when the vessel arrives at her first place of destination ; " & " If the insured object is in a damaged condition at the time when the insurance expires, the risk shall continue for the immediate consequences of such damage until the object without unnecessary delay has been repaired or sold." On the date of the expiration of the policy, the vessel had not arrived at L. Bay, her first place of destination, but before reaching it she grounded on a reef & was taken into L. Bay badly damaged. Temporary repairs having been effected, she continued her voyage, but as she began to leak again she had to be run ashore in order to prevent sinking, & was subsequently sold as a wreck. Pltfs. having paid the original insurers as for a total loss, claimed against defts. on their reinsurance policy :—Held : the loss was an immediate consequence of the damage done by the original stranding, & the risk covered by the policy continued, until the vessel was repaired with no unnecessary delay, for the immediate consequences of the original damage.—MERCHANTS' MARINE INSURANCE CO. v. LIVERPOOL MARINE & GENERAL INSURANCE CO. 729a. Insurance against total or constructive or arranged total loss—Meaning of "arranged" —Artificial total loss not included.]—The owners of a Norwegian steamship were insured with pltfs. & other underwriters. Pltfs. re-insured their risk with defts. The insured steamship stranded in the Black Sea but was floated off & eventually reached Constantinople. Owing to the absence of adequate repairing facilities at this port, it was extremely doubtful that the vessel's condition would permit her to reach a port where repairs could be carried out without the risk of her becoming a total loss. In these circumstances the owners & underwriters agreed to settle the matter : the vessel was to be regarded as a total loss & the underwriters were to pay an agreed sum which in fact was more than her full repaired value at the time. Pltfs. claimed a proportionate part of the sum so paid from defts. The material portion of the policy of re-insurance was as follows : "Insurance . . . upon hull & machinery, etc., valued as in original policy. Being against total & (or) constructive & (or) arranged total loss of vessel only as per Bergens Damp Club policies & to follow their settlements" :—Held : the action failed. On the true construction of the contract there must be either a constructive total loss or a genuine claim for one which claim is settled by arrangement. The word "arranged" really meant compromised & did not cover an artificial total loss created by the will of the parties.—BERGENS DAMPSKIBS ASSURANCE FORENING v. SUN INSURANCE OFFICE, LTD. 735a. Unsuccessful action against insurer—Failure to pay costs—Liability of reinsurer to insurer.]—By a policy of marine insurance a vessel was insured by her owner with the present pltf., who by another policy reinsured the vessel against the risks, & for the period, covered by the original policy, for total loss only. A claim by the owner against the present pltfs. on the original policy failed on the ground that the vessel had been scuttled ; & the present pltfs. obtained a judgment against the owner for costs, but it was impossible to recover the costs. The present pltfs. then claimed these costs from the present deft., one of the underwriters of the reinsurance policy. There was in the reinsurance policy a sue & labour clause, but no express contract by the reinsurers to pay the costs in question :—Held : that the sue & labour clause was inapplicable to such a claim, & as there was neither an express nor an implied contract to pay the costs in question the action failed.—SCOTTISH METROPOLITAN ASSURANCE CO., LTD. v. GROOM (1924), 41 T. 852a. Landing dispensed with by owner.] Pltfs., a firm of merchants at O., imported a cargo of bunker coal from the Tyne, having insured the risk of the ocean transit with the P. co. until the goods were " discharged & safely landed," including " all risks of craft to & from vessel & whilst in craft awaiting landing." The storage risk, while at moorings at O., was covered by defts. Pltfs.' practice was to have bunker coal discharged into barges & to leave it in the barges until a vessel required bunkers & then to supply that vessel from a barge alongside. When the coal in question had arrived at O. & 1,000 tons of it had been discharged into a barge, the barge sank during the following night & part of the coal was lost & part was damaged. Pltfs. having claimed from defts., the latter compromised the claim & took third-party proceedings to recover a contribution from the P. co. on the ground of double insurance :—Held : as pltfs. dispensed with landing the P. co.'s risk terminated when the discharge was completed, &, as the discharge of the 1,000 tons had been completed, the proceedings against the third party failed.—LINDSAY BLEE DEPOTS, LTD. v. MOTOR UNION INSURANCE CO., LTD. 855a. Effect of clause.]—Claimants insured with defts. a quantity of cork from a port or place between Bordeaux & Nice to the United Kingdom. Claimants were cork growers & had a factory & warehouse near Algeciras, & they had sent from the factory to Algeciras quantities of cork for shipment, & had allowed it to accumulate on the jetty there until there should be enough for a cargo. While a quantity of cork was on the jetty awaiting shipment & before the policy was issued, a fire broke out on the jetty, & to prevent the fire spreading, the authorities jettisoned part of the cork & threw sea-water on the remainder, with the result that a large portion of the cork was lost or damaged. The policy, when issued, contained (inter alia) a marginal clause that the policy was not to enure to the benefit of any fire insurance co., but loss reasonably attributable to fire was covered. It also contained a warehouse to warehouse clause. A claim under the policy was referred to arbn., & the arbitrator treated the marginal clause as non-existent, on the ground that it was not included, or stipulated for, in the slip which represented the true contract between the parties, & he also found that the loss was one reasonably attributable to fire :—Held : (1) the goods on the pier at Algeciras, having come in the ordinary course of transit from the shippers' manufactory at San Roque, were covered by the policy ; (2) there being an existing fire & an imminent peril, the damage caused by water, used either to extinguish the fire or to prevent it from spreading, was a proximate consequence of fire, which could be recovered under the general words of the policy, as being ejusdem generis with fire ; (3) the underwriters were not relieved from liability by the restraint of princes clause : (4) the case must be remitted to the arbitrator upon the question whether the policy issued, so far as it contained the fire policy clause, was or was not contrary to the usual form of marine insurance on goods.—SYMINGTON & CO. v. UNION INSURANCE SOCIETY OF CANTON (1928), 97 L. 912a. Vessel laid up—Continuation of voyage.]—Deft. corpn. insured pltfs.' steamship P. for twelve calendar months from midnight July 30, 1930, to midnight, July 30, 1931, subject to " Institute Time Clauses as attached." Clause 13 of the Institute Time Clauses provided " warranted free from particular average under 3 per cent." Clause 16 provided : " The warranty & conditions as to average under 3 per cent. to be applicable to each voyage as if separately insured, & a voyage shall be deemed to commence at one of the following periods to be selected by the assured when making up the claim, namely, at any time at which the vessel (1) begins to load cargo, or (2) sails in ballast to a loading port. Such voyage shall be deemed to continue during the ensuring period until either she has made one outward & one homeward passage (including an intermediate ballast passage if made) or has carried & discharged two cargoes, whichever may first happen, &, further, in either case, until she begins to load a subsequent cargo or sails in ballast for a loading port." The P. was chartered to load in the River Plate for Antwerp, & between Jan. 10, 1931, & the discharge of her cargo at Antwerp on Apr. 9, 1931, she sustained damage on three occasions. She then lay up at Antwerp till Aug. 27, 1931, owing to absence of freight. During the period of lying up she sustained damage on two occasions. The question for decision was whether the cost of repairs arising from these two later casualties could be added to the expenses incurred on the three earlier casualties so as to ascertain whether the 3 per cent. particular average was exceeded :—Held : on the clear wording of clause 16, which defined a " voyage," the voyage which had commenced on Jan. 10 was still continuing during the period of lying up. On any other construction there would be great difficulty in knowing what limit to put on the period of delay. The contention of pltfs. was right, & there must be judgment for them.—PORTVALE STEAMSHIP CO., LTD. v. ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE CORPN. (1932), 147 L. T. 217 ; 48 T. L. R. 441 ; 76 Sol. Jo. 415.

Philadelphia cargo-owners were not liable to pay more than the salved value of the cargo. This they paid. The first defts., the London Assurance, were the insurers in part of the hull & machinery against perils of the sea & fire. The second defts., the British Traders Insurance Co., Ltd., were the insurers of part of the cargo's proportion of general average disbursements, & the fourth deft., A. H. Henderson, was an underwriter of a similar policy at Lloyds for the other part. The third defts., the United Kingdom Mutual Assurance Assocn., Ltd., were a club of which pltfs. were members, & as such entitled to be indemnified against liabilities for cargo's proportion of general average not otherwise recoverable. Pltfs. claimed under the policies. The London Assurance denied liability. The third defts. admitted liability if & when any balance was ascertained. The other insurers disputed the amount claimed & the method of computation. The bills of lading provided that general average should be adjusted under York-Antwerp Rules, 1890, & under the policies the same rules were to apply:—Held: the 18,000 dollars recovered in New York must be taken into account when computing the liability of the disbursements underwriters. In the case of the hull underwriters the values to be considered were those at the termination of the adventure & the loss incurred by reason of the diminution or extinction of the value of the cargo was a loss which fell upon the assured, the shipowner, & came within Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 66 (4). —GREEN STAR SHIPPING CO., LTD. v. LONDON ASSURANCE (1931), 145 L. 2010a. —— Recovery of damages in collision action.]—Defts. insured pltfs.' steamer against the usual marine risks, the steamer being valued in the policy at £4,000. During the currency of the policy the steamer collided with another steamer. The ship was repaired at pltfs.' cost, & a collision action by pltfs. against the owners of the other steamer was settled, & the owners of the other steamer paid over to pltfs. £2,500, as being half the damages. In an action against defts. pltfs. contended that, as the balance of their loss was £2,500 they were entitled to recover that amount, it being less than the value of £4,000 put on the steamer in the policy:—Held: defts. were liable only for £1,500, being the difference between £4,000 & £2,500, the amount recovered by pltfs. from the owners of the other ship.—GOOLE & HULL STEAM TOWING CO., LTD. v. OCEAN MARINE INSURANCE CO., LTD., [1928] 1 K. 2014a. Loss less than amount paid into court.]—Resps. insured applts.' tug boat by a policy of marine insurance, which provided that, on a claim for a constructive total loss, the insured value was to be taken as the repaired value, & that nothing was to be taken into account for the damaged value, & also that all claims were to be subject to English law & usage. The tug was sunk by collision, & applts. at once gave notice of abandonment. Salvors employed by resps. raised the tug in a few days, & the abandonment was not accepted. The salvors, without the knowledge of applts., made an offer to resps. for the tug, & resps. requested them to put it into writing, which they did. The appellate ct., considering the evidence as to the probable cost of repair, held that there had been only a partial loss to an amount less than that paid into ct.:—Held: (1) the sinking was not an actual total loss; (2) resps. were not precluded from denying that they had accepted the abandonment; (3) there had been no constructive total loss within Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 60 (2) (i), since even at the date of the abandonment it was not unlikely that the tug could be recovered, & it was unnecessary to consider whether the old rule, that the crucial moment was the commencement of the action, had been modified by sects. 61 & 62; (4) the appellate ct. was not bound to accept the highest estimate of the cost of repairs given by resps.' witnesses, & the ct.'s finding as to the sum necessary, being justified by the evidence & not being based upon any error of principle, could not be questioned.—CAPTAIN J. 2341a. —— —— Damages for negligence in watching wreck.]—Defts. & other underwriters insured pltfs.' steamship A. against total loss, & to the extent of three-quarters against damages which pltfs. might have to pay for collisions with other vessels. The A. was sunk in a river & in fact was a constructive total loss. Notice of abandonment was given & acceptance thereof refused. Pltfs. & defts. agreed without prejudice to their rights to take joint action to salve the property. The master of the A. employed a tug to watch the wreck & warn other vessels. Owing to the negligence of the crew of the tug the steamship S. came into collision with the A., & both vessels sustained damage. In an action brought, in the names of pltfs., by & for the benefit of defts., against the S., the owners of the S. counterclaimed & recovered judgment for the whole of their damages & costs, & the underwriters paid three-quarters of the damages & costs to the owners of the S. :—Held : the underwriters were jointly liable to indemnify pltfs. against the remaining one-quarter of the damages & costs of the S., the liability not arising under the policy but upon the contract of indemnity.—STUART & STEAMSHIP ALLEGHANY OF LONDON, LTD. v. MERCHANTS' MARINE INSURANCE CO., LTD. 2369a. Reinsurance of liability for total loss—No reinsurance of running down clause—Application of principle of cross liabilities.]—Defts. underwrote a policy of marine insurance on the W. against total loss, & also by a running down clause, against three-fourths of collision liability on the principle of cross liabilities. Defts. reinsured their liability for total loss only with pltf. During the currency of the policy the W. was sunk as the result of a collision with the M. & became a total loss. In proceedings in the Admiralty Ct. both vessels were held equally to blame, &, as the M.'s half damages exceeded the W.'s half damages, the W. had to pay the balance under the Admiralty rule of single liability. Defts. paid the owners of the W. for a total loss, & also a further sum under the running down clause, that sum being ascertained by bringing into account a payment treated as having been received in respect of the M.'s liability for the damage done by her to the W., & the payment of a larger sum in respect of the damage done by the W. to the M. Pltf. claimed that he was entitled to the benefit of the credit in respect of the M.'s liability :—Held : pltf., not being a reinsurer of the liability under the running down clause, was not entitled to the benefit of the credit mentioned.—YOUNG v. MERCHANTS' MARINE INSURANCE CO., LTD., [1932] 2 K. 2404a. Prosecution of claim—Condition limiting time for.]—Pltfs. were interested in a certificate of insurance which was issued under two policies of marine insurance subscribed by defts. in respect of 100 barrels of pure gum turpentine shipped from Florida to Rotterdam. The policies provided for payment for "leakages from any cause in excess of 1 per cent. on each invoice." It was the practice of the trade, at the port of shipment, to gauge the barrels of turpentine & to express the result in gallons, & at the port of discharge to weigh it & to express the result in kilograms with an allowance for reduction on account of the varying temperature conditions of 3·25 kilograms to the gallon. The policies also contained a stipulation providing that no suit or action for the recovery of any claim should be maintainable in any ct. unless such suit or action be commenced within one year from the happening of the loss out of which the claim arose, but that limitation clause did not occur in the certificate. When the vessel was discharged a shortage in respect of the gallons of turpentine shipped was ascertained to have taken place. Defts. having refused to pay upon the ground that there was no sufficient evidence of the loss & that the claim was not instituted within the year, the present claim was brought by the pltfs. on the certificate:—Held: the limitation clause was not one which bound the certificate holder. The rights of the original policy holder, which were conveyed to the certificate holder, comprised the rights given by the policy qualified by all the conditions & warranties which affected the nature & extent of the insurance granted, but did not impose an obligation affecting only a limitation of time within which the rights so given were to be enforced; (2) an actual physical loss had been proved based upon the calculations, & there was no ground for imputing that loss to any cause other than leakages.—PHŒNIX INSURANCE CO. 2463a. —— ——.]—A ship belonging to the Glen Line was insured, hull, machinery, etc., with the Liverpool & London War Risks Insurance Assocn., against the usual war risks. On the declaration of war on Aug. 4, 1914, the ship was seized by the German Government & was interned until after the Armistice. The Glen Line gave notice of abandonment, which was accepted by the Assocn. as for a constructive total loss on Aug. 4, 1914. After the peace the Glen Line presented a claim to the Mixed Arbitral Tribunal, under article 297 (e) of the Treaty of Versailles, in effect, for compensation for loss of prospective profits arising from the seizure of the ship by the Germans immediately on the outbreak of the war, & this claim was compromised for about £140,000. Thereafter the British Government, as reinsurers to the extent of 80 per cent. of the war risks undertaken by the Assocn., who made no claim to the compensation, claimed that the compensation was received by the Glen Line as trustees for the Assocn., & that the British Government were entitled to 80 per cent. of the trust moneys:—Held: the compensation recovered under the treaty was analogous to damages recovered for loss of freight in prospect secured by an existing charter & must therefore be treated as belonging to the owner & not to the abandonee.—GLEN LINE, LTD. v. A.-G. 2527a. Unstamped insurance.]—In 1920 the E. co. & the Y. co. entered into a participation agreement effective as from Jan. 1, 1920, which was a reinsurance treaty binding the E. co. to cede & the Y. co. to accept a participation of all risks mentioned of the share retained by the E. co. accepted after Jan. 1, 1920. In Sept. 1921, the E. co. arranged that the N. co. should take over the Y. co.'s position as from Jan. 1, 1920; & in Jan. 1922, an agreement, hereinafter called "the Outwards Treaty," on the same lines & with the same provisions as those of the agreement with the Y. co. was entered into between the E. co. & the N. co. In 1921 the N. co. & the E. co. entered into another participation agreement, hereinafter called "the Inwards Treaty," the N. co. ceding & the E. co. accepting a share of all marine risks. The Inwards Treaty had no provisions for the issuing of policies, or for particulars sufficient to make possible the issuing of policies, to satisfy the provisions of Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), & Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41). No stamped policies were in fact issued under any of the three agreements, & no premiums were ever actually paid to the N. co., which was credited with the proper proportion of the net premiums received by the E. co. On the compulsory winding-up of the N. co. the E. co. claimed to be entitled to prove for sums paid by it for premiums under the Outwards Treaty, after allowing for sums paid or credited to it by the N. co. under the Inwards Treaty. The Official Receiver rejected the claim on the ground that both treaties were invalid & inadmissible in evidence, because they were contracts of marine insurance which did not comply with the requirements of Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), & Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), & were unlawful; & upon a summons asking for an order that the proof should be allowed:—Held: (1) as the Outwards Treaty was invalid & void, the entries of premiums to the credit of the E. co. were not evidence of payment, & therefore no claim under Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 84, could be made; (2) even if premiums had been paid such a claim could not have been made, as Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), ss. 92, 93, 97, amounted to an implied prohibition of

The policy provided that it should be avoided by any "fraudulent or untrue" statement on the subject of the insurance, & that it should be subject to the rules of the society. These rules stated that the policy would be avoided if there were any fraudulent statement as to the health of the person whose life was insured. The claimant's father had heart disease, but the claimant, being unaware of this, stated in good faith on the proposal form that his father's health was sound. On the father's death resps. refused to pay the sum due on the policy. The claimant contended that, as the rules avoided the policy for fraud & did not avoid it for an innocent untruth, the latter had no effect:—Held: the claimant's misstatement was a warranty, that the word "untrue" in the policy included innocent misstatements, & the rules were not inconsistent with the other provisions of the contract, & therefore resps. were not liable on the policy.—HOLMES v. SCOTTISH LEGAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY (1932), 48 T. 2907a. ——.]—On July 10 L. sent to defts. a proposal for an insurance on his life, in which he stated that he was "now free from serious disease or ailment." The proposal contained this declaration: "It is hereby declared that the above particulars are true, & it is agreed that this proposal & declaration shall be the basis of the contract of assurance." On July 15 defts. replied stating "The proposal made by you . . . has this day been accepted & if the health of the life proposed remains meanwhile unaffected, the policy will be issued on payment of the first premium. . . . The risk of the co. will not commence until receipt of the first premium, & the directors meanwhile reserve the power to alter or withdraw this acceptance." On July 21 L. began to feel ill, & on the next day a friend filled in a cheque for the first premium, which L. signed in bed. The cheque was not sent off till the evening of July 24, by which time L. was seriously ill with pneumonia. On July 26 defts. received the cheque, & thereupon they sent to L. a certificate of that date stating that the proposal had been accepted, & that upon the payment of the first quarterly premium a policy would be issued in due course. On July 27 L. died. His administrators sued defts. for the sum insured:—Held: (1) the acceptance of the proposal by defts. was made in reliance upon the continued truth of the representations therein, & as the risk had been materially increased between proposal & acceptance, a condition which defts. had made a condition going to the root of the contract had not been fulfilled; (2) since contracts of insurance were contracts uberrimæ fidei, there was a duty of disclosure on the part of the assured to inform defts. of his change of health, which was a material change in the risk insured, & the position was here even stronger because defts. had inserted express terms in their documents to protect themselves.—LOOKER v. LAW UNION & ROCK INSURANCE CO., LTD., [1928] 1 K. compliance with Life Insurance Act. The policy in question was one which the insured had taken out in exchange for two policies then held by him. It was made payable to his exors., administrators & assigns. The declaration relied on was made in a testamentary document dated about a year previously, & it, the declaration, enumerated (inter alia) one of said two then existent policies. This will was found to be invalid because the witnesses had not signed in the presence of each other and probate was granted of an earlier will. The widow contended that the declaration applied to the new policy. When applying for the new policy the insured had signed documents relating to the then existing policies, in which he certified that they were "not now assigned." The application for the new policy was made subsequently to the letter of Jan. 14, in which the insured confirmed on behalf of himself & his wife the understanding that a life insurance policy was to be deposited as security for the performance of the lease. The policy was not, however, then deposited. The policy so deposited was the new policy. The widow's claim was not upheld.—PORTAGE AVENUE DEVELOPMENT CO., LTD. v. DIAMOND, [1932] 3 W. W. The policy issued on this application. R. at the time of applying was & had been for some time, to his knowledge, afflicted with a chronic valvular disease of the heart, from which he later died. His widow now sues to recover the amount of the policy:—Held: (1) as the very basis of the contract of insurance was the information conveyed in the application therefor, R.'s concealment of the truth regarding his condition constituted in law a fraudulent misrepresentation which voided the policy; (2) the fact that R.'s heart condition was revealed in an application for pension, or in the report of a vocational officer, did not constitute a communication as to his condition of health to the officers of the same Dept. of Govt. charged with the administration of the Act here in question, & could not here be introduced as constituting an answer to the questions above mentioned.—ROACH v. R., [1931] Ex. The co. advanced money to the assured on a mtge. of leasehold property & on assignment to them of the policy by way of security. It was provided by a clause in the mtge. that the co. should satisfy themselves primarily out of the policy money. The assured committed suicide, & the co. commenced an action against his extrix. for the purpose of enforcing their security :—Held : upon the true construction of clause 5, the expression "third parties" did not include the assurer, & the co. was entitled to proceed to enforce the security against the leasehold property, & the policy was void.—ROYAL LONDON MUTUAL INSURANCE SOCIETY v. BARRETT, [1928] Ch. 411; 97 L. 2993a. Extension of period of policy by insured—Effect of.]—By an insurance policy dated Aug. 13, 1925, an assurance co. agreed to pay the assured, his exors., administrators or assigns £1,000 in the event of his death on or before July 31, 1926. The assured assigned the benefit of the policy to deft. In July, 1926, the assured arranged for an extension of the period of insurance to Oct. 31, 1926, & this extension was given effect to by indorsing on the policy a declaration "that the sum assured shall be payable in the event of the death of the life assured on or before Oct. 31, 1926." No assignment was ever made of the benefit of this extension. The assured died on Oct. 1, 1926 :—Held : (1) the extension of the period of the policy by indorsement was not a new contract of insurance, but a variation of the original contract of which the benefit was vested in deft., & she was entitled to recover the policy money by virtue of the assignment to her of the policy; (2) the effect of the transaction was that the assured entered into the contract for the extension of the policy for the benefit of deft. & as trustee for her, & deft. was, on that ground, entitled to the policy money.—ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE v. HOPE, [1928] Ch. 179; 97 L. 3141a. —— ——.]—Coal merchants, owners of a motor lorry, applied to an insurance co. & signed a form of proposal for an insurance against damage to the lorry & against liability for injury to persons & damage to other vehicles caused by the use of the lorry. The proposal form contained questions to be answered by the proposers as to the purpose for which the lorry was to be used & the nature of the goods to be carried. The proposers answered that the purpose was the delivery of coal & that the substance to be carried was coal. The co. issued a policy which, after reciting that the assured had made the proposal & signed a declaration which it was agreed should be deemed to be of a promissory nature & effect & should be the basis of the contract for the insurance as if it had been incorporated in the policy, went on to witness that it was a condition precedent to any liability on the part of the co. that the statements made & the answers given in the proposal form should be true, correct & complete. The premium paid by the assured was less than that which would have been payable if they had stated that the lorry was to be used for the purpose of general haulage. On a day during the period covered by the policy the assured were using the lorry for carrying a load of timber together with 5 cwt. of coal. After they had delivered all the timber & 3 cwt. of coal, & while they were on their way to deliver the remaining 2 cwt. of coal to a customer, a collision occurred between the lorry & a motor car. sy. Defence to claim by insured—Breach of law.]—An insured under an accident insurance policy accidentally discharged a shot-gun into his foot with the result that the foot had to be amputated. To an action on the policy the insurers set up the defence that the accident occurred while the insured was breaking the law by hunting & shooting ducks out of season in violation of Migratory Birds Convention Act (Dom.) & Game Act, 1924 (Sask.), & by carrying a loaded shotgun in an automobile contrary to the latter Act:—Held: while the insured may have hunted ducks during the day of the accident, he was not in the act of doing so when he shot himself, the hunting being then over & abandoned; the evidence was insufficient to justify a finding that the gun was being carried loaded in the automobile.—WESTERN FINANCE CORPN., LTD. v. LONDON & LANCASHIRE GUARANTEE & ACCIDENT CO. sz. Death due to "disablement" of car—Death by drowning.]—A policy of accident insurance covered death "sustained by the wrecking or disablement of any privately owned automobile . . . in which the insured is riding or driving, or is accidentally thrown from within such wrecked or disabled automobile." A clause of the general conditions provided that the insurance did not cover "injuries fatal or unfatal of which there shall be no visible marks or contusion on the exterior of the body at the place of injury." A motor car which the insured was driving had been brought across a river on a ferry, & when the insured, who had taken his seat in it, started it in order to drive off the ferry it backed off the ferry into the water. The assured & the other occupants were able to climb on to the roof of the car, but the car, after drifting some distance, went to the bottom & the insured was drowned. There was no evidence of the cause of the backing of the car. The judge dismissed the action, holding that the insured's death was not due to the wrecking or disablement of the car but to drowning. On appeal:—Held: the appeal should be allowed.—NEWCOM v. HOME ASSURANCE CO. OF CANADA (Alta.), [1930] 1 D. L. R. 121; [1929] 3 W. W. R. 590.—CAN.

3202a. Condition against acting to detriment of insurer—Failure to raise defence of diplomatic privilege—By order of diplomatic superior.]—Deft., who was First Secretary of the Peruvian Legation, took out a policy of insurance against legal liability to members of the public in connexion with the driving of his motor-car, the policy providing that "the assured . . . shall not in any way act to the detriment or prejudice of the (insurance) co.'s interests," & that "the co. is entitled to take absolute control of all negotiations & proceedings." Pltf. brought an action for personal injuries against deft., & the latter served on the insurance co. a third-party notice claiming an indemnity. An appearance without protest was entered in the action on behalf of deft., &, as the Peruvian Minister forbade deft. to raise the plea of diplomatic immunity, no such plea was inserted in the defence. The jury found a verdict for pltf. for damages, & the insurance co. repudiated liability on the ground that deft. had broken the conditions of the policy by insisting that the plea of diplomatic immunity should not be raised :—Held : the privilege of diplomatic immunity was waived by the entry of appearance without protest, & as deft. was bound to obey the direction of his Minister there was no breach of the conditions of the policy, & deft. was entitled to the indemnity claimed.—DICKINSON v. not having given evidence pointing to any involuntary, unforeseen, or unexpected movement, the evidence did not warrant a conclusion that the injury was other than the natural result of his purely voluntary act.—LONG v. COLONIAL MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, LTD., COLONIAL MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, LTD. v. LONG, [1931] N. The action was based upon a provision in the policy insuring pltf. against legal liability for bodily injuries sustained by any one in respect of the operation of his car. The defence relied upon pltf.'s failure to give written notice to the co. in the manner required by the policy. Pltf. had notified deft. co.'s agent on the day following the accident by exhibiting to him the letter from the injured party's solr. threatening action unless the compensation claimed was paid. Evidence was given to show that on previous occasions verbal notice was given to the agent, & notices so given were recognised & acted upon by payment of claims :—Held : the agent was authorised to act for the co. notwithstanding the provision in the policy requiring the insured promptly to give written notice to the co.; verbal notice given was sufficient within the meaning of the contract & the defence of absence of written notice failed.—DUNPHY v. SCOTTISH METROPOLITAN ASS'CE CO., [1928] 1 D. sz. Failure to pay supplementary premium.]—Applt. co. insured D. under an indemnity policy against liabilities resulting from Workmen's Compensation Act for a period of one year from Jan. 26, 1924. The premium was based upon the whole remuneration of the insured's employees during the period of the policy as follows : a "minimum" premium & an "estimated premium" were stipulated to be paid, & were in fact paid, in advance by the employer, &, at the expiry of the policy, an adjustment was to be made so that a supplementary premium may then be due by the insured or a reimbursement may be made by the co., according to the amount of wages paid by the insured during the life of the policy; but, in any case, the "minimum" premium was to be retained by the co. On Aug. 2, 1924, an employee of D., L., was injured, but a petition to sue the employer under the Act was served only on Jan. 28, 1925, &, on the same day, D. made an assignment in bkpcy. L. having been granted permission to sue the trustee, one G., obtained judgment for $5,300 & costs against the present resp. who had succeeded G. as trustee. On Jan. 27, 1925, one day after the expiry of the policy & one day prior to the service of the petition on D., an adjustment had been made as provided for in the policy & a supplementary premium of $1,020.58 was thereby shown to be due by D. On Jan. 22, 1927, resp. sued applt. co. for the payment of $6,490, being L.'s claim of $5,300 & the costs, under the judgment secured against resp. which he had not yet paid. Applt. co. repudiated its liability on the ground that the supplementary premium of $1,020.58 had not been paid by the insured :—Held : applt. co. was liable for the amount claimed by the resp. Under the terms of the policy, the obligations of each party were not simultaneous & that of the insurer to indemnify was not made subject to the obligation of the insured to pay the supplementary premium. Applt.'s liability was complete & absolute on the date of the accident, i.e. Aug. 2, 1924; on that day, applt., having received all the premiums then due, became bound to pay to the employer the amount of the indemnity to be awarded to the injured employee under the Workmen's Compensation Act.—EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ASSURANCE CO. v. LEFAIVRE, [1930] S. S. O. 1927 (c. 222), s. 85, sued deft., which had insured S. against liability for injury to another, for the amount of her judgment:—Held: the right of action given by s. 85 is simply a right to sue on the policy in the place & stead of the insured; pltf. must establish liability on the policy against the insurer in the same manner & to the same extent as if the action had been brought by the insured; & the facts, required to be established as part of pltf.'s case, that the bodily injury to another, insured against, had been inflicted by the insured's automobile, & that the insured was legally liable in damages to pltf. for the injury, are not established as against the insurer by the production of the judgment obtained by pltf. against the insured. But in the present case deft., by reason of an admission at the trial, was precluded from contending that the liability of S. to pltf. had not been established by production of the judgment against S.—CONTINENTAL CASUALTY CO. v. YORKE, [1930] S. L., G.'s brother-in-law, took out with the G. co. a similar policy, providing that "insured will also be indemnified hereunder while personally driving a car not belonging to him provided that there is no other insurance in respect of such other car whereby insured may be indemnified," & that "if at the time of the occurrence of any accident, loss or damage there shall be any other indemnity or insurance subsisting whether effected by insured or by any other person the corpn. shall not be liable to pay or contribute more than a ratable proportion of any sums payable in respect of such accident loss or damage." L., a relative of J., while driving the car, injured a third party, who claimed damages. L. was himself insured with the C. insurance co. against claims for injuries caused by him while driving a car not belonging to him, provided that he was not entitled to an indemnity in respect thereof from another co. Resps. denied liability on the ground of the proviso in their policy exempting them where the claimant was entitled to indemnity under another policy: —Held: on the proper construction of the policies, the insurance clause in each policy expressed to be cancelled by the co-existence of a similar clause in the other policy should be excluded from the category of co-existing cover, & that therefore resps., not being protected by their proviso, were liable.—WEDDELL v. ROAD TRANSPORT & GENERAL INSURANCE CO., LTD., [1932] 2 K. 3217c. Action by repairer against insurers for repairs—Right of insurers to be subrogated to owner's rights against repairer.]—In an action by the repairer of a motor car against an insurance co. for repairs executed at their request, the co. contended that they were entitled to set-off, on the principle of subrogation, the claims of the assured, the owner of the car, against the repairer, who had been driving the car on the occasion of a collision. The insurance co. had commenced an action, in the name of the owner, against the repairer for the damage done to the car by his negligent driving, but, at the date of the commencement of the action by the repairer, certain claims of the assured under the policy in regard to third party risks, etc., were still unsettled:—Held: the fact that these claims were then unsettled prevented the insurance co. from being subrogated to the owner's rights against the repairer, & the co. were not entitled to rely on these as a set-off to the repairer's claim.—PAGE v. SCOTTISH INSURANCE CORPN., FORSTER v. PAGE (1929), 98 L. 3217d. Condition as to efficient condition of vehicle.]—The claimants were the holders of a policy by which resp. co. had undertaken liability for damage caused by or to a motor car. The policy contained a condition that "the insured shall take all reasonable steps to maintain such vehicle in efficient condition." & it provided that the observation of the conditions should be a condition precedent to the liability of the co. The claimants removed the foot-brake from the vehicle, leaving only a hand-brake, & in this state of affairs the vehicle caused damage, & was itself damaged, in an accident, but the exact cause of the accident could not be ascertained:—Held: the condition was a condition precedent, & as it had been broken the co. was not liable on the policy.—JONES & JAMES v. PROVINCIAL INSURANCE CO., LTD. 3217e. Policy covering any car used "instead of the insured car"—Insured car sold—Whether new car covered.]—Defts. contracted by a policy of insurance to indemnify pltf. against "all sums which the assured shall become legally liable to pay as compensation for . . . bodily injury . . . caused to any person or persons by a motor car described in the schedule hereto." The car was thereinafter referred to as the "insured car." The policy further provided that "this insurance shall cover the legal liability as aforesaid of the assured in respect of the use by the assured of any motor car (other than a hired car) provided that such car is at the time of the accident being used instead of the insured car." Pltf. exchanged the insured car for a new car of a similar type. While pltf. was using the new car an accident occurred, causing injury to a third person, & pltf. referred the claim to defts., who repudiated liability on the grounds that pltf. was not using the new car "instead of" the old one & that when the insured car was sold the insurance ceased. In an action for a declaration that defts. were liable to indemnify pltf. against the claim:—Held: the policy necessarily implied that the insured car should be the subject-matter of the insurance at the time of the accident, & therefore the action failed.—ROGERSON v. SCOTTISH AUTO-

3217f. Effect of non-disclosure—Previous theft of car.]—Pltf. insured a motor car against loss, the policy providing that the proposal should be incorporated in the contract. The proposal, which was signed by pltf., concluded with the declaration: "I hereby declare that the above motor car is my own sole property & that all the particulars stated above are true, & that no facts have been omitted or any information withheld with which the underwriters should be acquainted. I further agree that this declaration shall be the basis of the contract between us." Among the questions contained in the proposal form was the following: "How many accidents or losses have arisen during the past three years in connection with this or any other motor vehicle owned or driven by you or your driver?" Pltf. in his answers did not disclose the fact that within three years he had had another car which on three occasions was abstracted or stolen, but on each occasion was recovered a few hours later. The insured car was stolen & pltf. sued the underwriters:—Held: the undisclosed information was material & therefore the action failed.—Farra v. Hetherington (1931), 47 T. L. R. 465; 75 Sol. 3217g. —— Invalidity of condition subsequent avoiding liability—What amounts to.]—Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 38, provides that "Any condition in a policy . . . issued or given for the purposes of this Part of this Act providing that no liability shall arise under the policy . . . in the event of some specified thing being done or omitted to be done after the happening of the event giving rise to a claim under the policy . . . shall be of no effect. . . ."

A policy of insurance insuring resp. against third-party risks contained a condition that "the corpn. shall not be liable for any accident loss or damage caused or sustained while any motor cycle in respect of which indemnity is granted under this policy is carrying a passenger unless a sidecar is attached." Resp., who on a certain date drove a motor cycle on a road with another person sitting behind him as a passenger on the pillion without a side-car being attached to the motor cycle, was charged with the offence of using a motor vehicle on a road without there being in force in relation to the user of the vehicle such a policy of insurance in respect of third-party risks as complied with the requirements of Part II. of Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43). The justices dismissed the information on the ground that the condition in the policy was of no effect by reason of Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 38, & that therefore the policy of insurance was in force on that occasion. On appeal to the Div. Ct.:—Held: Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 38, applied only to a condition in a policy "providing that no liability shall arise under the policy . . . in the event of some specified thing being done or omitted to be done after the happening of the event giving rise to a claim under the policy," whereas in the present case the condition circumscribed the operation of the policy from the beginning. Therefore, there was no policy in force where a passenger was being carried otherwise than in a side-car.—Bright v. Ashfold, [1932] 2 K. B. 153; 101 L. J. K. B. 318; 147 L. T. 74; 96 J. 3217h. —— Issue of false certificate of insurance—Statement as to date of commencement—Premium unpaid.]—An insurance co. issued a public liability motor car policy of insurance covering third-party risks, valid for a year & any further period for which they might accept payment for renewal. The policy was subject to a condition that no liability should arise until payment of the premium. At the expiration of the year, on June 3, no premium was paid, but it was paid on June 11, when a receipt was given acknowledging a renewal of the policy as from June 3. On the former date the co. also issued a certificate of insurance containing the statement alleged to be false, that the date of commencement of the insurance was June 4:—Held: even assuming the statement to be false in fact, that alone was not sufficient to justify a conviction for issuing a certificate which was false to the knowledge of the co. within Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 112 (3), & the conviction must be quashed.—Ocean Accident & Guarantee Corpn., Ltd. v. Cole, [1932] 2 K. The insurance covered loss by the negligent or fraudulent conduct of clerks, servants, or "any other person or persons," & was expressed to cover "any other loss whatsoever" through the dishonesty of any such clerk, servant, or other person or persons. Resps. were induced by fraud to accept certain bills of exchange & thereby suffered loss, & in this action they sought to recover their loss from their underwriters:—Held: notwithstanding the reference in the policy to the fraudulent conduct of "other person or persons" & to "any other loss whatsoever," upon a true construction of the policy as a whole the insurance was only one covering the actual physical loss of documents & did not cover the case of the insured being fraudulently induced to accept bills of exchange.—LAZARD BROS. & CO., LTD. v. BROOKS (1932), 37 Com. The bills were dishonoured, & pltf. brought an action on the policies on the ground that he had suffered a loss through having dealt in the bills. 3279c. Business car driven by son & others—Failure to disclose convictions against son.]—Applt. took out with resps. a motor car policy of insurance in respect of a car of which he was the owner. Applt. employed more than one driver in the course of his business, & at the time when the insurance was effected the agent of resps. told him that if he paid an extra premium the policy would protect him whoever might be driving the car, & applt. paid the extra premium accordingly. During the currency of the policy the car, while being driven by a son of applt., came into collision with a cyclist. The cyclist brought an action against applt. for damages, & applt. referred the claim to resps., who repudiated liability on the ground that at the time when the policy was taken out applt. had failed to disclose a material fact. It appeared that before the insurance was effected applt.'s son had been convicted several times of motoring offences, chiefly in relation to a motor-cycle, & resps. contended that this was a material fact which ought to have been disclosed by applt. Before the policy was issued applt. had received a proposal form from resps. & had answered all the questions in that form fully & truthfully, & he did not know that any further information was required. At that time he had not his son in mind. Applt.'s claim against resps. was referred to arbn. as required by the policy, & the arbitrator awarded in favour of resps. on the ground that a material fact had not been disclosed. g viii. —— After returning from hire—Insured for "private personal use."]—The owner of a motor car insured it against loss or damage by fire. Condition 3 of the policy was that it should apply "only to a car for private personal use," & that no liability should be incurred if & when it was being used otherwise; & condition 4 expressly excluded liability for loss or damage arising while the car was "let out for hire." The car was normally used in a private hiring business conducted by the owner, & was only rarely employed by him for private personal purposes. After returning from a hire late one night it was put in its garage, & was shortly afterwards destroyed by fire. The owner made a claim under the policy, but the co. denied liability:—Held: the co. was not liable, in respect that the risk to which the car was exposed while in the garage was incidental to its ordinary employment, i.e. in the hiring business, &, accordingly, the loss was one which was excluded by the policy.—MURRAY v. SCOTTISH AUTOMOBILE & GENERAL INSURANCE CO., LTD., [1929] S. 3279d. Effect of removal of motive power.] The claimant made to resps. a written proposal that they should insure a motor lorry, & in reply to a question on the proposal form he stated that the vehicle would be garaged on his own premises. Resps. accepted the proposal & issued a policy which covered damage to the vehicle & to its necessary accessories by accidental fire. During the currency of the policy the claimant, finding it necessary to repair the lorry, removed the engine from the lorry in the garage to a workshop of his at some distance. The night after the repair of the engine was completed the engine was destroyed by fire. On a claim under the policy the resps. repudiated liability on the ground (inter alia) that a lorry was not a motor lorry when it had been deprived of its motive power:—Held: the engine & body together constituted the insured lorry, & the mere fact of the removal of the engine from the body for the time being did not deprive the claimant of his right to an indemnity under the policy.—SEATON v. LONDON GENERAL INSURANCE CO., LTD. During the currency of the policy deft. missed the necklace & informed the representative of the underwriters that she had lost it. She made a thorough search of her house for it, & afterwards at the suggestion of the underwriters a further search & inquiries were made, but without result. An agreement was then entered into between the underwriters & deft. that they should give her by way of replacement of the necklace other articles of jewellery up to its insured value. After she had received under the agreement articles of somewhat less than a third of that value the necklace was found at her house, where it fell out of an evening cloak in which it had become concealed. In an action by pltf. against deft. claiming a declaration that the necklace had not been lost, rescission of the replacement agreement, & the return of the articles which she had received under that agreement:—Held: the replacement agreement was in the circumstances a valid & binding agreement unaffected by mistake or misrepresentation on its true construction it did not contain an implied term that if the necklace should be found the agreement should be void; & under it deft. was entitled to retain the articles which she had received & to receive other articles up to the agreed value, the underwriters taking the necklace as salvage.

(2) Uncertainty as to recovery of the thing insured is, in my opinion, in non-marine matters the main consideration on the question of loss. In this connection it is, of course, true that a thing may be mislaid & yet not lost, but, in my opinion, if a thing has been mislaid & is missing or has disappeared, & a reasonable time has elapsed to allow of diligent search & of recovery, & such diligent search has been made & has been fruitless, then the thing may properly be said to be lost (ROCHE, J.).—HOLMES v. PAYNE, [1930] 2 K. mean that if the baggage were underestimated, that would be an answer to the policy. The condition merely meant that the insurance was to apply to the whole of the baggage in bulk & value.

(2) By condition 5 of the policy: "Jewelry, watches, field-glasses, cameras, & other fragile or specially valuable articles must be separately declared & valued":—Held: the condition enumerated things by description, classes, & not individual things. Where the question was whether a fur coat said to have been worth £240 & found to be worth £175 should have been separately declared & valued, the question of construction was not whether that fur coat was a specially valuable article but whether furs or fur coats, as a class, were specially valuable articles within the meaning of the condition. Applying the ejusdem generis rule, the question was whether furs or fur coats were specially valuable articles in the same sort of sense that jewelry, watches, field-glasses, & cameras were fragile or specially valuable articles; (3) also, furs or fur coats, being worn as a common-place article of dress by any woman of any sort of comfortable means, were not such specially valuable articles within the meaning of condition 5.—KING v. TRAVELLERS' INSURANCE ASSOCN., LTD. Before Oct. 1899, when war was declared between the Transvaal Republic & this country, pltfs. had effected with deft., a British subject, a policy of insurance of certain gold products of their mine, the perils insured against including "enemies," & "arrests, restraints, & detainments of kings, princes, & people." A few days after war was declared the agents of the Transvaal Government seized & carried away some of the gold products insured. Pltfs. had shut down their mine when war was declared, & there was nothing to show that they intended to continue their business or mining operations in the Transvaal afterwards. In an action on the policy to recover in respect of the gold products so seized:—Held: there was no ground of public policy which prevented the policy of insurance from continuing in force after war was declared, & therefore pltfs. were entitled to recover.—NIGEL GOLD MINING CO., LTD. v. HOADE, [1901] 2 K. 3289a. Machinery — Latent defect — Whether a casualty.]—Pltfs., who were marine engineers, took out a policy on "machinery & the like (sundry small contracts & repair jobs . . .) from & during construction." The insurance covered "all risks incidental to testing the machinery" & was "also specially to cover cost of repairs &/or loss of &/or damage to the interest . . . through any latent defect in the thing insured." Pltfs. contracted to fit a steamer with a new intermediate pressure cylinder, but the cylinder, when tried under steam, was found to be defective, &, a second one having also been found to be defective, pltfs. had to fit a third. In an action on the policy:—Held: as the existence of a latent defect was not a casualty & the cost of replacing a thing which had a latent defect was not recoverable as loss or damage due to latent defect, & as the words "cost of repairs" did not cover expenditure on the replacement of material which was inherently defective, & as the testing merely revealed, & did not cause, the latent defect, the action failed.—MACCOLL & POLLOCK, LTD. v. INDEMNITY MUTUAL MARINE ASSURANCE CO., LTD. se. Capital — Statutory limitation.]—In 1865, applt. co. was incorporated by an Act of the late province of Canada, with power to carry on the business of insurance generally, & its capital was stated to be two million dollars, with power to increase the same to four million dollars. By an Act of Parliament of 1870, the capital was reduced to one million dollars with power to increase the same to four million dollars in sums of not less than one million dollars. The business of the co. was to be carried on in two distinct branches, Life & Accident Insurance business, & to be known as the Life Branch, & other forms of insurance to be known as the General Branch business. The capital stock of one million dollars was to apply to the Life Branch only, with power to increase the same to two million dollars; authority was given to raise one million dollars for the purposes of the General Branch business with power to increase the same to two million dollars. In 1871, the powers of the co. were by statute restricted to Life & Accident Insurance, & it was further provided that "All provisions of the Act of Incorpn. of the said co., & the Act amending the same, which are inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, are hereby repealed." In its report to the Department of Insurance the co. stated its capital to be four million dollars, & the Superintendent of Insurance ruled that it could only be two million dollars & amended the report accordingly. Hence the present appeal:—Held: the capital of the co. for Life & Accident Insurance business was fixed at two million dollars by the Act of 1870 & was not altered by subsequent legislation. 202a. Applicant's willingness to contribute to compensation fund.]—A question arose which of two adjacent licensed houses should be granted a renewal of its licence, & which should be suppressed. The owners of each house submitted to the licensing justices plans of proposed alterations, & the owners of one of the houses offered to pay £1,250 to the compensation fund if the alterations were sanctioned. The same licensing justices sat as compensation authority to consider the question of redundancy, & decided to renew the licence of the house whose owners had offered the contribution, it appearing from the evidence that that house, when altered, could be made the better of the two. They then, as licensing justices, approved the alterations to that house:—Held: (1) in considering the question of the contribution offered to the compensation fund the licensing justices had taken extraneous matter into account, & as this must necessarily have affected their minds as compensation authority, their decision must be quashed; (2) it was contrary to the spirit of the Licensing Acts, though it might be within the letter of them, that the powers of the compensation authority should be delegated to the licensing committee so that the two bodies were identical, it being clearly intended that they should be separate & independent bodies.—R. v. SHEFFIELD JJ., Ex p. RAWSON (T.) & CO., LTD. 368a. —— —— Objection to condition by licensing justices—Duty to consider objection—In presence of parties.]—An application was made to licensing justices for a new license to premises at S. The application was opposed, but the license was granted unconditionally. The confirming authority, after hearing the case for & against the application, confirmed the license subject to two conditions. Notice of this decision was given to the licensing justices, who told the confirming authority that they did not agree to the second condition. At a further meeting of the confirming authority it was decided to confirm the grant subject only to the first condition. No notice was given to the parties, & they had no opportunity of appearing at this meeting & arguing as to the variation of the conditions. A rule nisi for certiorari to quash the order of the confirming authority was obtained on the ground that the authority acted without jurisdiction in confirming the license:—Held: (1) as soon as the confirming authority had ascertained the views of the licensing justices it was their duty to sit judicially in the presence of the parties interested to determine whether or not the alterations made by the licensing justices should be accepted. As this had not been done, the order made by the confirming authority was a nullity & the matter must go back to them to hear & determine it in the presence of the parties interested; (2) the meeting of the confirming authority ought to be constituted of the same members as were present at the original meeting.—R. v. HUNTINGDON CONFIRMING AUTHORITY, [1929] 1 K. The solr. duly appeared & opposed, & the compensation authority refused the renewal, subject to payment of compensation. 588a. —— Application by nominee of Secretary of State in State management district—Whether Secretary of State successor of Liquor Control Board within Licensing Act, 1921 (c. 42), Sched. III., clause 9.]—F., a nominee of the Secretary of State, applied to justices for an occasional licence under Licensing (Consolidation) Act, 1910 (c. 24), s. 64, to sell alcoholic liquor on the racecourse at Carlisle races. The justices declined jurisdiction on the ground that the structures owned by the racecourse proprietors, & marquees, provided by the State management, on the racecourse where the liquor would be sold, would be in the occupation of the State within the meaning of clause 9 of Sched. III. to Licensing Act, 1921 (c. 42), & that therefore no licence was required:—Held: that these structures & marquees were not so occupied & the justices must hear & determine the application.—R. v. CUMBERLAND JUSTICES, Ex p. FEARNLEY (1930), 144 L. He, subsequently, moved for a writ of certiorari to quash the grant of the licence:—Held: he was a person aggrieved, & competent to make the appln., but by his conduct he had disqualified himself from relief by way of certiorari & certiorari was withheld.—R. v. THE LICENSING AUTHORITY AT DALBY, Ex p. KELLY, [1928] S. 626a. Unlicensed room in licensed premises—Buying from licensed premises for customer.]—Applt. J. was acting as "city waiter" at a meeting of a Buffalo Lodge of which he was a member. The meeting was held in an unlicensed room within the curtilage of licensed premises of which applt. N. was the licensee. It was J.'s duty to obtain the refreshments ordered by the members. He was observed on several occasions to go to the bar of the licensed premises & purchase, & pay for a number of glasses of beer, which he carried on a tray to the room where the meeting was held, & distributed to the members who had ordered them, receiving the price (but no more) which he had paid at the bar. The justices convicted J. of selling intoxicating liquor without a licence & N. of being privy to the sale :—Held : on these facts there was no evidence of a sale by J. The beer was not at any time his property.—JONES v. MIGHALL, NELSON v. MIGHALL (1932), 96 J. P. 395; 48 T. L. R. 636; 30 L. G. R. 412, D. C.

Resp. only visited the premises once or twice a week, & there was no evidence that any offence had been committed in his presence or with his knowledge :—Held : having delegated all his authority to the manager & become a mere absentee, he was responsible for the acts of the manager, & was liable to conviction.—ALLEN v. WHITEHEAD, [1930] 1 K. The accused was convicted of the offence charged :—Held : the complaint was not lacking in specification, in respect that, in a prosecution under Licensing Acts, it was unnecessary to state the name of the person through whom the offence had been committed, unless special circumstances required such a statement in fairness to accused dismissed.—HALL v. BEGG, [1928] S. On the trial the evidence showed that the liquor in question was found in an automobile owned & driven by deft., & some evidence was offered by the Crown indicating unlawful importation. The trial judge instructed the jury that the burden of proof of lawful importation & payment of duty was upon deft., & the Crown was only bound to establish harbouring without lawful excuse :—Held : under the instructions given to them the jury would be likely to place the whole burden upon accused, whereas, under the wording of the statute, the necessity of proof by the Crown of importation was implied, &, consequently, there should be a new trial.—R. v. SHELLMAN, [1928] 1 D. The justices dismissed the summons on the ground that the time at which resp. was found drunk was after the hours when the sale of intoxicating liquor was permitted:—Held: since at the time in question the premises were open & there was nothing to prevent the sale of food & non-intoxicating liquor at that time, the justices ought to have convicted resp.—EVANS v. FLETCHER (1926), 135 L. 198a. Must enforce private right.]—What weighs with me in the matter is that the right in question which pltf. seeks to have set up by a declaratory order is not a private right at all. Pltf. has no personal right to have sewers kept in proper condition. It is a matter, as LORD HALSBURY says, for the whole district ; it is a matter committed to the special jurisdiction of a department which is a Government department, who have to act, not with regard to the interests of any particular individual, but with regard to the interests of the district generally. I am not aware that any ct. has ever in such a case made a declaration at the suit of a member of the public, & still less in a case where, as I have said, I am not satisfied that any real principle of justice requires the ct. to determine the matter (MAUGHAM, J.).—CLARK v. EPSOM RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1929] 1 Ch. 287 ; 98 L. (a) that there being a remedy provided by sects. 6 & 27 of the Act by which pltf. council could sue for penalties in a summary manner, there was no jurisdiction in the High Ct. to grant the declaration; & (b) that as the council had not claimed an injunction & could not have claimed an injunction, which is a remedy for the protection of personal and proprietary rights, & as there was no actual dispute between the parties, there was no jurisdiction in the High Ct. to grant the declaration :—Held : (1) this case was distinguishable from Barraclough v. Brown, No. 222. In that case it was decided that where a statute gave a right to recover expenses in a ct. of summary jurisdiction from a person who was not otherwise liable, pltf. had no right to sue for these expenses in the High Ct. In the present case by sect. 27 (4) of the Act of 1907 pltf. council had a right to pull down or remove these structures if they were " temporary buildings " within the sect. without reference to any ct., & there was jurisdiction in the High Ct. to grant the council the declaration for which they asked :—Held : (2) since Guaranty Trust Company of New York v. Hannay & Co., No. 219, & Russian Commercial & Industrial Bank v. British Bank for Foreign Trade, Ltd., No. 199, R. 498a. ——]—(1) When any tribunal is bound by the judgment of another ct., either superior or co-ordinate, it is bound by the judgment itself; & if from the opinions delivered it is clear what the ratio decidendi was which led to the judgment, then that ratio decidendi is also binding. But if it is not clear, then it is not part of the tribunal's duty to spell out with great difficulty a ratio decidendi in order to be bound by it.

(2) If a decision of the House of Lords rests upon the special & peculiar circumstances of the case, the case does not bind the House, or any ct., by a general principle; but if the decision rests upon a general doctrine, it binds all cts. & the House, & that doctrine is part of the law of the land until the legislature be moved to interfere.—GREAT WESTERN RY. 506a. ——.]—It is the duty of a judge to ascertain the construction of the instrument before him, & not to refer to the construction put by another judge upon an instrument, perhaps similar, but not the same. The only result of referring to authorities for that purpose is confusion & error, in this way, that if you look at a similar instrument, & say that a certain construction was put upon it, & that it differs only to such a slight degree from the document before you, that you do not think the difference sufficient to alter the construction, you miss the real point of the case, which is to ascertain the meaning of the instrument before you. It may be quite true that in your opinion the difference between the two instruments is not sufficient to alter the construction, but at the same time the judge who decided on that other instrument may have thought that that very difference would be sufficient to alter the interpretation of that instrument. You have, in fact, no guide whatever; & the result, especially in some cases of wills, has been remarkable. There is, first, document A., & a judge formed an opinion as to its construction. Then came document B., & some other judge has said that it differs very little from the document A., not sufficiently to alter the construction, therefore, he construes it in the same way. Then comes document C., & the judge there compares it with document B., & says it differs very little, &, therefore, he shall construe it in the same way; & so the construction has gone on until we find a document which is in totally different terms from the first, & which no human being would think of construing in the same manner, but which has by this process come to be construed in this manner (JESSEL, M.R.).—ASPDEN v. SEDDON (1874), 10 Ch. PART XVI. SECT. 2.

8a. From date of order.]—Pltfs. brought an action to recover a liquidated sum. Deft. defended the action, & delivered a counterclaim. A consent was entered into between the parties, by which it was provided that all proceedings in the action should be stayed upon certain terms. By these terms deft. agreed to pay to pltfs. a certain sum by instalments, & if the instalments should be in arrear for more than seven days, the balance then due should immediately become payable by deft. Deft. was to withdraw his counterclaim, & the consent was to be made a rule of ct. An order was subsequently made staying the action on these terms. Default having been made by deft. in the payment of the instalments, a writ of fi. fa. was issued, directing the sheriff to levy execution on the goods of deft. for a certain sum, which included the balance then due & interest thereon at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum from the date of the said order of the ct. Deft. applied for an injunction to restrain the sheriff from acting under the fi. fa :—Held : since the order of the ct. was one for the payment of a sum of money, it followed that interest was leviable at 4 per cent. per annum, & that it ran from the date of the order. Accordingly the amount for which the fi. fa. was issued was correct, & the sheriff could not be restrained by injunction from levying execution.—FARBENHLOOM v. MOREL (GLASGOW), LTD., & SHERLOCK, [1930] 1. 304a. —— Whether ground for new trial.]—In an action for libel pltf. set out in his statement of claim the alleged libel, & in a separate paragraph alleged an innuendo which practically repeated, but somewhat extended, the statements in the alleged libel. Defts. did not plead justification or fair comment, but paid 20*s.* into ct. in respect of the alleged libel as sufficient damages; they made no payment into ct. in respect of the innuendo; & they gave notice under R. S. C., Ord. 36, r. 37, of their intention to give in evidence certain matters in mitigation of damages. At the trial pltf. gave evidence that save for one lapse he was a man of unblemished reputation. Thereupon he was cross-examined as to specific incidents not mentioned in the libel or in the particulars served under R. S. C., Ord. 36, r. 37, it being suggested that he was a man of bad reputation. This line of cross-examination was objected to, but was allowed. Before the conclusion of the cross-examination the jury intervened with an intimation that they desired to find for the defts., which they then did without any summing up. On appeal :—Held : (1) the cross-examination was admissible as cross-examination to credit, but if the incidents were denied by pltf. no further evidence could be called to rebut pltf.'s denials, & the jury should have been told that while they were not bound to accept pltf.'s denials, those denials, though unaccepted, afforded no evidence that the incidents had taken place; (2) the cross-examination was not admissible to mitigate damages, & the jury ought to have been directed to this effect; (3) the jury should have been told that their intervention was premature, & they must hear the pltf.'s case to the end & be directed as to the issues they had to try; & (4) the trial having been in those respects unsatisfactory, there must be a new trial.

(5) Communications from the jury to the judge should be shown to the parties' counsel (per SCRUTTON, L. J.).

q ii. —— Issue left to jury immaterial.]—In an action against a police officer for assault & battery, malicious prosecution & malicious arrest, the trial judge dispensed with the jury in the trial of the claim for assault & battery. O. 1914, c. 56, s. 62, to decide all questions both of law & fact as to the existence of reasonable & probable cause ; & he said that the jury would be called upon to try only the issues as to malice & damages. A jury was then called & sworn & the trial proceeded. The evidence being closed, & the jury having retired, the trial judge gave judgment, dismissing the claim for assault, & finding that there was reasonable & probable cause for the prosecution. He also held, on the facts, as a matter of law, that there was no foundation for the claim for malicious arrest. 79a. Authorised improvements — Improvements executed before Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18).]—(1) A tenant for life of certain settled estates had expended on the settled property large sums of money for improvements, repairs & other works. Among the items of expenditure so incurred were certain electric light installations to the mansion house & the erection of batteries. These particular works had been carried out before the coming into force of above Act, & were therefore not "authorised improvements" under Settled Land Acts, 1882 to 1890, for which the ct. could have granted repayment to the tenant for life out of capital, although under the new Act of 1925 they would be "authorised improvements." On an application by the tenant for life to be recouped out of capital these sums so expended by him : —Held : notwithstanding the fact that these works were executed prior to above Act, there was, under the new Act, jurisdiction in the ct., if it thought fit, to order repayment of these sums to the tenant for life out of capital moneys ; & consequently as these particular items were "authorised improvements" under above Act, they could be repayable out of capital, notwithstanding the fact that they were incurred on works executed before Jan. 1. 1926. Having regard, however, to the fact that certain of the works had been carried out several years previously, there would have to be a rebate to allow for a diminished value.

(2) The tenant for life having further claimed that he should be repaid a proportion of the proceeds of sale of a part of the settled land, for tenant right valuation, on the ground that by his careful management before the sale he had enhanced its value :—Held : such a claim was really one to be repaid out of capital moneys, for an improvement not within Settled Land Acts, & the ct. had no jurisdiction to allow it.—Re SHERBORNE'S (LORD) SETTLED ESTATE, [1929] 1 Ch. 345 ; 98 L. 79b. —— —— Effect of sale of land.]—A tenant for life of settled property comprising a mansion house & land carried out in 1920 improvements not all of which were authorised by Settled Land Acts, 1882 to 1890. He did not submit, as required by the Act of 1882, a scheme for approval by the Settled Land Act trustees or by the ct. ; & he paid for the improvements himself. In 1923 he sold most of the land, & in 1929 he sold the remainder of the land & the mansion house. On a summons by him asking (inter alia) that, pursuant to Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 87, the trustees might be directed or authorised to raise out of the capital moneys comprised in the settlement & to pay to him the costs of improvements authorised by the Settled Land Acts & executed at the cost of the tenant for life, notwithstanding that a scheme was not, before the execution of the improvements, submitted for approval, as required by the Settled Land Act, 1882, to the trustees of the settlement or the ct. :—Held : (1) the ct. could authorise recoupment of the expenditure by the tenant for life on the settled land incurred before 1926, in so far as it was expenditure on "improvements" within Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18) ; (2) having regard to Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), ss. 84, 87, the sale of the property did not terminate the ct.'s jurisdiction to order repayment ; (3) as the appct. must at the time have expected himself to pay the sums spent on improvements which after 1925 came within Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), Sched. III., Part 2, the jurisdiction ought not to be exercised.—Re BOROUGH COURT ESTATE, [1932] 2 Ch. 39 ; 101 L. J. Ch. 316 ; 147 L. T. 476 ; 75 Sol. Jo. 830.

The cost of the installation was paid by the tenant for life out of his own money. The tenant for life now asked the ct. to authorise the trustees of the settlement to apply out of capital moneys the cost of the installation, the amount of such cost to be repaid to them out of the income of the settled land in fifteen years from the date of the order in half-yearly instalments :—Held : the improvement being one that would have had to be made sooner or later, the order asked for should be made, repayment to be made by twenty half-yearly instalments, whereof the first must be regarded as having fallen due on June 30, 1926.—Re JACQUES SETTLED ESTATES, [1930] 2 Ch. 418 ; 99 L. To extend the estoppel, which exists where the relationship of landlord & tenant is admitted or established, & which prevents the tenant questioning the landlord's title, so as to make it apply to a case in which the real question is as to the existence of that relationship, seems to be wrong in principle & is quite unwarranted by the authorities.—CANADA MORNING NEWS CO. v. THOMPSON & BINNINGTON, LOW YEE QUAN & WAI HON, [1930] S. 154 i. Whether tenant estopped—While possession retained—After expiration of tenancy.]—In an action in ejectment by a landlord who put the tenant into possession, the tenant is estopped from denying the landlord's title at the point of time of the demise, & further cannot put forward in defence any adverse title to a portion of the demised premises acquired by him during the tenancy. The estoppel operates in the case of a tenant who remains in possession even after the termination of the tenancy by notice to quit.—MUJIBAR RAHMAN v. ISUB SURATI (1928), I. L. sd. Lease by life tenant to reversioner—Until death of lessor.]—A lease by a life tenant for a term certain to the reversioner, containing a covenant by the lessee to pay rent to the lessor, "her heirs & assigns," does not estop the lessee from showing that he has become owner on the lessor's death.—THATCHER v. BOWMAN (1889), 18 O. its terms deft.'s solrs. wrote on Dec. 29, 1930, to pltf.'s solrs.: "We have now received our client's instructions on the draft lease, & he is prepared to accept your client's alterations. We are, therefore, having the lease engrossed, & will forward you a counterpart for execution by your client in due course." This was done, but deft. then refused to execute the lease, & on Jan. 24, 1931, granted a lease of the premises to some one else. On Feb. 3, 1931, pltf. commenced proceedings for specific performance, or, alternatively, damages:—Held: there was no binding contract to grant a lease, as the expression "subject to the terms of a lease" in the letter of Dec. 9, 1930, meant "subject to the terms to be contained in a lease executed by the lessor." It followed that even if deft.'s solrs. were the agents of deft. to communicate by their letter of Dec. 29, 1930, the fact that deft. had himself agreed to the terms of the lease, so that this letter was a sufficient memorandum of the agreement signed by the deft.'s duly authorised agents within Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 40, there was no binding contract, because the result of the letter of Dec. 9, 1930, was that there could be no concluded agreement until the lease had been executed.—RAINGOLD v. BROMLEY, [1931] 2 Ch. 307; 100 L. 396a. —— Letter purporting to enclose engrossment—& engrossment.]—A prospective lessee having orally agreed to take a lease from a prospective lessor, a draft lease embodying the terms was approved by their respective solrs. By arrangement the engrossments of the lease & counterpart were then prepared by the lessee's solrs., who subsequently wrote to the lessor's solr. purporting to enclose the engrossment of the lease for his signature, & saying they had written to the lessee & expected to exchange parts shortly. By mistake the engrossment of the counterpart was enclosed to the lessor's solr., & the engrossment of the lease to the lessee, who subsequently delivered it to the lessor's solr.'s messenger in exchange for the engrossment of the counterpart. Shortly after this the lessee, relying (inter alia) on Stat. Frauds, repudiated the oral contract:—Held: the lessee's solrs.' letter purporting to enclose the engrossment of the lease coupled with that engrossment, subsequently handed over by the lessee in person, constituted a sufficient memorandum of the oral contract.—HORNER v. WALKER, [1923] 2 Ch. 218; 92 L. It was intended in due course to execute a lease in writing for five years, renewable every five years, & in anticipation thereof resp. erected substantial structures on the leased land. No lease was, in fact, ever executed. In 1922 applt. served notice to quit upon resp., asserting that resp. was a monthly tenant; & in 1923 a suit for possession of the land was instituted by applt. It was established that in 1918 resp. had notice that applt. refused to perform the terms of the oral agreement of 1913:—Held: the acts of resp. were all referable to the oral contract of 1913 which was enforceable against applt. for a certain time, but resp. had allowed his right to enforce that contract to become statute-barred.—ARIFF v. RAI JADUNATH MAJUMDAR BAHADUR (1931), 47 T. The agreement said nothing as to the repair of the outside & as to insurance, but gave pltfs. an option of purchase during the term. Deft. insured the factory against fire, &, on the occurrence of a fire which almost completely destroyed it, he received compensation from the insurance co. Pltfs. then gave notice of the exercise of their option of purchase & paid a deposit, but deft. declined to reinstate the walls & roof, & alleged that in exercising the option pltfs. had to take the property as it was. In an action for a declaration that pltfs. were not bound to proceed with the purchase, deft. counterclaimed for specific performance :—Held : since at the date of the exercise of the option pltfs., to the knowledge of deft., thought that he was going to re-erect the factory, the parties were never ad idem, & pltfs. were entitled to a return of their deposit, & the counterclaim for specific performance failed.—LONDON HOLEPROOF HOSIERY CO., LTD. v. PADMORE (1928), 44 T. 1526a. Underlessee of sub-term in mortgaged premises—Covenant for further assurance in mortgage—Underlessee entitled to conveyance of legal estate—Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), Sched. I., Part II., paras. 3, 6 (d).]—A. in 1926 had become entitled to a sub-term in certain mortgaged leasehold premises acquired by purchase by a predecessor in title from a mtgee. The original mtge. was made in 1848, & contained a covenant by the then mtgor. with the then mtgee. his exors. administrators & assigns (inter alia) for further assurance of the nominal reversion in the three outstanding days in the head lease, thereby mortgaged, if required. In the head lease were certain covenants by the lessee for repair of the premises. The freehold of the demised property ultimately became absolutely vested in pltf. for an estate in fee simple. A. had gone into possession of the mtged. premises, but relinquished such possession before the trial of the action. Pltf. alleged that there had been a breach of the covenant to repair contained in the head lease & claimed (inter alia) damages against A. It appeared that the nominal reversion in the head lease had never been got in by any one, & A. denied that, as there was no privity of estate between him & pltf., he could be held liable under the repairing covenant contained in the head lease. It was alleged, however, by pltf., that having regard to the fact that A., by reason of the covenant for further assurance contained in the mtge., was a person "entitled to require a legal estate to be conveyed to or otherwise vested in him" under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), Sched. I., Part II., para. 3, such legal estate, namely, the nominal reversion, vested in him by Sched. II., Part II., para. 6 (d), & rendered him liable on the repairing covenants contained in the head lease:—Held: on the facts of the case, A. was liable by reason of the operation of Sched. I., Part II., paras. 3 & 6 (d), as a person entitled to require a legal estate to be conveyed to or otherwise vested in him; &, further, that he had not availed himself of the provisions of the Sched. to the Law of Property (Amendment) Act, 1926 (c. 11), enabling persons to disclaim the vesting of any legal estate affected by onerous covenants.—PEACHY v. YOUNG, [1929] 1 Ch. 449; 98 L. ak. Premises no longer available for purposes contemplated.]—A fishery co. were the tenants of salmon fishings under a lease for nineteen fishing seasons. During the currency of the lease, the President of the Air Council, acting under statutory powers, made bye-laws converting the greater part of the area occupied by the fishings into a danger zone for the purposes of aerial gunnery & bombing practice. The bye-laws provided that practice would take place within the zone four days a week throughout the year, & that, during practice, no person might enter the zone, or bring thereon any vehicle, animal, vessel, aircraft or thing, & penalties were imposed for contraventions of the bye-laws. The effect of a due observance of these bye-laws would be to render the fishings incapable of possession for the purposes of the lease, & although bombing & firing practice had taken place only on a portion of the days reserved, the fishery co. had not attempted, since the bye-laws were promulgated, to exercise their right of fishing. In an action by the fishery co. against their landlord for declarator that they were entitled to abandon the lease:—Held: as the effect of the bye-laws was to cause total eviction from the fishings, the landlord could no longer maintain the pursuers in possession of the subjects of the lease, as he was bound to do, &, accordingly, pursuers were entitled to abandon the lease.—TAY SALMON CO. v. SPEEDIE, [1929] S. 1664a. Acquiescence.]—Whether any & what restrictions exist on the power of a licensor to determine a revocable licence to occupy land depends upon the circumstances of each case. In 1926 the Crown proceeded against applts. alleging that poles, carrying telegraph wires, which they had erected on the roadway of a Canadian Govt. railway, were a trespass thereon, & claiming damages ; alternatively the Crown claimed a declaration of applts.' rights, if any. As to the main section of the telegraph line, the poles, as they stood in 1926, had been erected upon the roadway between 1905 & 1910 without leave or licence. As to two branch lines, the poles had been erected in 1893 & 1911 respectively, in each case while an agreement was in negotiation though no agreement was eventually concluded. The whole telegraph line, which was about 500 miles in length, was used by the public as well as by applts. :—Held : (1) on the facts, at the date of the proceedings all the poles were on the roadway with the licence of the Crown. Although applts. had originally been trespassers in respect of the main line poles, many years' acquiescence & a claim to the payment of rent, had long since prevented them from being so regarded ; in the case of the branch lines, it was to be inferred that the poles had been erected by licence ; (2) the licence was revocable in the absence of any facts from which a contract that it should be irrevocable could be implied ; (3) having regard to the circumstances, the licence could be revoked only by a notice determining it upon a specified future date such as would give applts. sufficient time, not only to remove the poles & wires, but also to arrange for erecting them elsewhere. —CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. Court under a lease which contained a reservation "excepting & reserving unto the lessors & the person or persons for the time being occupying the other parts of the building the passage of gas water & other pipes & electric wires through the demised premises & the free running of water & soil in & through the pipes connected with the demised premises." In May, 1924, pltf. took a lease of the second floor of I. Court from the firm, subject to a similar reservation. In exercise of the right reserved to the lessors & persons occupying other parts of the premises pltf. conducted pipes from her premises through deft. co.'s part of the premises. 1975a. Duty of tenant from year to year—To use premises in tenantlike manner.] — A tenant from year to year is under an implied obligation to use the demised premises in a tenantlike manner & to yield them up so used at the end of the tenancy. By an agreement of Oct. 10, 1914, J. let it to P. for three years from Oct. 12, 1914, at a rent of £2 a week, payable weekly. On the land, & extending along the rear of Nos. 16, 18, & 20, was a shed, in which P. carried on the business of a general dealer until 1923, when he assigned the business to his wife & thereafter managed it for her. In 1919 pltf. co. took an assignment of the land behind Nos. 16, 18, 20, & 22 for the rest of the term comprised in the lease of 1838, subject to the underlease of 1906. On July 8, 1920, the Midland Bank acquired the leasehold reversion immediately expectant on P.'s tenancy under the agreement of 1914: & on Oct. 6 in the same year pltf. co. acquired No. 18 & the land behind for fifty years from Sept. 29,

1920, subject to the lease of 1838. After the end of his tenancy in 1917, P. had continued in possession of the land & the shed, paying rent first to J., &, after Mar. 1923, at J.'s direction, to the Midland Bank, which, in 1925, acquired the freehold reversion of the land at the rear of Nos. 20 & 22. No rent was paid by P. to pltf. co. There were negotiations at a later date for apportioning the rent between the bank & pltf. co. which did not result in a concluded agreement. In Sept. 1928, defts. entered into an agreement to purchase from the Bank the land at the rear of Nos. 20 & 22, & at the same time their solrs. wrote to pltf. co.'s solrs., asking if the co. would grant them a lease of the land in the rear of No. 18. After some correspondence pltf. co. refused to grant a lease of the land, & in Apr. 1929, commenced this action, claiming a declaration that it was entitled to the land, & alleging that deft. P. was at most a weekly tenant:—Held: by MAUGHAM, J. (a) mere continuance in possession by one originally in possession as tenant under a legal title, with the consent of the person who has become the landlord, may lead to the inference of a consensus that the one so continuing shall be a yearly tenant, but on the facts a consensus that P. should become a yearly tenant of pltf. co. could not be inferred; (b) the inference of a tenancy from year to year, which is drawn from the payment of rent by a tenant after the expiration of his tenancy, ought to be drawn only when such payments are by reference to a yearly rent, & P.'s payments of £2 a week rent to J. or the Midland Bank, after the expiration of the term granted by the agreement of 1914, were not so paid; by the Court of Appeal, on the facts there was no consensus between pltf. co. & defts. giving rise to the relation of landlord & tenant, without deciding the question whether, if there had been such a consensus, it would in law have created a yearly or a weekly tenancy.—LADIES' HOSIERY & UNDERWEAR, LTD. v. PARKER, [1930] 1 Ch. 304; 99 L. 2101 i. —— As to option to purchase.]—A Crown lease provided that the lessee upon paying a certain stated sum would be entitled to a conveyance of the lands in fee simple. The lessees failed to renew their lease but held over. In 1927, the present occupants sent the Crown a cheque for the amount mentioned in the lease & requested a deed to the lands in question. The Crown returned the cheque & refused to convey the land for the sum offered, hence the present petition of right:—Held: the option to purchase contained in the lease in question herein, being unlimited as to time, was therefore inoperative & void because of the rule against perpetuities, & was not exercisable. The tenant who holds over with the consent of the landlord becomes a tenant from year to year & holds upon the terms created by the lease, so far as they are applicable to a tenancy from year to year. An option contained in a lease to purchase the reversion & so destroy the tenancy is not one of the terms of the tenancy; it is a provision outside of the terms which regulate the relations between the landlord as landlord, & the tenant as tenant, & is not one of the terms of the original tenancy which will be incorporated into the terms of the yearly tenancy created by the tenant holding over after the expiration of the lease.—TORMEY v. R., [1930] Ex. In the county ct. the judge took the objection that the notice having been served before the Act was in force, he had no jurisdiction. That decision having been affirmed by the Div. Ct., pltf. appealed :—Held : the landlord having in his possession on the day when the Act came into force a notice containing all the requisites for a proper claim, & that day being a day more than a year before the termination of the tenancy, the county ct. judge had jurisdiction to hear the claim.—DOBBIN v. OGDEN (1929), 98 L. 2306c. Who may apply—Receiver for debenture holders—Notwithstanding liquidation.]—A co. was the lessee of certain premises under a lease expiring on June 24, 1930. In 1925 the co. issued a debenture by which it charged all its undertaking & all its property, present & future, including its uncalled capital in favour of the debenture holders. On Apr. 22, 1929, the co. gave notice to the landlords under Landlord & Tenant Act, 1927 (c. 36), s. 5, requiring them to grant to it a new lease of the premises. In July, 1929, the debenture holders in exercise of the power on that behalf in the debenture appointed a receiver of the property & assets therein comprised. The landlords having failed to comply with the co.'s request for the grant of a new lease the receiver on Sept. 23, 1929, commenced an action in the county ct. in the name of the co. to obtain the grant of a new lease. On Oct. 15 a compulsory order was made to wind up the company & a liquidator was appointed. At the hearing in the county ct. preliminary objections were taken on behalf of the landlords : (a) that an order having been made to wind up the co. the receiver

Grant of new lease—What included—Incorporeal right—Fishing.]—Where an incorporeal right, such as a right of fishing, is demised along with corporeal hereditaments by the same lease, & the lessee uses both for the purpose of his trade or business, the incorporeal right is part of the "premises" within Landlord & Tenant Act, 1927 (c. 36), s. 5. Therefore, on the expiration of such a lease, the lessee, if he can show that the compensation for goodwill to which under the Act he would be entitled would not compensate him for the loss of goodwill if he removed to & carried on his trade or business in other premises, may require a new lease of the premises which shall include the incorporeal right demised by the original lease. —WHITLEY v. STUMBLES, [1930] A. The janitor was authorised by the president of deft. co., which was the landlord, to so use the gasoline, & the work required the removal & replacing of fixed boards & rails which were part of the permanent structure of the building. The lease exempted the landlord from all liability for any accident, loss or damage arising in or about the building or premises from heating, steam, water, gas or electric lighting, or from any plant or appliances incident thereto, & whether arising from fire, frost, rain, weather or defects in construction or materials "or from any cause whatsoever"; it also exempted the landlord from liability for any acts of any agent, servant or workmen in any way occupied or engaged in or about the building or premises or in any capacity whatsoever; it also provided that "the lessors are not responsible for the cleaning or caretaking" of the demised premises:—Held: even if the janitor's acts constituted negligence, the work was not "cleaning" within the meaning of the lease; the ejusdem generis rule was not applicable to the acts referred to in the exemption clauses; the expression "agent, servant or workmen," included all persons acting for deft. for whose acts it would be held responsible & thus included deft.'s president; & the exemption clauses covered negligent acts.—FINNEMORE v. T. 2498a. —— Question of fact.]—By an agreement, in the form of a letter dated Dec. 12, 1928, & signed by deft., deft. agreed to purchase from pltf. for £800 a leasehold house for the residue of the term of 94 years comprised in a lease of 1849. The letter stated that deft. understood the ground floor & basement to be let to a tenant holding over as a yearly tenant at a rent of £60 a year, payable quarterly, & it fixed Mar. 25, 1929, as the date for completion. Pltf. signed an acknowledgment agreeing the terms as in the letter. In the lease of 1849 were lessee's covenants to do outside painting, deliver up, repair, insure, produce assignments, not to allow building without consent, & not to carry on offensive trades or do "any . . . thing which may be to the annoyance, damage, or inconvenience of the occupiers of the neighbouring premises"; & there was a proviso for re-entry on non-performance of any of the covenants. The abstract was sent to deft.'s solrs. on Jan. 15, 1929, deft. meanwhile, to pltf.'s knowledge, negotiating for the purchase of the freehold. On Mar. 4 deft.'s solrs. wrote to pltf.'s solrs. that deft. would not buy the house unless H., the tenant, who was in arrear with the rent & was not, as pltf. had represented her to be, a desirable tenant, was bought out. They added that there was no binding contract, which they later explained to mean that the lease of 1849 had building owned by deft. The female pltf., wife of her co-pltf., was shaking a rug on a porch at the rear of the suite when the railing thereon gave way & she was injured. In an action for damages pltfs. contended that the railing, in the condition it was, was a trap :—Held : after reviewing the facts as to the situation of the porch & its relation to the two suites, the railing was part of the demised premises, &, therefore, pltfs. had no right of recovery against deft.—AGNEW v. HAMILTON, [1932] 3 W. W. R. 57.—CAN.

sz. Damage by fire—Inflammable refuse by elevator shaft.]—Pltf.'s husband leased from deft. a suite in deft.'s apartment building. On each floor, beside the freight elevator, & separated from the hall by swinging wooden doors, was a platform on which were garbage receptacles. A fire occurred in the building, & in efforts to escape pltf. was injured & her husband was killed. For this & for property loss pltf. sued for damages. The jury found that deft. was negligent in that it caused or allowed inflammable refuse to be deposited beside the elevator shaft & failed to safeguard such refuse against the danger of fire; that such condition amounted to a trap or concealed danger created by deft. & caused the injuries, death & loss; & judgment was entered for damages. The judgment was set aside by the Ct. of Appeal. Pltf. appealed :—Held : pltf. could not recover.—HEARE v. CITY SECURITIES CO., LTD., [1932] S. C. R. 260.—CAN.

This rule was applied in the present case to the giving way of the railing on a rear balcony which served as a rear exit & entrance to the pltf.'s suite & those of the other tenants on the same floor. Semble : the balcony railing in the condition it was at the time of the accident constituted a trap.—MCPHERSON v. CREDIT FONCIER FRANCO CANADIEN (Alta.), [1930] 1 D. 1 ii. —— Proposed transfer of license to other premises—Leaving demised premises unlicensed.]—Pltfs. were the owners of certain premises to which a seven-day license was attached, & deft. was their lessee & the holder of the license. The lessee further covenanted to deliver up the premises on the expiration of the lease in all respects in such condition as should be consistent with the due performance & observance of the said covenants. Deft., who was also the owner of other premises, situate in the same licensing area, & to which a six-day license was attached, served notice to have the seven-day license transferred to the premises to which the six-day license was attached :—Held : as the effect of the transfer would be that pltfs.' premises, to which the seven-day license was attached, would, for the purposes of Licensing (Ir.) Act, 1902, be statutorily deemed never to have been licensed, so that when the lease expired pltfs. would get back premises to which no license was attached, they were entitled, in view of the covenants in the lease, to an injunction to restrain deft. from exercising the right of transfer conferred on him by Intoxicating Liquor Act, 1927, s. 11 (1).—HEATHCOTE v. MAGUIRE, [1929] I. not been produced to deft. Deft. did not complete by the date fixed. In an action by pltf. for specific performance :—Held : (1) the question whether covenants in a lease are " usual covenants " is in each case a question of fact for the ct. to decide upon the evidence.

I think it right to express my opinion, after having heard & considered all the numerous authorities which have been cited to me, that the question whether particular covenants are usual covenants is a question of fact, & that the decision of the ct. on that point must depend upon the admissible evidence given before the ct. in relation to that question. I think that it is proper to take the evidence of conveyancers & others familiar with the practice in reference to leases & that it is also permissible to examine books of precedents. It is permissible to obtain evidence with regard to the practice in the particular district in which the premises in question are situated (MAUGHAM, J.).

(2) A covenant to do nothing to the " inconvenience of occupiers of neighbouring premises " is usual only in leases of properties on large estates, & in a lease of one house is unusual & onerous ; (3) the proviso for re-entry on breach of any of the covenants in the lease must be held on the authorities & on the evidence to be an unusual & onerous provision ; (4) in the circumstances deft.'s right to object to the lease as containing unusual & onerous covenants had not been waived.—FLEXMAN v. CORBETT, [1930] 1 Ch. 672 ; 99 L. the term hereby granted being determined by re-entry . . . all the premium unpaid at the date of such re-entry shall become immediately due & payable." A right of re-entry was given if the rent reserved or any instalment of the premium should be in arrear for a certain time. During the currency of the lease, & before the balance of the premium had been paid, the premises, which had been mortgaged by the lessor, were sold to the lessee by the mtgees. in exercise of their powers of sale. Thereupon the lessor sued the lessee to recover the unpaid balance of the premium. The lessee contended that on the determination of the lease all his obligations thereunder, including the obligation as to the premium, were extinguished:—Held: the premium was not a "demand . . . in, to, or on the property" within Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 63 (1), or a "covenant or provision . . . having reference to the subject-matter" of the lease within sect. 141 (1) of that Act, but was a sum which the lessee had agreed to pay in order to obtain the lease, &, therefore, that his obligation to pay the full amount of the premium was not extinguished by the determination of the lease.—HILL v. BOOTH, [1930] 1 K. 2913a. —— Part of premises sublet.]—In 1906 there was granted to K., as lessee a dwelling-house & premises for a term of ninety-nine years at a ground rent of £8 a year, & the lessee covenanted with the lessors that he would not, without the lessors' previous licence in writing, use the demised house, or any part thereof, "for any purpose whatsoever other than for the purpose of a private dwelling-house, wherein no business of any kind is carried on." There was a further covenant by the lessee that he would not do or suffer to be done in or on the demised premises anything which might, in the judgment of the lessors, be or grow to the injury or annoyance of the lessors or their tenants, or the occupiers of adjoining premises. In 1914 the lessee, without the knowledge of or licence from the lessors, sublet three rooms of the first floor of the demised house to a subtenant, whose tenancy expired in June, 1926. On July 19 the lessee, without any licence from the lessors, sublet the same three rooms to P. as a subtenant at a rent of £1 a week. In an action by the lessors against K. & P., & the mtgees. of K., claiming possession of the house as against all defts., on the ground that the lease had been forfeited by reason of the breaches of the two covenants:—Held: (1) there had been a forfeiture of the lease by breaches of both the restrictive covenants, & the words in the first covenant, "wherein no business of any kind is carried on," must be construed as adding to the stringency of the covenant that the house should be used as a private dwelling-house; (2) Rent Restriction Acts afforded no defence to the action, as K. was in actual possession of the whole of the dwelling-house in the interval between the two tenancies, & 1923 Act, s. 2 (1), came into operation, & the premises had become decontrolled.—BARTON v. KEEBLE, [1928] Ch. 517; 97 L. 2932a. Conversion of dwelling-house into flats—Services supplied to tenants.]—By a lease dated Apr. 11, 1865, the Governors of a College granted to D. the lease of a private dwelling-house on their estate, the amenities of which they were very desirous to safeguard, for a long term of years. There was a covenant in the lease by D. that he would not (inter alia) suffer the demised premises to be used for carrying on thereon any trade or business or for any purpose that might be

sp. "Alteration" — Construction of covenant.]—Business premises in a shopping district were leased "together with the fixtures & fittings" specified in Sched. I. to the lease. A tailoring business had been carried on in the premises prior to the making of the lease, & the fixtures & fittings in question were suitable for & had been used in carrying on such a business. These fixtures were set out in the Sched. There was a covenant not to carry on noxious, noisy or offensive trades, & also a covenant to keep demised premises & all permitted additions & landlord's fixtures & fittings in good tenantable repair & condition, & not to make an alteration. There was a covenant to yield up premises, fixtures, fittings & additions in good & tenantable repair:—Held: "alterations" must be construed in accordance with the context, & an assignee of the lease who proposed to remove the fittings & fixtures & store them in a safe place on the premises & to erect other fixtures & fittings necessary for the purpose of using the premises as a retail creamery shop, had not committed a breach of the covenant as to alterations.—WHITE v. RYAN, [1932] I. deemed by the Governors or their successors an annoyance or inconvenience to the neighbourhood. There was the usual power of re-entry for breach of any covenant. In 1894 the lease was assigned to deft. R., subject, however, to an underlease to G. This underlease, which contained the same terms as the headlease, was in 1928 assigned to deft. P. P., the underlessee, having by certain internal structural alterations of the demised premises converted them into three separate flats, proceeded, without the knowledge or consent of pltfs., who were the successors in title to the Governors who had originally granted the lease & also the present reversioners in fee simple expectant on the determination thereof, to let them out to tenants at various rentals. P. also contracted to supply the tenants with certain services, hot water, heat, lighting, etc. It was proved in evidence that R. knew of the acts of P., but took no steps to prevent the letting or stop the acts in any way. Pltfs. thereupon sought to recover possession on the ground of alleged breaches of the covenants in the headlease as to user:—Held: (1) what P. had done constituted the carrying on of a business, inasmuch as she retained control of an important portion of the demised premises & was under liability to supply certain services, such as hot water, etc. She had therefore committed a breach of both the covenants as to user contained in the underlease & as to acts deemed by pltfs. to cause an annoyance or inconvenience to the neighbourhood; (2) R., by knowingly permitting the letting out of the demised premises in flats & taking no steps to prevent what she had been informed would constitute a breach of the covenants in the headlease, had committed a breach of the covenant " not to suffer the same to be used for the carrying on of any . . . business or for any purpose that might be deemed by the Governors or their successors to be an annoyance or inconvenience to the neighbourhood." Pltfs. were therefore entitled to an order for possession of the demised premises.

(3) The words " permit " & " suffer " have been the subject of judicial decision, & in one case I think it was said they were synonymous; but whether this is in accordance with other decisions is not material to this case. Speaking for myself, with all possible respect to the learned judge who said so, I think there may well be as a matter of construction a substantial difference between the word " permit " & the word " suffer," but, as I say, it is not material to consider it here. The word in the case before me is " suffer," and at any rate that must cover allowing something to be done which the covenantor has the complete power to prevent (LUXMOORE, J.).—BARTON v. REED, [1932] 1 Ch. 362, 375; 101 L. 2995b. —— —— Alteration amounting to improvement.]—By a lease dated Apr. 2, 1930, certain premises were demised to deft. for a term of years. The lease contained covenants by the lessee (inter alia) (a) not to make any alteration or addition to the premises, except such as might from time to time have been authorised by the landlord in writing; (b) not to cut, maim or injure any of the walls or timbers thereof; & (c) not to assign or under-let the premises or any part thereof without the written consent of the landlord. The lessee having contracted to sub-let the premises to A., & for this purpose desiring to carry out certain structural alterations, which included the alteration of the position of a staircase, in pursuance of the covenant in the lease, asked the landlord for his permission. The landlord refused his sanction to the suggested alterations except on certain conditions, which were unacceptable to the lessee. The lessee thereupon threatened to carry out the alterations, & the landlord commenced an action for an injunction to restrain him from so doing. Questions arose

There was no question but that the other tenants were seriously disturbed by the child's crying, but there was evidence that the tenant was doing all he could to quiet it:—Held: it was impossible to hold, on the evidence, that the landlord could have had any honest belief that the tenant was committing a breach of said covenant.—JOHANNSON v. BERMAN, [1930] 2 W. 3120a. ——.]—At common law in the absence of express contract a landlord of an unfurnished house is not liable to his tenant, nor is a vendor of real estate liable to his purchaser, for defects in the house or land rendering it dangerous or unfit for occupation, even if the defects are due to his construction or are within his knowledge.

A firm of builders, having built several houses on an estate of which they were the owners, sold to one C. a house which was nearly completed. They agreed to complete the house by the end of Oct. 1929, & to make it fit for habitation, & like in decoration & design to the other houses on the estate. The agreement contained a clause enabling C. to go into possession before completion as tenant at will. The house, like the others on the estate, was fitted with a particular make of boiler, which was placed in the kitchen & was heated by a Bunsen gas burner. Above the kitchen was a bathroom. From a cupboard in the bathroom a linen chute ran down to a cupboard in the kitchen connected with the boiler by a pipe. There was no flue to carry gas or fumes from the burner to the outward air. C. with his wife & child went into occupation on Sept. 28. The C. Gas Co.'s inspector examined the gas fittings & set the regulator fitted to the burner so that 45 cubic feet of gas & no more passed into the burner per hour. On Oct. 26, C. & his wife were found dead in the bathroom, poisoned by carbon monoxide gas. A few days afterwards the regulator was found so set that much more than 45 cubic feet could pass into the burner in an hour. The boiler with its burner & the linen chute were parts of the realty. The boiler with the burner properly regulated was not dangerous. It was the business of the Gas Co. & not that of the builders to regulate the flow of gas to the burner. In an action under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), by the administrators of C. & his wife against the builders:—Held: there was no evidence sf. General rules.] — Whether an article has become in law affixed to land or not is to be determined in the same way as between vendor & purchaser, mtgor. & mtgee. or landlord & tenant, but a tenant has the right as against his landlord to detach & remove trade or ornamental fixtures installed by him, during or at the expiration of his term. If an article is embedded in the soil or is attached to any building or permanent erection thereon by a permanent fastening, it is primâ facie a fixture. Unless so attached, an article is not regarded as "embedded" in the soil merely because it is placed on a brick, concrete or wood foundation, or even in holes constructed in the foundation to receive it, or because it sinks accidentally into the foundation, or because earth or other matter accidentally accumulates round it so as to give it the appearance of being embedded. A belt carried from shafting to a machine for the purpose of working it is not in itself sufficient to make the machine a fixture. The connection of a hydraulic press with underground water-pipes, or the insertion of the nozzle of a bellows in a hole which it tightly fits in some part of a forge affixed to the premises, is sufficient to make the press, or the bellows, primâ facie a fixture. If an article is proved, primâ facie, to be a fixture, the onus of showing that it was intended to continue a chattel lies on those who contend that it is a chattel. The relevant evidence to prove the intention is the circumstances of the case, & mainly the degree of annexation & the object of annexation. Declarations of intention by the party who affixed the article are not relevant. An article which is no further attached to the premises than by its own weight is primâ facie not a fixture, but it will be held to be a fixture (a) if it is part of a machine or other article which is a fixture; (b) if it can be inferred from the circumstances that it was intended to become a part of the freehold. If an article which is fixed is taken out of its place by a mtgor., & an equally good or better article is substituted for it, the mtgee. is not entitled to claim both articles as fixtures; he must elect which he will have.—Re MAY BROS., LTD. consent of the lessor installed in some of the rooms certain valuable antique panelling, ornamental chimney-pieces & so-called "period" fireplaces. No portion of the structure of these rooms was altered in order to fix the panelling, but it was placed in position by inserting into the walls wooden plugs to which it was attached by screws. Some slight structural alteration was effected in fixing the new chimney-pieces & fireplaces. The lessee having died during the currency of the term, his exors. claimed the right to remove the panelling, chimney-pieces & fireplaces, alleging that these installations were tenant's fixtures, & as such removable by them. The lessor, on the other hand, contended that the panelling & chimney-pieces had been fixed & installed in such a way as to become part of the structure of the demised premises; that their removal would cause damage to the structure; that the installations by the lessee constituted landlord's fixtures, & that his exors. were not entitled to remove them. In an action by the lessor to restrain the exors. from removing the fixtures:—Held: (1) in determining whether a particular chattel was a tenant's or a landlord's fixture the ct. had to consider what were the object & purpose of the annexation, & what would happen if the annexed chattel were removed. So long as the chattel could be removed without doing irreparable damage to the demised premises, neither the method of attachment nor the degree of annexation, nor the quantum of damage that would be done either to the chattel itself or to the demised premises by the removal, had any bearing on the right of the tenant to remove it, except in so far as it threw a light upon the question of the intention with which the tenant affixed the chattel to the demised premises; (2) the ct. could not infer an intention on the part of the tenant that the fixtures in question should become part of the demised premises, but the proper inference to be drawn was that the tenant intended himself to enjoy them & not to benefit the demised premises. Therefore the fixtures were tenant's fixtures, & the exors. were entitled to remove them.—SPYER v. PHILLIPSON, [1931] 2 Ch. 183; 100 L. J. Ch. 245; 144 L. T. 626; 74 Sol. Jo. 787, C. A.

sl. Error in area leased—Claim for rectification.]—The Crown leased from suppliant a certain space on two floors of a building owned by it, by a written lease duly executed by the Minister as provided for by sect. 18 of Public Works Act, & under authority of an Order in Council. The measurements stated in this lease were made by officers of the Department of Public Works & the contract & plans accompanying the same were prepared by them. It was claimed by suppliant, concurrently with the execution of the lease, that the superficial area mentioned in the lease was in error & should be greater & that the total rental based thereon should be accordingly increased. It was agreed between the parties that the area leased was improperly measured, & thereupon a second or amending Order in Council was passed recognising that an error had been made in stating the area in square feet leased & authorising the amending of the first Order in Council accordingly. No new contract, however, was executed in conformity with this amending Order in Council. The Crown took possession under the lease, & later, before its termination, rescinded the several Orders in Council, vacated the premises & returned the keys, & repudiated its obligation to be bound under the lease. Suppliant then notified the Crown that it would hold it responsible for the rent for the balance of the term, but that it would endeavour to rent the space vacated on the Crown's account, & would give the Crown credit for any sums so received :—Held : the acts of the suppliant did not constitute eviction of the Crown from the leased premises, & the Crown was liable for the rent for the entire term of the lease.—JOURNAL PUBLISHING CO., LTD. v. R., [1930] Ex C. 4094 i. General rule—Letting into full possession necessary.]—Where there is no dispute as to the identity of a lease but the tenant denies that he has got possession of them, it is for the landlord to prove that he has discharged his obligation to put the tenant in possession before he can enforce the tenant's obligation to pay rent. The landlord must show not only that the tenant is in possession but that the possession is attributable to the lease, or might be so. That onus cannot be satisfied where, before rent has been paid, the sisters of the tenant, as heirs of their father, have obtained a decree against the landlord declaring their right to possession of their appropriate share in the property according to Mahomedan law.

Cases are distinguishable where the tenant has already paid rent under the lease, or where the tenant alleges, & the landlord denies, that certain subjects, of which possession has not been given, were within the subjects let; in cases of that nature the onus is primarily on the tenant.—JOGESH CHANDRA ROY v. EMDAD MEAH (1931), 59 L. 4457a. Right to deduct from rent—Under landlord's covenant to refund excess over specified sum.]—The lease of a flat beginning at midsummer at a rent of £400 a year, payable in advance at the rate of £100 on each quarter day, contained a covenant by the lessors that, in case the total sum paid by the tenant in any one year of the term in respect of rates & taxes should exceed £125, the lessors would, on production of the relative receipts, refund to the tenant the difference between the total sum paid by him & £125. If this difference were not refunded by the lessors within fourteen days of demand the tenant was to be at liberty to deduct such difference from the next instalment of rent. The lease contained a covenant by the tenant that he would duly & punctually pay & discharge all rates, taxes, duties, charges, assessments, & outgoings payable in respect of the demised premises. The tenant in a year of the tenancy between midsummer & midsummer paid three half-years' rates, amounting in all to over £125, & having demanded the refund of the excess from the landlords, & having failed to get payment of the same within fourteen days of the demand, deducted it from his next instalment of rent :—Held : under the landlords' covenant to refund, the tenant was entitled to make the deduction.—SOWERBY v. LINDSAY (1928), 139 L. ar. Agreement altering incidence of tax—What amounts to.]—A landlord & a tenant entered into a preliminary agreement for a lease of certain premises for £90 per week, the tenant to pay all taxes, including land taxes. Prior to the execution of the lease the lessor discovered that the provision that the tenant was to pay land tax was contrary to the terms of Federal & State Land Tax Acts. The landlord then required that the lease should provide for a rent of £100 per week, & promised that he would make a voluntary annual allowance to the lessee of an amount equal to the difference between the amount of the Federal & State land tax paid by the lessor in respect of the premises & £520, the latter sum being the annual amount of £10 per week. sz. Covenant to pay " any future land tax—Bridge rate.]—By a lease dated Nov. 30, 1909, appts. demised certain business premises in Sydney to resps., who thereby covenanted to pay all rates, taxes & outgoings, parliamentary, municipal, local, or otherwise imposed or to be imposed upon the premises or payable by the owner or occupier in respect thereof, landlord's property tax or land tax only excepted. Appts., as lessors, signed a memorandum dated Mar. 31, 1910, under seal, which recited that it should be read with the lease, & thereby agreed to pay " the land tax at present assessed & any future land tax or municipal tax upon the unimproved capital value." Sydney Harbour Bridge Act of 1922, enacted by the Parliament of New South Wales, provided for the erection of a high level bridge across Sydney Harbour, two-thirds of the expense to be borne by the Exchequer of the State, & one-third to be paid out of the proceeds of " a rate leviable yearly of one half-penny in the pound upon the unimproved value of " (inter alia) " all lands within the city of Sydney & rateable under Sydney Corporation Act, 1902." By sect. 10 the Sydney Council were required to collect the rate & pay the proceeds to a special account at the Treasury :—Held : resps. in refusing to pay the bridge tax had not committed a breach of covenant as the bridge tax was a land tax being a tax on land directly imposed by the Legislature of the State, & the fact that the area of the tax was limited to the city of Sydney & certain specified shires was immaterial ; therefore the bridge tax was within the meaning of the memorandum & payable by appts. as lessors.—MORRIS LEVENTHAL v. DAVID JONES, LTD., [1930] A. 4760a. To keep in good & proper order & condition—Ornamental waters — Removal of mud.]—Among the covenants in a lease was one by which deft. covenanted at all times during the term to maintain, keep, & leave "all pleasure grounds," lawns, walks, borders, & shrubberies in good & proper order & condition. Included in the pleasure grounds were ornamental waters consisting of two ponds & three lakes, which afforded boating & trout fishing. Pltf. complained of various breaches of the above covenant, particularly in respect of the accumulation of mud in the lodge lake & in a portion of the upper boat lake, thereby causing deterioration in the trout fishing, & required the lakes to be cleared of mud & weeds. Deft. had regularly cut the weeds in the lakes & kept in order the sluices & weirs, but repudiated liability to clean out any of the mud:—Held: in order to comply with the covenant which was absolutely unqualified in terms, deft. was liable to remove so much of the mud in the lodge lake, & also in a specified portion of the upper boat lake, as would leave a sheet of water of not less than 2 feet 6 inches in depth throughout.—HORLICK v. SCULLY, [1927] 2 Ch. 150; 96 L. 4841b. —— —— What is "reversion"—Landlord & Tenant Act, 1927 (c. 36), s. 18 (1).]—Pltfs. & deft. were partners. One of the partnership assets was the lease of the premises on which the business was carried on, expiring on Mar. 25, 1930. On Oct. 7, 1929, the landlord granted to the three partners a reversionary lease for fourteen years from Mar. 25, 1930, at an increased rent. On Oct. 29, 1929, by an agreement made between the parties for dissolution of the partnership, it was provided that the partnership assets should be sold to the highest bidder of the three partners & proceeds divided, deft.'s share being one-half; also, that the date for completion should be Nov. 18, 1929, & that deft. should out of his share make certain payments, & should pay the rent under the lease, all rates, taxes & outgoings in respect of the premises, & "all trade debts & other liabilities whatsoever in respect of the said premises & business" down to the date fixed for completion, making these payments out of his share of the proceeds of sale. The agreement came before the ct. for construction, & it was declared that the phrase. "other liabilities whatsoever in respect of the said premises," included the liability in respect of damages which the landlord could, on Nov. 18, 1929, have recovered for breach of the repairing covenants in the lease. On an application for a decision whether at that date the damages recoverable by him in respect of non-repair were to be estimated on the basis of the depreciation in market value of the reversion expectant on the determination of the lease, or of that expectant on the determination of the reversionary lease:—Held: the "reversion" was the immediate reversion expectant on the lease, & the fact that a reversionary lease had been granted, to take effect at a date after the date for the assessment of damages, was immaterial.—TERRONI & NECCHI v. CORSINI, [1931] 1 Ch. 515; 100 L. The fire was caused by sparks from the chimney reaching the old shingles on the roof. Pltf., who had repeatedly warned deft. of the danger, sued in tort for the value of his chattels:—Held: deft. was properly held liable. The rule requiring a tenant to minimise his loss by himself repairing at the expense of his landlord does not apply where the landlord acknowledges his undertaking & promises to fulfil it. By his agreement deft. assumed the duty of repairing within a reasonable time; & his neglect to do so after repeated warnings was negligence entitling pltf. to sue in tort.—Amell v. Maloney, [1929] 4 D. 5069a. In named office "or in some other responsible insurance office to be approved by the lessor"—Duty of lessor.]—A covenant by a lessee to insure the demised premises in the joint names of the lessee & the lessor in a named insurance office, "or in some other responsible insurance office to be approved by the lessor," does not confer upon the lessee an alternative to be exercised at his volition; & under this covenant the lessee cannot properly tender an office which is not approved by the lessor.—TREDEGAR v. HARWOOD, [1929] A. C. 72; 97 L. J. Ch. 392; 139 L. T. 642; 44 T. L. R. 790, H. L.

5070a. Not to do anything to impose heavier insurance burden on premises—Obligation of lessor as to adjacent premises.]—Lessees of factory premises for a term of twenty-one years covenanted to pay as additional rent such sums as the lessors might expend in effecting or maintaining the insurance of the demised premises against fire, & not to do or suffer anything on the demised premises which would render payable an increased or extra premium for the insurance of the demised premises or other premises adjacent thereto. The lessors covenanted to keep the demised premises insured against fire & that the lessees should have quiet enjoyment of them. Subsequently, the lessors let premises adjacent to the demised premises to another lessee, whose trade as a woodworker rendered it impossible for the insurance of the demised premises to be effected except at considerably increased premiums: —Held: (1) the lessors, by dealing with the adjoining premises in a way which was not unreasonable or unbusinesslike, which did not affect the originally demised premises physically & which had rendered it, not less easy or legal, but substantially more expensive to conduct on them the business for which they had been demised, had not so interfered with the purpose for which those premises had been demised as to have derogated from their own grant of them; (2) the covenant by the lessees not to do or suffer anything on the originally demised premises which would render payable an increased or extra premium for the insurance of those, or adjacent, premises did not impliedly put the lessors under a similar obligation with regard to their user of adjacent premises.—O'CEDAR, LTD. v. SLOUGH TRADING CO., [1927] 2 K. 6636a. Substitution of licence or tenancy at will under purchase agreement—Rescission of agreement.]—By an agreement in writing dated Aug. 28, 1926, deft., the weekly tenant of a house to which Rent Restriction Acts applied, agreed to buy it from pltf., the landlord, for £900. The agreement provided that deft. acknowledged owing pltf. £63 10*s.* arrears of rent, & that pltf. would accept £50 in settlement ; that, until certain mtges. had been transferred from pltf. to deft., pltf. should remain in absolute ownership of the premises ; & that, until completion of the conveyance, deft., who was to remain in possession, should pay to pltf. interest on the £950 at the rate of 6 per cent. with interest on interest dating from Sept. 1, 1926. Deft. also agreed to pay certain deposits, pltf., on failure of such payments, to be entitled to rescind the agreement & enter into possession of the house. Deft. agreed to maintain the house in a good state of repair & to pay rates, taxes, & insurance. On Feb. 27, 1927, pltf. rescinded the agreement under the powers reserved in it, but deft. refused to give him possession of the house :—Held : (1) the effect of the agreement, as indicating the intention of the parties, was to determine the weekly tenancy, & to substitute for it either a licence or a tenancy at will, which, in its turn, was revoked or determined by the rescission of the purchase agreement, & deft.

had no contractual right to resist the claim for possession; (2) deft. was not protected by Rent Restriction Acts, because after Aug. 28, 1926, deft. remained in possession of the house by virtue of the contract of purchase, & not as a statutory tenant, & under that contract she was either a licensee or a tenant at will, & after its rescission, if she had been a licensee, she was not a tenant who had held over under the Acts, & if she had been a tenant at will, her tenancy had been at no rent, &, by Increase of Rent & Mtge. Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920 (c. 17), s. 12 (7), it must be ignored, with the result that the house was to be treated as untenanted & pltf. had an unrestricted right to recover possession of it; (3) the rescission of the purchase agreement did not deprive pltf. of his right to the arrears of rent which had accrued due to him before the agreement was made, but it did destroy deft.'s right to enforce the agreement with pltf. to accept a less sum than that which was in fact owing.—TURNER v. WATTS (1927), 97 L. 6674a. ——.]—In 1910, deft., a county police constable, became quarterly tenant of a house. In 1912 the county police authority, which had till then made a grant in aid of the rent of houses occupied by police constables, decided that for the future the chief constable should be the tenant of those houses, that the constables should occupy them as servants, that the chief constable should pay all rent, rates & taxes, & that a deduction should be made in respect thereof from the men's pay. Deft. knew of, & made no demur to, this arrangement, but no express notice to determine his tenancy was given. From 1912 onwards the demands for rent were sent to deft., addressed to the county authority. These deft. took to the police office, received the full amount due, & paid it at the estate office of the landlord, being given a receipt acknowledging payment by the county authority, which receipt he sent to the county treasurer. No demands for rates & taxes were made to deft. This course of business continued for fourteen years, deft. continuing to occupy the house & his name remaining on the estate books as tenant. There was no written surrender or assignment of the tenancy:—Held: (1) there was evidence from which the inferences of fact could be drawn that in 1912 deft. agreed with the landlord that he would forthwith surrender his tenancy, that the landlord agreed with deft. to accept the surrender & accept the chief constable as his tenant, & that the deft. would in future occupy the house as a servant of the chief constable & not as a tenant, & on those facts there had been a surrender of the tenancy by operation of law; (2) deft. was in the circumstances estopped from denying that he had surrendered or assigned the tenancy.—METCALFE v. BOYCE, [1927] 1 K. 6838a. Performance of covenants between giving notice & expiry of notice—Validity.]—By a lease dated Dec. 31, 1925, pltf. demised certain buildings to defts. for a term of years at a yearly rent. The lease contained covenants by defts. that they would at all times during the term keep & at the expiration or sooner determination of the lease yield up the demised promises in substantial repair. The lease contained a proviso that if defts. should desire to determine the lease at the expiration of the first five or ten years of the lease & should give to the lessor six calendar months' notice in writing of such desire, & should, up to the time of such determination, perform & observe the covenants on their part, then immediately on the expiration of such five or ten years, as the case might be, the demise & everything therein contained should cease & be void, but without prejudice to the remedies of either party against the other in respect of an antecedent breach of covenant. On Aug. 17, 1929, defts. served pltf. with a notice in writing to determine the lease on Feb. 28,

The landlords having failed to comply with their obligation under Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), s. 1, to keep the cottage reasonably fit for habitation, a closing order was made in 1930 under the Act. In an action by the landlords for possession deft. counterclaimed for damages for loss of her tenancy & the county ct. judge gave her £25 damages : —Held : when the tenancy commenced in 1917, it could not have been within the contemplation of either the landlords or the tenant that in 1930 the tenant would have under the Rent Restriction Acts security of tenure which would prevent the landlords from determining the tenancy by a week's notice to quit ; the question of damages must therefore be considered without regard to the Rent Restriction Acts, & as the tenant had been given more than a week to vacate the premises she could recover no damages.—JOHN WATERER SONS & CRISP, LTD. v. HUGGINS (1931), 47 T. 7028a. Operation of Acts—In rem.]—Certain huts built by H.M. Office of Works in 1915 for munition workers became vacant in 1923. They were subsequently let to tenants. In 1928 the Crown sold the property to the W. Estates, Ltd., who leased the same to pltf. The rental value of the premises brought them within Rent Restrictions Act. Pltf. sought possession of the premises occupied by the two defts., whose tenancies commenced from Oct. 1924. The county ct. judge dismissed the claim, holding that the premises were controlled. Pltf. appealed. The case was argued on the footing that the Acts did not bind the Crown. It was also admitted that the Crown had vacant possession after July 31, 1923 :—Held : both appeals must be allowed. The Crown was not bound by Rent Restrictions Acts, otherwise there was no necessity for 1920 Act, s. 12 (10). 7063a. Separate use of part as business premises—Other part sub-let.]—A house & shop were let to a tenant in 1900. The house consisted of two rooms in the basement, a shop & parlour on the ground floor, two rooms on the first floor & two rooms on the second floor. The tenant originally carried on a tailor's business in the shop & resided in the house with his family. Subsequently he ceased to carry on the tailor's business & his daughter carried on a drapery business on the ground floor, & his son carried on a betting business on the first floor. In 1927 the tenant moved to another house where he resided with his family ; he then sub-let the two rooms in the basement to one sub-tenant as a residence, and the two rooms on the second floor to another sub-tenant as a residence. The landlord served notice to quit upon the tenant, & then commenced proceedings in the county ct. to recover possession of the premises. The tenant relied upon the protection given by Rent Restriction Acts. The county ct. judge found as a fact that the ground floor & the first floor constituted business premises, & that the tenant had sub-let the remainder of the premises & so parted with possession of them. He accordingly held that the tenant was not entitled to the protection of Rent Restriction Acts & gave judgment for the landlord for possession :—Held : an order could be made for the recovery by the landlord of possession of the whole of the premises, notwithstanding that the basement & second floor had been sub-let to two tenants as residences, those sub-tenants being protected by 1920 Act, s. 5 (5) & s. 15 (3), & becoming tenants of the landlord.—HASKINS v. LEWIS, [1931] 2 K. The house & the shop had separate entrances from the street, but there was internal communication between them. The landlord having brought an action of removing from the shop :—Held : the unit of location was a complex one consisting in part of a dwelling-house & in part of a shop, the latter was not part of the dwelling-house, & accordingly Increase of Rent & Mortage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920, did not apply to it ; & decree of removing granted.—M'CLYMONTS TRUSTEES v. ROSS, [1929] S. Subsequently the Union sub-let one of the rooms to a shoemaker, who used the room solely for the purposes of his trade. Pltf. obtained a decree in ejectment against the Union & recovered possession of the room occupied by them. He then brought ejectment proceedings against the sub-tenant in respect of the room occupied by him. The sub-tenant relied on Increase of Rent & Mtge. Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1923:—Held: deft. was protected by the Act, as, whether the Union was using the rooms "for business, trade, or professional purposes" or not, pltf. was the "landlord" of the room & deft. the "tenant," & the latter used the room for business premises.—O'BRIEN v. WALLACE, [1932] I. house, the county ct. judge found that deft. was not in actual occupation of the house at the material time & that he did not retain possession within Rent Restriction Acts by the occupation of his wife's or his own relations, since the purpose of that occupation was not to preserve the house as a residence for himself. The county ct. judge accordingly made an order for possession of the house, & this order was affirmed by the Div. Ct. On appeal:—Held: the appeal should be dismissed on the ground (per SCRUTTON & SLESSER, L.JJ.) the fundamental principle of the Rent Restriction Acts being to protect a tenant who is residing in a house, a tenant, to be entitled to the protection of the Acts, must be in personal occupation or actual possession of the premises in respect of which he seeks that protection, & (per GREER, L.J.) the findings of the county ct. judge involved that deft. had sub-let the house & so was, by virtue of 1923 Act, s. 4 (h), precluded from claiming to retain possession.

(2) In my view Collis v. Flower, No. 7105, was wrong, for the reasons that I have been stating. The common law tenancy was terminated. The exor. had a common law tenancy, & it was terminated by notice to quit. He did not remain in occupation of the house, &, in my view, the original tenant having no right, as we have now decided, to dispose of the property by will, had no right to give any statutory right to the exor., & the exor., who had not lived in the house, could not claim to be a statutory tenant. In my view, therefore, Collis v. Flower, No. 7105, is no longer an authority.

The administrator case stands on a different footing, because one has to look in all these cases to see what the facts were. The administrator case is the case of Mellows v. Low, No. 7097. There the facts were different. The original tenant was a weekly tenant. It was a common law tenancy, & during her tenancy she died intestate. Consequently, whatever rights she had in her common law tenancy remained to her representatives in an intestacy. No notice to quit was ever given. Consequently the common law tenancy remained. Then the landlord claimed that on the death of the tenant intestate, with no member of her family residing in the house, the tenancy lapsed. It was held that the administratrix was a person who derived title under the original tenant, &, consequently, that the residence could not be interfered with. The point of that case which renders it a right decision is that no notice to quit the common law tenancy had ever been given. The common law tenancy, therefore, remained, & it remained in the person who at common law was entitled to it, & her tenancy had never been terminated. Consequently Mellows v. Low, No. 7097, on the facts, is right, but if notice to terminate the common law tenancy had been given the ct. could not, in my opinion, have said, unless the matter could be brought within the very curious clause about intestacy to which I have referred, that such an administratrix not being in possession is entitled to be protected by the Act (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—SKINNER v. GEARY, [1931] 2 K. When he died deft.'s father owed six months' rent to the landlord of the house:—Held: deft. was a statutory tenant of the premises, & had to observe all the terms & conditions of the contract of tenancy which her father had originally held, but her statutory tenancy had begun with her, & she was not liable to pay the arrears of rent owing by her father at the time of his death, they being a liability which had been incurred by a preceding tenant.—TICKNER v. CLIFTON, [1929] 1 K. sd. Widow or member of deceased tenant's family.]—Pltf. was the owner of a dwelling-house subject to Increase of Rent & Mtge. Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920. The premises had been let as a weekly tenancy, in or about 1923, to N., who was then in pltf.'s employment, at the rent of 5*s.* per week. N. died intestate in June, 1926, leaving deft. his widow, who up to the time of his death resided with him. On the death of her husband, deft. remained in occupation & entered into legal possession of the house under Increase of Rent, etc. (Restrictions) Act, 1920, s. 12 (1) (g). Deft. married again in Mar. 1928, & her second husband & his children came to reside in the house occupied by her. The landlord instituted ejectment proceedings against deft., who claimed the protection of Increase of Rent (Restrictions) Acts. Increase of Rent & Mtge. Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920, s. 12 (1) (g), provides that "the expression tenant includes the widow of a tenant dying intestate who was residing with him at the time of his death":—Held: the widow acquired a vested interest as tenant, & there was nothing in Increase of Rent & Mtge. 7145a. What amounts to increase.]—By a local Act, the rates in S. were consolidated & became a comprehensive borough rate. In May 1927, by virtue of the Act, which provided that in certain cases owners might be rated instead of occupiers, the city council passed a resolution transferring the liability for the rate as regards premises of which the ratable value did not exceed £10. The resolution took effect on Oct. 5, 1927. The rate, which the owners became liable to pay, was calculated on the basis of nine-tenths of the amount in the pound of the full consolidated rate previously payable by the occupier. The landlords of certain premises of a ratable value not exceeding £10 claimed that they were entitled to increase the rent of one of their tenants, under 1920 Act, by the amount of the full consolidated rate previously payable by the tenant:—Held: under sect. 2 (1) (b), the landlords were entitled to increase the rent, as there had been an increase in the amount of the rates for the time being payable by the landlords over the corresponding amount paid by them in the period specified by the sect.; but the amount of the permitted increase was an amount equivalent to nine-tenths of the full consolidated rate, & not the full amount of that rate.—HODGKINSON v. HEWITT (1928), 139 L. Subsequently the tenant of one part became tenant of the whole house at 17*s.* a week, & the landlord gave him notice to increase the rent under 1920 Act, s. 3 (2). Resp. having become tenant of the whole house, desired to sublet the lower part, as had been done previously, & he sublet to applt. at a rent of half the whole rent resp. himself paid for the whole house, namely, 8*s.* 6*d.* plus half the permitted increase. Applt. contended that the 8*s.* 6*d.* a week was the standard rent of the part he occupied, & that as no notice was served upon him of the permitted increase he was not liable to pay any more. Resp. sued for possession on the ground of non-payment of rent & rates in respect of the sub-tenancy. The county ct. judge gave judgment for resp. as pltf. Deft.

7108 i. "Separate" — Whether physically separate—Or partitioned off.]—Pltf., the owner of a house consisting of four floors & a basement, erected in each of the back rooms on the first & second floors a partition, which converted each large back room into two rooms. He put electric fittings in each floor, & did other work in connection with the gas & water supply, & let portion of the house to deft., describing it in the agreement as "consisting of a flat of three rooms & front basement on parlour floor." It had not a separate bath or separate sanitary accommodation, & there was no physical separation of it, as a residence, from the rest of the house:—Held: (1) the dwelling-house had not been "bonâ fide reconstructed by way of conversion into two or more separate & self-contained flats" within Rent & Mtge. Restrictions Act, 1923 (No. 19 of 1923). The rent being in arrear, pltf. served notice to quit on deft., & instituted ejectment proceedings:—Held: (2) the letting was a new letting of portion of altered premises, so as to entitle pltf. to charge a rent without regard to the standard rent of the whole house; (3) deft.'s claim for apportionment of the rent must be dismissed; (4) pltf. was entitled to an order for possession, the ct. granting a stay for a limited period, the order for possession not to issue if the rent was paid within that period.—BOYLE v. FITZSIMONS, [1926] I. 7181a. Decision of county court judge—Right of appeal to High Court.]—Landlords served on one of their tenants a notice of increase of rent, purporting to increase his rent on account of their liability for repairs & other grounds. The tenant ultimately disputed the increase on the ground of repairs only. The landlords applied to the county ct. under 1920 Act, s. 2 (6), to determine the question whether the notice of increase was valid, whether they were responsible for the whole of the repairs, &, if not for what proportion they were responsible :—Held : although questions of law were involved in the matters submitted, the terms of the Act made the decision of the county ct. judge final, & no appeal lay from it.—ELVINGTON TENANTS, LTD. v. HATTON (1928), 139 L. The term of years for which the lease was granted expired in 1924, but the lessee continued to remain in possession :—Held : the lessee was not entitled to the protection of Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1923, as he had broken one of the conditions of his tenancy by allowing himself to be adjudicated bkpt., &, therefore, he was no longer entitled to possession, even as a statutory tenant.—Re DREW, [1929] I. 7318b. —— —— ——.]—On an application for possession of a cottage made before justices under Small Tenements Recovery Act, 1838 (c. 74), it was proved that M. worked for C. at certain gas works from Apr. 1920, till Jan. 1921. Adjoining the gas works was a cottage, the property of C., which was let to M. at the commencement & in consequence of his employment. In Jan. 1921, on the termination of his employment, M. "received notice to quit the cottage, & was asked to pay a certain sum for rent. He applied to the county ct. & the rent was settled by the county ct. judge at 5*s.* per week." M. paid this rent up to Sept. 8, 1928. On June 1, 1928, C. having sold the gas works, including the cottage, to a limited liability co., conveyed the same to the co. On Sept. 22, 1928, the co. served a notice to quit on M., who subsequently tendered the rent due from Sept. 8 to 22, which was refused. On Oct. 13, 1928, the statutory notice under the Act of 1838 was served by the co. on M. The cottage was reasonably required by the co. as a residence for a man engaged in their whole-time employment at the gas works. The existence of alternative accommodation was not proved by the landlord. The justices found that no new tenancy had been created & that there was no obligation on the co. to prove alternative accommodation. Accordingly they ordered that a warrant of ejectment should issue :—Held : at the time ejectment was sought the cottage was not let to applt. in consequence of his employment, the tenancy then being held under an entirely new contract, & that there were no materials on which the justices could find that no new tenancy had been created. Accordingly, as resp. had not proved the existence of alternative accommodation, the order that a warrant of ejectment should issue must be quashed.—MURTON v. ALDIS (1929), 141 L. T. 168 ; 93 J. 7336a. Duty of judge to consider jurisdiction to make order for recovery.]—(1) Where, in an action in the county ct. to recover possession of a dwelling-house, the evidence is sufficient to put the judge upon inquiry whether the house is one to which the Rent (Restrictions) Rules, 1920, to inquire & determine whether the house is within the Act &, if it is, to decide whether the Act permits him, & whether it is reasonable, to make an order or give judgment for the recovery of possession thereof.

(2) The Div. Ct. thought that as no one had expressly mentioned the Rent (Restrictions) Act in the county ct. they ought not to consider its effect. I do not agree with that decision. In my opinion the Act imposes upon the county ct. judge the duty of deciding whether the property comes within its provisions &, if it does, whether he should make or refuse an order for possession (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—SALTER v. LASK, [1924] 1 K. 7336c. —— ——.]—(1) The tenant of a dwelling-house within the scope of the Rent Restrictions Acts sub-let three rooms forming a part thereof, & early in 1929 came into possession of that part. On Lady Day, 1929, he again sub-let the same three rooms to a sub-tenant, & later determined the contractual tenancy so created by a notice to quit. In an action brought by him to recover possession of the three rooms deft. claimed that his tenancy had become a statutory one, & relied on sect. 2 (1) of 1923 Act. Pltf. contended that when he came into possession of the whole house in 1929, the whole house thereby became decontrolled. He also contended that because of the wording of the first proviso to sect. 2 (1) & of the fact that the Act has been held to operate in rem, the part sub-let to deft. was not part of a dwelling-house to which the principal Act applied :—Held : the first proviso to sect. 2 (1) of 1923 Act applied ; the dwelling-house let to deft. was not decontrolled ; & that pltf. was not entitled to an order for possession.

(2) Deft. had not raised the point on which he now relied in the county ct. :—Held : the general rule that it is a condition precedent to the raising by an applt. of a point of law on appeal from a county ct. that that point should have been raised at the trial of the action does not apply to cases within r. 18 of Increase of Rent & Mtge. Interest (Re-rent was served in 1920, subsequent to J. C. going into occupation. F. C. & J. C. were partners in business, & the rent of the dwelling-house was paid from the office of their firm, & was debited in the firm's accounts to J. C.'s salary or to his share of the profits. J. C. was rated in respect of the occupation of the dwelling-house. Both F. C. & J. C. stated in evidence that there was no assignment of the tenancy from F. C. to J. C. The landlord brought an action in the Circuit Court against both F. C. & J. C. to recover possession :—Held : the proper inference from the evidence was that J. C. occupied the dwelling-house as tenant at will to his brother F. C. ; accordingly the proviso to sect. 4 (1) of the 1923 Act, applied ; it therefore followed that the landlord was not precluded from obtaining an order for possession against F. C. ; it further followed that, as the dwelling-house had been lawfully sublet to J. C. before proceedings were commenced, J. C. was entitled to retain possession under sect. 4 (2) of the 1923 Act, notwithstanding the judgment for recovery of possession against F. C.—SISK v. CROMIN, [1930] I. R. 98.—IR.

He afterwards claimed to recover possession from deft., on the ground that 1923 Act, s. 2 (1), applied so as to decontrol the premises :—Held : the possession by pltf. of the whole house at the passing of 1923 Act & up to the time of the letting to deft. (1) was not possession of the " dwelling-house " in question, (2) nor was it possession by him in the capacity of " landlord," & sect. 2 (1) did not apply so as to decontrol the premises.—COHEN v. GOLD, [1927] 1 K. In Nov. 1924, he sublet four of the rooms therein to D., who subsequently applied that the standard rent of his rooms should be fixed by an apportionment of the rent of the entire house :—Held : the opening words of the proviso to 1923 Act, s. 2 (1), were merely descriptive of the position at the time when the question of decontrol arose, & should be construed as " where part of a dwelling-house is or during the currency of this Act shall be lawfully sublet," & D.'s rooms were saved from decontrol by the proviso.—DOULIN v. PARCELL (1926), 136 L. 7352d. ———.]—(1) The expression " landlord " in 1923 Act, s. 2 (1), is not to be construed in the strict sense as requiring a tenant & a contract of tenancy, but it must be used either in the looser sense of " owner," or in the still looser sense of a person who at a later stage is going to appear as a landlord contesting with a tenant the terms of his tenancy. Neither in 1920 Act, nor in 1923 Act, is the word " landlord " used in its technical sense of a person between whom & the tenant a contractual relationship of landlord & tenant exists.

Where a person who is a " landlord " within 1923 Act, s. 2 (1), can prove either that he was in possession of the whole of the dwelling-house at the date of the passing of 1923 Act, or at any time since that date, 1920 Act ceases to apply to that dwelling-house & to every part of it. The whole house & every part of it is decontrolled, & a subsequent letting of the dwelling-house, or of any part of it, cannot revive control.

(2) The expression " the tenant " in 1923 Act, s. 2 (2), refers to the sitting tenant, i.e. the person who is the tenant at the time when the lease referred to in the sub-sect. is granted.

(3) Where a lessee at a rent less than two-thirds of the ratable value is in actual possession of the dwelling-house after July 31, 1923, the dwelling-house is thereby decontrolled, because, under 1920 Act, s. 12, the lessee must be treated as the landlord, & a subsequent sub-letting of certain rooms forming part of that dwelling-house does not revive control.—LLOYD v. COOK, GOUDGE v. BROUGHTON, SIMSON v. MIATT, BARTRAM v. BROWN, BARKER v. HUTSON, [1929] 1 K. S., B., were let to W. for a term of two years from Mar. 25, 1919, at a rent of £45 per annum, the tenancy to continue thereafter, but to be terminable by six months' notice in writing. On Sept. 16, 1921, the landlord gave W. six months' notice to determine the tenancy, which expired on Mar. 25, 1922, but W. continued to occupy the premises at a rent of £54 per annum after the notice expired. On May 7, 1926, W. died, having by his will appointed his wife his sole executrix & universal legatee. Mrs. W. did not go into physical possession of the premises before May 26, 1926, when she entered into an agreement to take the premises on a three years' tenancy at the same rent. On July 26, 1926, she assigned the benefit of the agreement to deft. On Dec. 5, 1927, pltfs. acquired the freehold of the premises, & on Jan. 5, 1928, gave notice to deft. terminating the tenancy at the expiration of the term. Deft., however, claimed to hold over under Rent & Mortgage Interest Restriction Acts, 1920 & 1923, & pltfs. brought these proceedings for possession, claiming that although the premises had been a dwelling-house within the Acts they had been decontrolled as a result of the agreement of May 26, 1926. On appeal from an order made by the county court judge for possession:—Held: (1) there was evidence before the county court judge to support his finding that W. became a contractual tenant at the increased rent after the termination of the tenancy agreement of Jan. 31, 1919; (2) Mrs. W. was consequently a contractual tenant at the date of the agreement of May 26, 1926; (3) the agreement of May 26, 1926, therefore operated to decontrol the premises. There is no reason for giving "the tenant" in 1923 Act, s. 2 (2), the limited meaning of statutory tenant.—ABBEY v. BARNSTYN, [1930] 1 K. B. 660; 99 L. J. K. B. 369; 142 L. T. 619; 94 J. to mean, that pltf. had agreed or permitted his portrait to be exhibited for the purpose of the advertisement of defts.' chocolate; that he had done so for gain & reward; that he had prostituted his reputation as an amateur golf player for advertising purposes; that he was seeking notoriety & gain by the means aforesaid; & that he had been guilty of conduct unworthy of his status as an amateur golfer." At the trial evidence was given by golfers to the effect that if an amateur golfer lent himself to a scheme for advertising, people might think he was not maintaining his amateur status, & that he might be called upon to resign his membership of any reputable club. 167c. —— ——.]—By rule 17 of the Rules of Racing of the Jockey Club: "The Stewards of the Jockey Club have power, at their discretion, to grant, & to withdraw, licences to officials, trainers, jockeys, & racecourses; to refuse to allow any person to act or continue as an authorised agent; to fix the dates on which all meetings shall be held; to make inquiry into & deal with any matters relating to racing, & to warn any person off Newmarket Heath; & to authorise the publication in the Racing Calendar of their decisions respecting any of the above matters." Pltf., who was a horse trainer, received from the stewards of the Jockey Club a trainer's licence to train horses to run under the Rules of Racing during the year 1930. The licence was expressed to be subject to conditions, condition 3 of which provided that a trainer's licence might be withdrawn or suspended by the stewards of the Jockey Club in their absolute discretion, & such withdrawal or suspension might be published in the Racing Calendar, the recognised organ of the Jockey Club, for any reason which might seem proper to them, & that the stewards should not be bound to state their reasons. Pltf. trained a horse which ran in a race at a meeting held under the Rules of the Jockey Club. After the race the acting stewards of the meeting ordered an examination of the horse, & on receiving a report of that examination they referred the matter to the stewards of the Jockey Club. The stewards held an inquiry, & their decision was communicated by the Club's agents to the Press agencies & the Times, & was published by them. It was also published in the Racing Calendar. The decision contained the following statement: "The stewards of the Jockey Club . . . after further investigation, satisfied themselves that a drug had been administered to the horse for the purpose of the race in question. They disqualified the horse for this race & for all future races under their rules & warned C. C. Chapman the trainer of the horse off Newmarket Heath." In an action by the trainer against the stewards, their agents & the Times Publishing Co., the proprietors of the Times, for libel, HORRIDGE, J., after holding that there was no evidence of malice, left questions to the jury which they answered to the effect that this statement was not true in the natural meaning of the words but meant that pltf. was a party to the actual doping of the horse, & they fixed the damages at £10,000, £3,000 & £3,000, in respect of the publication in the Racing Calendar, to the new agencies & in the Times respectively. Judgment was accordingly entered for £13,000 against the stewards & their agents for publication in the Racing Calendar & to the news agencies, & £3,000 against the stewards, their agents, & the Times Publishing Co. for publication in the Times. On appeal:—Held: (1) in finding that the words published were not true in their natural meaning, the jury must have meant that the statement, which was literally true, involved an untrue innuendo which was defamatory; (2) the publication of the decision of a domestic tribunal in the terms in which the tribunal bonâ fide embodied it, in the publication chosen by the parties as the means of communication between the tribunal & the section of the public interested, was privileged; (3) the publication in the Racing Calendar of the stewards' decision was therefore privileged, &, as pltf. had agreed to publication in that periodical of the stewards' decision, it was immaterial that the jury put a meaning on the words in which it was bonâ fide embodied by the stewards different from that which was intended by them; (4) HORRIDGE, J. was right in holding that there was no evidence of malice, & the action in regard to the privileged publication in the Racing Calendar therefore failed; (5) the publication to the news agencies & in the Times was not privileged, but the damages awarded both in respect of these publications as well as in respect of the publication in the Racing Calendar were excessive; (6) there must in regard to the claims in respect of the publication to the news agencies & in the Times be a new trial, which ought not in all the circumstances to be limited to the question of damages, but to go also to the question whether there had been a libel.

(7) Per SLESSER, L.J. As publication of the stewards' decision in the Racing Calendar was assented to by pltf. & the publication was in fact a true statement of their decision, the principle of volenti non fit injuria applied, & no claim for damages in respect of that publication would lie. The fact that the decision was published in such a way as to give rise to a defamatory innuendo was a risk which pltf. by consenting to a report of the decision being published in the Racing Calendar, had elected to run.

(8) Per ROMER, L.J. The privilege given by the common law to reports of proceedings before a ct. of justice open to the public does not extend to a proceeding before a domestic Pltf. was, & was known among her acquaintances as, the lawful wife of C. ; but defts. did not know this :—Held : the publication was capable of conveying a meaning defamatory of pltf. &, the jury having found that it conveyed to reasonably minded people an aspersion on her moral character, that she was entitled to damages.

It is impossible for the person publishing a statement which, to those who know certain facts, is capable of a defamatory meaning in regard to A., to defend himself by saying : "I never heard of A. & did not mean to injure him." 1045b. ——.]—In a libel action, where the words complained of are not of necessity defamatory, & the question of libel or no libel has been properly left to the jury, the verdict arrived at by them that the words were not defamatory must stand.

It is not true to say that a jury's verdict in these circumstances can never be assailed. A plain & obvious defamation incapable of any innocent explanation, if found by the jury to be non-libellous, would certainly be set aside (LORD BUCKMASTER).—LOCKHART v. HARRISON (1928), 139 L. 1446a. -.]—To constitute a communication made on a privileged occasion there must be a legal, moral, or social duty to make the communication, as well as an interest in the recipient to receive it, & the question, which is for the judge & not the jury, whether such a duty exists depends on the circumstances, the nature of the information, & the relation of the recipient & the informant.

One B., the foreign manager of a co. which carried on business abroad, but was in voluntary liquidation, wrote to deft., who was a director & was also the liquidator of the co. in England, a letter containing gross charges of immorality, drunkenness, & dishonesty on the part of pltf., who was the managing director of the co. abroad. Deft. wrote in answer that he had long suspected the pltf. of immorality, & asked B. whether he could obtain a sworn statement of the matters disclosed in his letter from the persons mentioned therein as his informants, adding that it might "even be necessary to bribe" them, & that he understood that one of them was "a woman of the lowest type on earth—a prostitute all her life"; that pltf.'s wife was an old friend of his, & that he would be unfair to an old friend if he did not place the facts before her, but that without a sworn statement he would not speak. 1500 viii. ——.]—The underlying principle on which is founded protection for a communication otherwise actionable as defamatory, is "the common convenience & welfare society." The communication is only protected when it is fairly warranted by some reasonable occasion or exigency, & when made in discharge of some public or private duty such as would be recognised by people of ordinary intelligence & moral principles, or is fairly made in the legitimate defence of a person's own interests. It is not sufficient that the person making the statement believes, honestly & not without some ground, that the duty or interest exists. There must, in fact, be such a duty or interest as, under all the circumstances, warrants the communication.—HALLS v. MITCHELL, [1928] 2 D. L. R. 97; [1928] S. C. R. 125.—CAN.

1654a. —— Report of decision of domestic tribunal.]—In my judgment any one who knows that a man has been convicted of larceny at a criminal trial before a ct. of competent jurisdiction is entitled to say, without being used for slander or libel, that that man has, in fact, been convicted. It seems to me that also in the case where a man submits to a domestic tribunal, any person is entitled to record the fact that that domestic tribunal decided against him. If it is a question relating to a school, & a boy is properly expelled by the competent authority, I think that any one can say, without being sued for slander or libel, that the boy was, in fact, expelled. The same thing would apply to expulsion from a club. When a man subjects himself to a domestic tribunal he must be in exactly the same position as regards complaining of a record of that domestic tribunal as every citizen who has to submit himself to the lawful tribunals of the country (Greer, L.J.).—Cookson v. Harewood, [1932] 2 K. Defts. did not plead justification or fair comment, but paid 20*s.* into ct. in respect of the alleged libel as sufficient damages; they made no payment into ct. in respect of the innuendo; & they gave notice under R. This line of cross-examination was objected to, but was allowed. Before the conclusion of the cross-examination the jury intervened with an intimation that they desired to find for the defts., which they then did without any summing up. On appeal:—Held: (1) the cross-examination was admissible as cross-examination to credit, but that if the incidents were denied by pltf. no further evidence could be called to rebut pltf.'s denials, & that the jury should have been told that while they were not bound to accept pltf.'s denials, those denials, though unaccepted, afforded no evidence that the incidents had taken place; (2) the cross-examination was not admissible to mitigate damages, & the jury ought to have been directed to this effect.—HOBBS v. TINLING, HOBBS v. NOTTINGHAM JOURNAL, [1929] 2 K. 322a vi. —— ——.]—Defts. sold an auto-truck, taking a lien agreement to secure the balance of the purchase price, which was duly registered. The owner having an accident, brought the truck to pltf., who made extensive repairs, & held the truck for the cost of the repairs. On the truck being taken for trial by an ostensible buyer, after the owner was in default under the lien agreement, it was seized by deft.'s bailiff under the lien agreement. In an action to recover the truck it was held that pltf. was entitled to hold the car subject to his lien :—Held : where the vendor had not taken possession & where there had been no default up to the time of repair, the purchaser had the right & duty to have the property repaired so as to in full. He then fell into arrear, but defts. allowed him to take the cabs out daily to ply for hire on condition that the cabs continued "in pawn" & were returned to the garage each night. Defts.' weekly accounts then debited B. with the amounts in arrear brought forward; credited the amount paid by B., which was sometimes a lump sum & sometimes the exact amount of the current week's bill; & carried forward the balance. B. then fell into arrear with his hire-purchase instalments, & pltfs. terminated the agreements & demanded the three cabs from debts., who claimed a lien for £113 18*s.* 3*d.* the balance of their general account for all five cabs due from B., but they also gave pltfs. full details of the charges for each of their three cabs. Pltfs., relying on their agreements, made no tender to defts., but commenced this action for detinue. Defts. then sought to appropriate the total sum received from B. to items for which they had no lien against pltfs., & to appropriate the total sum received from B. to items for which they had no lien against pltfs., & to appropriate the balance to pltfs.' three cabs, leaving £91 11*s.* 1*d.* unpaid, for which they claimed a lien as against the £113 18*s.* 3*d.* originally claimed:—Held: (1) a contractual limitation of authority not communicated to the repairer did not limit the implied authority derived from the hirer being allowed to possess & use the car, & defts. were entitled to a lien in respect of repairs executed by them; (2) the conditional agreement between B. & defts. that the cabs might be taken out daily to ply for hire, did not prevent the repairer's lien from continuing; (3) defts. had not in the circumstances lost their lien by demanding too large a sum at first, or by basing it partly on the wrong ground; that their attempted appropriations were too late; & that there must be an inquiry how much of the amount of the lien they claimed represented items for repairs to the three cabs.

A person claiming a lien must either claim it for a definite amount or give the owner particulars from which he himself can calculate the amount for which a lien is due. The owner must then, in the absence of express agreement, tender an amount covering the lien really existing. If he does not, unless excused, he has no answer to a claim of lien. He may be excused from tendering (a) if he has no knowledge, or means of knowledge, of the right amount; or (b) if the person claiming the lien for a wrong cause or amount makes it clear that he will not release the goods unless his full claim is satisfied, & that claim is wrongful. The fact that the claim is made for more than the right amount does not matter unless the claimant gives no particulars from which the right amount can be calculated, or makes it clear that he insists on the full amount of the right claimed (per CUR.).—ALBEMARLE SUPPLY CO., LTD. v. HIND & CO., [1928] 1 K. 322a vii. —— Acquiescence of vendor.] A motor car sold under a conditional sale agreement & lent by the buyer to a friend for his temporary use was damaged while in the latter's possession & left by him with a mechanic to be repaired. The agent of pltf., the vendor's assignee, saw the car in the mechanic's garage while it was yet unrepaired &, without questioning the authority of the borrower of the car to order the repairs, which were obviously necessary suffered it to remain there, merely asking the mechanic what the repairs would cost & how long it would take to make them, & requesting him to send in an account of his charges against the car:—Held: the agent had so conducted himself as to justify the mechanic in concluding that pltf. expected him to make the repairs, &, therefore, whatever was the extent of the borrower's authority to order them, pltf. could not be heard to say that the mechanic had no authority to make them; & the mechanic was, therefore, entitled to a lien for the repairs.—STERLING SECURITIES CORPN., LTD. v. HICKS MOTOR CO., LTD., [1928] 4 D. At the time of the seizure only $38.89 was owing by pltf. to C., & that sum was, by agreement between pltf. & C., not then payable. The alleged assignment to defts. was after this agreement. It was a general assignment of all earnings of a threshing machine used by C. in threshing pltf.'s grain:—Held: defts. had no legal right to make the entry & seizure; &, defts.' seizure being for $160, it was, at all events, for an excessive amount, & illegal.—SEMPLE v. SAWYER-MASSEY CO. ooo (p. 274) iv. ——— ———.]—Mechanics' Lien Act, R. S. O., 1927, s. 5, gives to one who erects a building a lien on the owner's estate or interest in the "building & appurtenances & the land occupied thereby or enjoyed therewith." It is a question of fact in each case what land this includes, to be determined from all the circumstances. The fact that an owner has acquired land in one connected parcel by a single conveyance & has included it all in one or more mtges. does not necessarily imply that those entitled to liens in connection with a building erected on a part of it are entitled to place their liens on the whole parcel. In the case in question it was held that the land to be enjoyed with the building erected for the owner had been severed from the rest of the property by the owner & leased, to be occupied & enjoyed by the lessee, separate from the rest of the owner's property, & this leased land, & including, with regard to the lien, one-half of the wall of an adjoining building, which wall was used as a wall of the new building, was the only land upon which the lien was acquired, & therefore the claim of lien, which was filed against it only, was properly so confined, the contention of applt., second mtgee. of all the land & purchaser thereof at a sale made under power of sale in the first mtge., that the lien should have been filed against all the land, being rejected.—STEEDMAN v. SPARKS & MCKAY & LORD, STEEDMAN v. DOMINION LUMBER & COAL CO., LTD. & LORD, [1930] S. 139a. —— Arbitration condition precedent.]—The Crown requisitioned appcts.' ship under a charterparty, which provided that any dispute under the charter should be referred to arbn. under Arbn. Act, 1889 (c. 49), & which concluded as follows: "& it is further mutually agreed that such arbn. shall be a condition precedent to the commencement of any action at law." In July, 1917, the ship was lost, but appcts. did not proceed to arbn. until Dec. 1923. The Crown contended that, as the arbn. was not commenced within six years of the loss, the claim was barred by Stat. Limitations, 1623 (c. 16):—Held: under the arbn. clause no cause of action arose until the award was made, & time did not run until the making of the award, & the claim was not barred.—BOARD OF TRADE v. CAYZER, IRVINE & Co., [1927] A. 154a. Date of document—Bill treated as promissory note.]—On Mar. 23, 1920, the branch of British Trade Corpn., Ltd., at Batoum, drew a document in the following form: "At sight pay this sole exchange to the order of Mr. B. L. Mailoff the sum of one thousand pounds sterling value received which place to account No. 2." The document was signed "For British Trade Corpn." by the manager & account, & it was addressed at the foot "To the British Trade Corpn., 13 Austin Friars, London, E.C." By successive indorsements pltf. became the holder, & on Dec. 20, 1923, his agents presented the document at the London offices of the Corpn. Payment was refused, as it was required that the indorsements should have a banker's certification. On Nov. 23, 1926, a special resolution was passed for the voluntary winding up of the corpn. in connection with an amalgamation with the Anglo-Austrian Bank, Ltd. On Apr. 6, 1931, pltf. sought to prove in the winding up for £1,000 in respect of the document, but the liquidator rejected the proof on the ground that it was barred by the Statute of Limitations, as more than six years had elapsed since the date of the document before the winding-up resolution. The holder took out a summons claiming to have his proof admitted & he elected to treat the document as a promissory note:—Held: the document when treated as a promissory note did not need to be presented for payment in order to render the maker liable, because, in order that a place of payment should be specified "in the body" of the note within Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 87 (1), it must be embodied in the actual terms of the contract for payment. Time therefore began to run under Stat. Limitations, as from date of the document, & it was barred before the date of winding-up resolution.—Re BRITISH TRADE CORPN., LTD., [1932] 2 Ch. 1; 101 L. J. 356a. —— Promise to pay directors' fees—By adoption of balance sheet including fees.]—Balance sheets including fees due to directors, & signed by directors pursuant to Cos. (Consolidation) Act, 1908 (c. 69), s. 113, are not acknowledgments of those fees within Lord Tenterden's Act.

After an order for the compulsory winding up of the co. the applicant put in a proof for £950 in respect of creditors' fees. The liquidator rejected the proof to the extent of £350, allowing only £600 on the ground that all directors' fees which had accrued due more than six years before the date of the winding-up order were barred by Stat. Limitations. The director's fees due to appct. appeared from balance sheets duly signed by two directors & passed by the co. Upon a summons taken out by the applicant asking that the decision of the liquidator rejecting his proof to the extent of £350, might be reversed, & that the proof might be allowed in the full sum of £950 :—Held : (1) a board of directors, acting as a board, & passing a resolution adopting a balance sheet which includes directors' fees, does not bind the co. to pay those fees ; (2) a balance sheet so adopted & signed by directors pursuant to Cos. (Consolidation) Act, 1908 (c. 69), s. 113, is not a written promise by the co. or its agents to pay the directors' fees.—Re Coliseum (Barrow), Ltd., [1930] 2 Ch. 44 ; 99 L. J. Ch. 423 ; 143 L. The last payment in respect of interest before the date on which the mtgee. became of unsound mind was made on Jan. 30, 1907. In Mar. 1907, the husband of the mtgee. accepted, on behalf of the mtgee., a further payment on account of interest. Since that payment no further payment of interest was made. On a summons for foreclosure issued in 1926 by the mtgee.:—Held : (1) the right to commence proceedings first accrued, at the latest, at the date fixed for the redemption of the mtge., which was a date earlier than that on which the mtgee. became of unsound mind; (2) the foreclosure proceedings must be dismissed, inasmuch as, in view of the express words of Real Property Limitation Act, 1837 (c. 28), a disability beginning after the date when the right to bring the action first accrued, or must be deemed to have first accrued, would not entitle the mtgee. to the protection given by Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), s. 3.—PURNELL v. ROCHE, [1927] 2 Ch. 142; 96 L. 1486a. Effect of purchase of freehold reversion on lessor's right of re-entry.]—In 1900 pltf.'s father became the yearly tenant of a cottage, which he thereupon allowed deft.'s husband to occupy rent free as tenant at will. In Feb 1919, pltf.'s father purchased the freehold of the cottage. In 1925 deft.'s husband died & she continued to occupy the cottage on the same terms. In 1928 pltf.'s father died, having by his will devised the cottage to pltf. In Oct. 1929, pltf. brought an action in the county ct. against deft. for possession of the cottage, in which a plea by deft. that the claim was statute barred was overruled, & judgment was given for pltf. On appeal :—Held : when pltf.'s father purchased the freehold of the cottage in 1919 his yearly tenancy merged in the freehold & the rights which deft.'s husband had acquired against him as yearly tenant under Real Property Limitation Acts, 1833 & 1874, were gone, &, as the new statutory period against him as freeholder under these Acts had not determined at the date when the action was brought, deft.'s plea failed & the judgment in favour of pltf. should be affirmed.—TAYLOR v. TWINBERROW, [1930] 2 K. 1568a. —— —— ——.]—Testatrix, who died in 1890, gave her residuary real & personal estate to two persons whom she appointed her exors. upon trust for sale & conversion, & out of the proceeds to set aside £2,000 upon trust to pay the income to L. during widowhood &, after L.'s death or marriage, to fall into residue & subject thereto gave the proceeds of sale of the residue to her six children in equal shares. L. died in 1916. An action was commenced in 1925 by persons interested in a share of residue against the personal representatives of the two exors., who were dead, claiming a declaration that certain sums of Consols & bank stock had been wrongfully expended or disposed of by or converted to the use of the exors., & an order that these sums should be replaced. Defts. alleged that these sums had been expended in 1894 in satisfying liabilities of testatrix, & pleaded the appropriate statute of limitation. The exors. had set aside sums to answer the £2,000 legacy in part, & on L.'s death payments of capital were from time to time made to the persons interested in remainder, the last payment being made in June, 1921. If the stock had been paid away in 1894, the statute of limitation afforded a good defence except in regard to the share of the £2,000 legacy, which only fell into possession in 1916 :—Held : (1) as the claim was against exors. holding on express trusts, it was not a claim to recover a legacy within Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), s. 8, & the statute of limitation applicable was Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 8, under which the period for which the statute had to run in order to afford a defence was only six years ; (2) the payments relied on, being payments in respect of the part of testatrix's estate accounted for, did not constitute an acknowledgment of liability in regard to that part which the exors. were said to have misapplied ; (3) the statute afforded a good defence in regard to the share of the £2,000 legacy also.—Re OLIVER, THEOBALD v. OLIVER, [1927] 2 Ch. 323 ; 96 L. PART VII. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.

1704 i. —— Unless inequitable to do so.]—Though the Stat. of Limitations by its terms does not operate directly upon equitable remedies, such remedies are barred in cts. of equity by analogy to the Statute. The analogy is found in the case of constructive trusts, where the equity is fastened upon the trustee not because he intended to become the fiduciary of property, but because of the character of his dealings & in spite of his intention to take the property for himself. But cts. of equity have refused to see any analogy when a person, intending to act in a capacity which is fiduciary, has received as & for the beneficial property of another, something which he is to hold, apply, or account for specifically for his benefit. Such a person is either an express trustee or, if that name does not in strictness belong to him, he stands in the same position as a direct or express trustee. Therefore, where pltf. entrusted the sale of her furniture to deft. & authorised him to receive the proceeds on her behalf, & where deft. received money from an insurance co. on account of a loss sustained by pltf. :-

thereafter the value of the shares increased enormously, & such large dividends were paid that by 1921 L. had received sufficient to pay off the capital of the loan & all interest in arrear. He died in 1923. Pltfs., who were entitled to the equity of redemption of the mtge., took out a summons claiming redemption, & also repayment of the excess of the amount of dividends received by L. or his exors. over & above the amount due under the mtge.:—Held: (1) equity ought not to deprive a mtgor. of his right to redeem if the debt had been or could be repaid, the security were still available, & the position of the mtgee. had not been altered to his prejudice by the delay; (2) the limit of twelve years applicable by Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), in the case of a mtge. of realty would not, by equitable principles, be extended so as to support a plea of delay & laches & be made applicable to a mtge. of personalty.—WELD v. PETRE, [1929] 1 Ch. 33; 97 L. 1819b. —— ——.]—Since the Judicature Acts the equitable principle that active & fraudulent concealment on the part of deft. constitutes a good reply to Stat. In 1921 deft. sold pltf. plum trees warranted as "Purple Pershore." Pltf. some years afterwards, finding that the trees were not "Purple Pershore," brought an action in 1928 claiming damages for breach of warranty. Deft. denied the breach & pleaded the Stat. deft. was under an obligation to account specifically for the money, the receipt of which was not intended to create a mere debt; &, therefore, the Stat. of Limitations did not apply to an action to recover such sums; but where pltf. was entitled to payment of a sum of money from a person in Germany & authorised deft. to obtain such money & pay it to her, the transaction which the parties performed to enable deft. to acquire such money showed that he was not expected to account specifically for the money he received or the goods into which it was transformed or the proceeds of these goods, & this cause of action was subject to the Stat. of Limitations.—COHEN v. COHEN (1929), 42 C. Between the date of the issue of the writ & the application to amend, Stat. Limitations had barred the remedy, & a judge at chambers had given pltf. unconditional leave to amend the writ as of the date of its issue :—Held : pltf. ought not to be allowed to make such amendment, as it would take away from deft. a defence which had already accrued to him by virtue of the statute, & would change the substantial rights of the parties (1889), 61 L. 69a. Resolutions contravening Trade Disputes & Trade Unions Act, 1927 (c. 22)—Duty of local authority.]—Prior to above Act various committees of a local authority passed resolutions, which were confirmed by the council, to the effect that certain of their employees be required to become members of one of the trade unions in the resolutions referred to. By above Act it was provided that it should not be lawful for any local or other public authority to make it a condition of the employment, or continuance in employment, of any person that he should or should not be a member of a trade union ; & that any such condition should be void. Shortly after the passing of above Act instructions were given by a committee that only men belonging to a specified trade union should be employed in respect of certain casual labour ; & an employee, who was dismissed accordingly, obtained a declaration in the county court that his dismissal was illegal. A member of the council thereupon brought forward a motion having for its object that instructions should be given that the resolutions of the committees should cease to be operative ; but the motion was defeated :—Held : in the circumstances the ct. should declare that it was not lawful for the local authority to require any person, as a condition of employment or continuance in employment, to become or to be a member of a trade union ; Semble : it was not obligatory on the local authority upon the passing of the Act, to resolve that the resolutions of the committees were no longer to have effect.—A.-G. v. BIRKENHEAD CORPN. Part VI.—Jurisdiction in Lunacy.

529a. Jurisdiction to direct settlement of lunatic's property—Change of circumstances—Causing party to "suffer an injustice"—Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 171 (1).]—A lunatic not so found had been of unsound mind since 1882. She was a spinster aged eighty-one, & was possessed of personal property of the value of £2,000. From the time when she became of unsound mind she had lived under the care of an uncle & aunt, who had provided £2,076 towards her maintenance. The uncle died in 1885 & the aunt in 1907. By the will of the latter an annuity of £300 was bequeathed for the support of the lunatic. Upon the death of the aunt a sister of the lunatic was appointed receiver of her estate & acted until 1920, when she was relieved & a sister of appts. was appointed in her place. On her death in 1925 one of appts. was appointed & was receiver of the lunatic's estate. In 1880 before her reason left her the lunatic made a will, by which she bequeathed her property to her three sisters, all of whom were dead. On an application by appts., the residuary legatees under the aunt's will & second cousins of the lunatic, to the ct. to exercise the powers vested in it by sect. 171 of the above Act, & to direct a settlement to be made of the property of the lunatic :—Held : (1) the phrase "suffer an injustice" in sect. 171 (1) (c) must not be rigidly confined to a deprivation of a strict legal right, since that would stultify the operation of the sect. altogether, but it must in its context include the destruction of a clear moral claim, or even the disappointment of a thoroughly legitimate & well founded expectation, & in the circumstances appts. would "suffer an injustice" if the recent change in the law of intestacy were allowed to defeat the moral claim which they had to succeed to the estate of the lunatic, particularly in view of the continuous recognition, pecuniary & otherwise, which their side of the family had throughout shown of the obligations imposed on them by their kinship to the lunatic ; (2) there had been "a change of circumstances" within the sub-sect. since the execution by the lunatic of her will, by reason of the deaths of her three sisters to whom she had left her property ; (3) the case was one in which the ct. ought to exercise the discretion vested in it by sect. 171, by directing the receiver to execute a settlement of the property of the lunatic, to be approved by the judge in lunacy, which must be subject during the life of the lunatic to her right to be maintained out of the income, & if & so far as might be necessary out of the capital thereof, & subject also to any effective disposition by will or deed which the lunatic might make should she recover.—Re FREEMAN, [1927] 1 Ch. 479 ; 96 L. sb. To appoint person to convey—Property of lunatic sold in partition action.]—Where in a partition action the ct. has sold lands the property of a person of unsound mind not so found, a judge of the Ch. Div. exercising the jurisdiction conferred by Trustee Act, 1893, ss. 30, 31, 33, will appoint a person to convey the lands on behalf of the person of unsound mind.—KEATING v. KEATING, [1918] 1 I. trusts under which, after the death of the husband in 1915, the wife was entitled to the income for life with a power of appointment by deed or will among the issue of the marriage, & in default of appointment the funds were settled in trust for the two surviving children, now aged forty-six & forty-four years, who by inquisitions in 1902 & 1910 had been certified to be of unsound mind. In default of children who attained twenty-one or being daughters married, the wife's fund would have passed to the wife absolutely & the husband's fund to the husband, who had given all his property to his wife. By his will the wife's father, who died in 1885, gave his residuary real & personal estate upon trusts under which, in the events which had happened, his daughter, the wife, received the income for her life with a power of appointment by deed or will amongst her issue. In default of appointment the residue was settled on trusts under which the wife's two children were the only beneficiaries. Neither of the children had made a will &, apart from their mother & an aunt aged eighty-two, who was a spinster of unsound mind, their next of kin were second cousins, so that if they survived their mother & aunt, the Crown would take on their deaths under an intestacy. In these circumstances the wife took out summonses under the above sect., asking the ct. to direct settlements of the children's personal property under the marriage settlement & her father's will, which should include trusts in her favour absolutely after the death of each child or, alternatively, a general power of appointment by will so as to enable her to benefit friends & charities in which the family had always been interested. Before the applications were heard an arrangement was come to between the wife & the Crown by which, subject to the approval of the ct., the Crown consented to the wife's having a general power of appointment over the whole of the marriage settlement funds & over the father's residuary personal estate to the extent of £21,140, being the amount provided by the wife out of her own money as a maintenance fund for the children, upon the wife's abandoning all claim to the rest of her father's residuary estate, valued at about £285,000, & agreeing to supplement the income of the mantenance fund for the benefit of the children as theretofore :—Held : there was no ground justifying the ct. in making a settlement in respect of the wife's father's residuary estate, for no injustice would be suffered by the wife within sect. 171 (1) (c), if each child's share of the property was allowed to devolve as on an intestacy on his or her death, nor ought the trusts to be altered under sect. 171 (1) (b) ; but as the Crown did not oppose a settlement of the marriage settlement funds, orders would be made for settlements of the two children's shares so as to give the wife a general power of disposal over the funds. The provision of the maintenance fund of £21,400 did not afford a ground for directing settlements under sect. 171, but the wife would remain free to apply for recoupment under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 117, if so advised.

An application for a settlement was made by a widow, aged eighty-one years, & first cousin of the patient, who was sixty-two years of age. The only other near relatives of the patient were two first cousins, who were born in 1847 & 1850 respectively & who were & always had been resident in South America. Appct. stated that by reason of her own great age & that of her two cousins in South America any settlement which the ct. might be pleased to direct would not be of any material benefit to the patient's next of kin, unless its scope were extended to include children of any deceased first cousins of the patient's mother :—Held : there was no sufficient ground shown for directing a settlement to be made.

A patient had made a will in 1887, by which he had disposed of his residuary estate equally between his wife & children as a class. The wife had since died, as had also one of patient's sons, leaving issue. The patient's family were desirous that the deceased son's issue should be in no worse position than they would have been if their father had survived the patient :—Held : the case was a proper one for the exercise by the ct. of its discretion under sect. 171, by directing a settlement.

The property of a patient was derived under the will of his maternal grandfather. It had been settled by the patient's mother on her marriage with his father, whom she had divorced in 1877, & who had not since been heard of. The object of an application for a settlement was to exclude any claim by the father or his family :—Held : a settlement ought to be directed.

A patient had made a will in 1922, leaving the whole of his property to his wife, & in 1925 became of unsound mind. The will had been lost. On an application by the wife for a settlement, evidence was produced which satisfied the ct. as to the fact of the loss & as to the contents of the will :—Held : a settlement carrying out the terms of the will ought to be directed.—Re GREENE, Re WHITWORTH, Re E. 1378a. —— ——.]—On May 26, 1927, the receiver of a lunatic's estate, who had been authorised to continue the lunatic's business, obtained an order from the master directing him to distribute £1,800 amongst certain scheduled creditors of the business whose debts had been incurred subsequently to the date of the receivership order. The scheduled creditors were not parties to the order. On May 29, three days after the order was pronounced & before it was completed, the lunatic died. The order was subsequently completed on June 14. In July the exors. of the lunatic's will applied for an order for payment out of ct. to them of the fund representing the lunatic's residuary estate, & on July 28 the master refused to make the order except upon the terms of effect being given to the order of May 26. Subsequently to the making of this order an order was made for the administration of the lunatic's estate :—Held : (1) the order of May 26 was a mere direction to the receiver to make the payments in question which might have been varied or rescinded at any time by the master before it was finally completed, & it gave the creditors no equitable charge on the £1,800 thereby ordered to be distributed among them ; (2) the jurisdiction in lunacy ceased on the death of the lunatic, & the master had no jurisdiction to direct that effect should be given to the order of May 26 ; (3) the exors. were entitled to the fund in ct. without regard to the order of May 26, but inasmuch as an order had since been made for the administration of the lunatic's estate, the fund must be paid to the credit of the administration action.—Re WHEATER, [1928] Ch. 223 ; 97 L. The justices dismissed the summons. The wife appealed, & submitted that as one of the sitting justices was a member of the same trade union as the husband, that justice must be regarded as an interested person, & therefore the decision was null & void :— Held : it would be stretching the law to say that a magistrate could not sit if one of the parties happened to be a member of the same trade union as he in a matter in which no trade dispute was involved.—STEVENS v. STEVENS (1929), 93 J. 334a. ——— ——— " Before charge gone into."]—Deft., who was represented by a solr., was charged before a ct. of summary jurisdiction with an offence for which, if convicted, he would be liable to imprisonment for a term exceeding three months. He was not informed of his right to trial by a jury on appearing before the ct., before the charge was gone into, but he was so informed afterwards, when all the evidence had been heard, but before the ct. had announced their decision. Deft. protested twice by his solr. that he could not at that stage be put to this election, but on being informed by the chairman that if he did not elect, the case would be sent for trial, he stated by his solr. that he would be dealt with summarily. Deft. was then convicted & fined :—Held : the proceedings were a nullity as the giving of that information to the person charged on his appearing before the ct., " before the charge is gone into," in accordance with above sect. is a condition precedent to the validity of the subsequent proceedings. 500a. —— —— Not necessarily right of property.]—A local Act authorised the corpn. to make a bye-law prohibiting the playing of mechanical organs anywhere in the borough. In 1892 the corpn. made such a bye-law. The applt. was summoned for playing such an organ in the borough in breach of that bye-law on Apr. 7, 1928. He claimed a right so to play the organ by virtue of a licence which had been given to him by the lord of the manor, & contended that the jurisdiction of the justices was thereby ousted. The justices convicted him, & stated a case :—Held : the appeal must be allowed & the conviction quashed, because (a) the local Act expressly saved "all rights of a profitable or beneficial nature in, over or affecting the commons" that had been exercised before the passing of the Act; (b) the lord of the manor had, before 1890 & continuously until these proceedings, licensed the playing of such organs on the commons & had received between £300 & £400 annually in respect of such licence; (c) the applt. had played his organ on a part of the commons in pursuance of such a licence; & (d) the claim was not "impossible in law" & ousted the jurisdiction of the justices; Semble : there is no sufficient authority for the proposition that the right which alone will avail is the right of property. —ANDREWS v. CARLTON (1928), 93 J. The charges related to alleged offences on July 6 & 20, 1929. At the conclusion of the hearing as to the charges relating to July 6, the justices retired to their ante-room, & after they had decided to convict each of applts., sent for information as to any convictions for previous fishing offences by applts. for the purpose of considering the appropriate penalty for each applt. They were informed that two of applts. had been twice previously convicted, & one of them once previously convicted of such offences. They obtained this information from their clerk & did not see the police reports of applts. nor obtain information with regard to anything but these alleged convictions for fishing offences. The justices then returned into ct. & announced that applts. were convicted & each of them fined £5. Thereupon the charges relating to July 20 were commenced. In opening the case against applts., the solr. for the prosecution referred to the convictions which had just been recorded against each of applts. Objection was taken to this by applts.' solr., but the justices proceeded with the case & again convicted applts. & fined each of them £5 :—Held : all the convictions must be quashed. On the charges first heard, the justices, having decided to convict, should have returned into ct. & then publicly & openly in the presence of applts. made inquiries into any previous convictions there might be against them, in which case applts. would have had the opportunity of dealing with the matter. As to the charges subsequently heard the prosecuting solr. not only referred to the convictions that had just been recorded against applts., but to convictions which had been vitiated as already stated. The question was not whether substantial injustice had been done, but whether the rules had been observed. They had not been observed.—HASTINGS v. OSTLE (1930), 143 L. T. 707 ; 94 J. P. 209 ; 94 J. There was no evidence before the ct. that the sessions had been adjourned to any specified date. The purported alteration of sentence had taken place in the absence of the prisoner:—Held: it being at least doubtful whether the Chairman had any power to make the purported alteration, the original sentence of three years' penal servitude must be regarded as the sentence actually passed, &, as that sentence was not warranted in law, it must be reduced.—R. v. CASEY (1932), 23 Cr. 1380 i. Jurisdiction declined.]—A mandamus goes where a person having a jurisdiction to exercise declines to exercise it because of his decision on a preliminary question which does not go to the merits of the case as regards either the facts or the law. On the opening of an appeal from a conviction by a magistrate for a breach of sect. 176 (e) of the Excise Act, applt. objected that the Crown had not filed in the ct. appealed to a transcript of the evidence taken in the police ct., & had made no attempt to order that it should be so filed. The county ct. judge adjourned the hearing of the appeal & ordered the Crown to file the depositions ; the Crown having failed to do so, he allowed the appeal & quashed the conviction. The Crown then applied for a mandamus commanding the judge to enter continuances of the appeal, hear the charge & the witnesses on which the conviction was made, & make a decision thereon :—Held : the mandamus asked for should be granted.—R. v. POCHREBNY, [1930] 1 W. PART II. SECT. 1.

20 i. General rule.]—The definition of "prosecution" is not confined to proceedings before a magistrate or a criminal ct. The proceedings relating to the granting of sanction to prosecute, though they may not lead to imposition of fine or imprisonment, render the person charged liable to fine or imprisonment, &, therefore, come within the meaning of the term "prosecution."—RABINDRA NATH DAS v. JOGENDRA NATH DEB (1928), I. L. R. 56 Calc. 432.—IND.

33 ii. —— ——.]—A suit for damages for malicious prosecution cannot proceed when the proceeding alleged to give rise to the cause of action had ended in the dismissal of the complaint under Code of Criminal Proceedings, 1898, s. 203, & no process had been issued against pltf., & the mere fact that pltf. had cross-examined the witnesses for complainant cannot alter the character of the proceedings.—SULHAG CHAMAR v. NAND LAL SAHU (1928), I. L. R. 8 Pat. 285.—IND.

PART II. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.

40 iii. ——.]—In any country where, as in India, the prosecution is not private, an action for malicious prosecution, in the most literal sense of the word, cannot be raised against any private individual. But giving information to the authorities, which, naturally, leads to prosecution, is just the same thing.—NAGENDRA NATH RAY v. BASANTA DAS BAIRAGYA (1929), I. L. R. 57 Calc. 25.—IND.

F., who claimed to be the owner of the business, & the order of attachment was dissolved. A. F. then brought action for damages:—Held: the action was not maintainable either for maliciously suing out process, because of the absence of malice & the existence of reasonable & probable cause; or for trespass, because, even assuming A. F. was the owner of the goods, as to which the ct. was not satisfied, the seizure was under a valid attachment order.—FEINSTEIN v. PAULIN-

A warrant was issued & she was arrested, but upon being brought before a magistrate she was discharged. She then brought an action for malicious prosecution. Deft. admitted that he was not justified in swearing that she was wandering at large, but he said that he had acted in good faith & in order to prevent her, in her own interests, from disposing of her property. The judge, in directing the jury, told them that on that admission the proceedings must be deemed to have been taken without reasonable or probable cause, but that in determining whether they were taken maliciously they should consider whether the deft. was actuated by an honest desire to protect pltf.'s property in her own interest or by some indirect or improper motive: —Held: they were properly directed.—RAPLEY v. RAPLEY (1929), 30 S. She laid an information for criminal negligence causing bodily harm to her child. Applt., a Christian Turkish subject in the employment of resp. bank, was ordered by them to be transferred from their Stamboul branch to their branch at Mersina, a distant place in Turkish Asia Minor. He refused to go on the grounds: (a) that Mersina was not within the area of his employment; (b) that the order was unreasonable in the view of his ignorance of Turkish, & the hostile attitude of the Turkish civil authorities to him. He was thereupon dismissed without notice, & brought an action for wrongful dismissal:—Held: (1) on the facts, Mersina was within the area of applt.'s employment, & (2) as he did not suggest that compliance with the order would involve him in personal danger, the order was lawful & his disobedience to it a faute grave which under the contract justified his dismissal.—BOUZOUROU v. OTTOMAN BANK, [1930] A. He was dismissed without notice, & brought an action for wrongful dismissal:—Held: as the evidence established that resp.'s personal safety was in real danger in Constantinople, his flight was not a faute grave entitling applts. under the contract to dismiss him; & as his disability to perform his contract, whether in Constantinople or elsewhere, could not at the date of his dismissal be regarded as permanent, his offer to serve outside Turkey entitled him to maintain the action.—OTTOMAN BANK v. CHAKARIAN, [1930] A. Pltf. was convicted of driving the car to the common danger & was fined, & his driving licence was suspended for three months. Defts. terminated pltf.'s employment, on the ground that these facts constituted misconduct justifying dismissal. In an action for wrongful dismissal defts. also pleaded that, before the agreement was made, pltf. ought to have informed them that he had previously been convicted of being drunk when in charge of a motor car & been sentenced to imprisonment for driving it in a manner dangerous to the public:—Held: (1) there was no obligation on pltf. to disclose his previous conviction for a motoring offence; (2) the conviction during the currency of the agreement, even although pltf.'s licence was suspended, was not a ground for terminating the agreement, as pltf. could have got someone to drive the car.—HANDS v. SIMPSON, FAWCETT & CO., LTD. I agree that the duty in the servant to protect his master's property may involve the duty to report a fellow-servant whom he knows to be wrongfully dealing with that property. The servant owes a duty not to steal, but when he has stolen is there superadded a duty to confess that he has stolen? I am satisfied that to imply such a duty would be a departure from the well-established usage of mankind & would be to create obligations entirely outside the normal contemplation of the parties concerned. If a man agrees to raise his butler's wages, must the butler disclose that two years previously he received a secret commission from the wine merchant; &, if the master discovers it, can he, without dismissal or after the servant has left, avoid the agreement for the increase in salary & recover back the extra wages paid? If he gives his cook a month's wages in lieu of notice can he, on discovering that the cook has been pilfering the tea & sugar, claim the return of the month's wages? I think not. 769a. —— —— Meaning of "year to year."]—Applt. was by an agreement of service appointed by the resps. as a London manager for a period of six months from Dec. 1, 1928, at a named salary subject to renewal, & by clause 6 of the agreement it was provided that if at the expiration of six calendar months the governing director on behalf of the co. should in his sole & absolute discretion think fit the engagement of applt. should continue from year to year, & by sub-clause (c) it was provided that in the event of the agreement being extended the co. should as soon as practicable appoint applt. to be a director of the co. The six months from Dec. 1, 1928, would expire on May 31, 1929. Applt. was not appointed a director, & at the end of a year from the time when the six months expired the co., by their letter dated May 29, 1930, gave him six months' notice to terminate the agreement, whereupon applt. brought an action claiming damages, & the matter went to arbn. :—Held : (1) the "year to year" period began at the end of the trial period, i.e. at the end of the six months, when the governing director exercised his option & that the applt. was therefore entitled to one year's loss of salary ; & there were no materials on which any damages could be awarded for loss of salary as a director ; (2) applt. was not entitled to recover damages for loss of prestige &/or publicity.—Re GOLOMB & PORTER (WILLIAM) & Co., LTD.'S ARBITRATION (1931), 144 L. n i. —— Whether Wages Agreement part of contract.]—Applt. was verbally engaged in 1920 by resps., a railway co., as a machinist in their shops at the "going rate" of wages. In 1927 he received notice of dismissal on the ground of reduction of staff. He sued for wrongful dismissal, contending that a written agreement, entered into by resps. with a labour organisation & called Wages Agreement No. 4, formed part of his contract of employment, & that under it resps. could not dismiss him upon a reduction of staff, as they had retained men junior to him. The agreement had been applied to applt., who was not a member of the organisation, as to the amount of his wages, the notice given him, & in other respects ; resps. stated at the trial that they had applied the agreement to all the men employed in their shops :—Held : Wage Agreement No. 4 did not form part of the contract for the employment of applt., the fact that resps. had applied it to him being equally consistent with the view that they had done so as a matter of policy. Further, that having regard to the terms & nature of the agreement it did not by itself constitute a contract between any individual employee & his employer ; observance of its terms by an employer could not be enforced by action even by the organisation, but only by calling a strike.—YOUNG v. CANADIAN NORTHERN RY. 934a. Use distinguished from disclosure.]—The first of the two clauses upon which this action is brought is a covenant not to communicate or divulge information as to the customers or affairs of pltfs. acquired by deft. whilst in their employment ; that is, it is a covenant against certain definite overt acts. The statement of claim, however, asked for an injunction not merely against such acts as were expressly mentioned in the first clause, but further against using such information acquired by deft., & so on, which would include, I suppose, making use even in deft.'s own mind, possibly unconsciously, without divulging any fact to another person. No such injunction as this against using information could or ought to be granted unless there were an express agreement in terms to that effect, that is, against using such information, which there is not here, even if such an injunction could then be granted (JOYCE, J.).—HERBERT MORRIS, LTD. v. SAXELBY, [1915] 2 Ch. 57 ; 84 L.
